A large number of valuable presents were received, and after the reception Mr. and Mrs. Barker left for wedding tour. On their return they will reside in Brookline.

—One of Murray & Miles' teams made a great excitement on Washington street Wednesday afternoon. The horse was standing in front of the freight depot, with six barrels of flour in the wagon, when a train came along, and the horse bolted across the street, into Mrs. Hart's yard, tearing down three lengths of fence. It then went down Washington street, making a tour of Nonantum square, just missing a carriage containing Mrs. F. C. Hills. It then went to Mr. H. D. Bassett's barn, smashing a gate post as it entered the yard, and finally brought up at Daniel's stables, where it was caught. The wagon was badly wrecked and the flour was strewn all along the street.

—The congregation of Grace church had a most enjoyable gathering in the parish house on Monday night. It was almost an impromptu affair, hurriedly gotten up as a farewell reception to Miss Cousens, who was about leaving for Europe. In his opening address to the people assembled, Dr. Shinn referred to the fact that the evening was the 32nd anniversary of the formation of the parish, and also the anniversary of Mrs. Lindor's birthday. He then referred to the departure of Miss Cousens, who had sung in the choir for four years, and called forward the committee, Messrs. Hamblin and Flint, who presented her on behalf of the congregation with a purse of $100 in gold. After this there was a beautiful selection of songs, rendered by Miss Cousens and others. The evening closed with a bountiful supply of refreshments in the refectory.

—Mr. William Bedwell's sad death at South Framingham last week, has caused much sympathy for his family, who reside on Morse street. Mr. Bedwell lost his life while getting on a train of the Old Colony road, and that company generously assumed all the expenses of the funeral, furnishing the casket, etc. Mrs. Bedwell did not know of her husband's death until informed by Mr. W. B. Beal, who saw it in a morning paper. As she was totally overwhelmed by the sudden affliction and had no near friends in the city, Mr. Beal went forward the remains, found the trunk which had been left at a hotel in Marlboro, where Mr. Bedwell was stopping, and took charge of the funeral arrangements. It was a very sad affair, Mr. Bedwell having left home only a day or two before the accident in his usual health.

THE SCHOOL BOARD MEETING.

SHORT CRITICISM OF THE PUBLIC PROPERTY COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Board Wednesday evening, Mr. E. S. Converse presided and Mr. Fisher Ames was elected Secretary pro tem. Mayor Kimball and Messrs. Philbrick and Hagar were absent. The reading of the records was necessarily deferred.

There being no papers from the city council Mr. Walton brought forward the matter of an assistant teacher in West Newton. Mr. Warren, the master of the Pierce School, had in addition to his own class of forty, the supervision of four schools, numbering seven hundred pupils. It was very desirable that he have an assistant for one day in the week, at a cost not to exceed $12.00 a month. Mr. Warren's work was increased by Superintendent Emerson's illness.

Mr. Dickinson did not understand why the master had to superintend the other schools in the district. In explanation, Mr. Walton said that the master had to see the parents, to assist in the discipline of the schools, to adjust promotions and to arrange for study. It was not designed that he should superintend the Superintendent, but simply to supplement his work.

The Superintendent, said Mr. Ames, had often spoken of the need of help in Ward 3, where there were four school houses and seven hundred pupils. It was necessary for Mr. Warren to be in these several schools occasionally, but at present he could not do so as his own class of forty demanded all his time and attention.

In Ward 2 there are four grammar school masters, and a smaller number of pupils than in Ward 3. In Ward 6 the arrangement of schools is more central, yet an assistant is needed there also. The appointment was simply a temporary matter, until the Superintendent could recommend some plan. The order was passed.

Mr. Walton recommended Miss Martha A. Dix, who has studied in the Normal Art School and shown her capacities as a teacher in the Night School.

Dr. Shinn thought the selection of Miss Dix would be a wise one, as she has shown by her work in the Night School that she can teach other branches in addition to drawing.

Miss Dix was appointed and the matter of salary was referred to the Committee on Salaries, the amount not to exceed $12.00 a month.

The resignation of Capt. Brown as military instructor at the High School was received and accepted.

A communication from Mr. Laffie, the Trust Officer, was read, stating that the total number of complaints of truancy had been seventeen; of these six were once reported, two twice, and one five times. The latter had been sent from the city by his parents and would cause no more trouble. Six habitual truants were on probation, but none had been sentenced. To this communication was appended a letter from the Trust Officer at Lawrence, saying that no more could be received for six months at least.

Mr. Barton introduced an order directing the secretary to notify the City Council that there was imperative need of a new school building at Thompsonville. Mr. Barton said that the committee had acted on the matter in the spring, and that the City Council had purchased the land but had done nothing further. The present school house, the old Baptist chapel, was unfit for use, and the committee should call the attention of the City Council to the matter again. A small building only was needed, at a cost of $8000 or $7000.

Dr. Shinn remarked that in the matter of repairs the City Council was very negligent. The order was then passed.

A communication signed by Misses Worcester, Davis, Underhill and Johnson, the teachers of French in the High school, was read requesting a change in the French course, and the addition of several new text books in order to better meet the requirements for entrance; also requesting that four instead of three hours a week be given to French in the senior class.

A communication from Miss Worcester, the German teacher, was received of the same import as the letter concerning French. Both letters were referred to the committees on High School and text books.

Dr. Shinn presented a petition from Smith, Green & Markham of the High School, praying for the use of a room for the Lyceum. He moved the petition be granted, which was done, after the insertion of a proviso suggested by Mr. Walton and acquiesced in by Dr. Shinn, that some one of the teachers be present at the meetings.

Dr. Shinn reported that the committee on Evening Schools had found it impossible to use the Lincoln School for the Night School, as the room formerly used was used by the primary classes of the day school, and of course the desks were too small for adults. It had been suggested that several schools be formed in different sections of the city, but until it is evident that the different schools are desired, the committee ask permission to use Eliot School and remove thereto the gas fixtures now in the Lincoln building. The permission was granted.

A number of test books desired by teachers in the High School as reference books were ordered.

A request that A. J. Hawkes be allowed to attend the High School as a special student was referred to committee on High School.

BAD CONDITION OF SCHOOL HOUSES.

Mr. Frost said the condition of the school houses at the beginning of the school year was deplorable. Take the Prospect School for instance. When the master arrived on the opening morning this year he found the painters at work and doing their work badly too. Every thing was covered with paint. At Newton Highlands to-day the school building is all torn up. He had no doubt that other members could tell the same story about their districts, worse perhaps. The people blamed the school committee, but the public property committee was to blame. Another year he hoped the supervision would be earlier and more perfect. Therefore he moved that the secretary notify the City Council that the board had found the buildings in bad condition at the beginning of the year, and that it would like to know the reason and what is the remedy.

In reply to a question, Mr. Dickinson said that it was the duty of the city to keep the schools in repair, but if they neglected to do so it became the duty of the school board. It could not build a new school but could hire suitable rooms or repair buildings.

Mr. Stone remarked that he had requested the chairman of the public property committee to do some work, a number of times, and that it should have been finished long ago, but would take two weeks longer. In regard to the Thompsonville school, the chairman of the public property committee had requested several architects to draw plans of this two-room building.

Dr. Shinn said that he had, without the help of his imagination, made out the following schedule of the time it takes to get anything done in the Newton Schools: To put in a pane of glass, three months; to repair a furnace, three to six months; to put in a new fence post, three to five years; to put in a ventilator, five years. In order to obtain the ventilator it was necessary to consult with the teachers, the district committee, the janitor, the city engineer, and back again to the workman who did the work.

The resolution was then passed as presented by Mr. Frost.

The committee on schoolhouses had requested the public property committee to put a new window into the Lincoln school. They had not done so and the committee on schoolhouses was directed to have the windows put in at once.

Chairman Converse said that he had consented to serve as chairman, very reluctantly, and that other duties compelled him to resign. Several members deprecated his action, but Mr. Converse persisted. The board voted not to accept his resignation, however.

Dr. Shinn said trouble had been experienced by teachers in getting supplies. It was decided to have the teachers apply directly to the committee on supplies during the superintendent's illness.

A communication was read from Mr. Chandler of the High school, and in accordance with his suggestions, the matter of moving the Urbino Collection to the third story, and the arrangement of the philosophical cases in a better light, was referred to the high school committee, with power to act. The cost will be $30.

No decision has been reached in regard to a military instructor, and the high school committee has adjourned for a week without selecting an instructor.

Children's Dressmaker.

Mrs. M. B. Rich, so favorably known to most Newton ladies, has opened parlors at 99 Boylston street, Boston, and will receive orders for children's dresses. Her skill and taste are unexcelled, and she has a large number of Parisian models, from which orders may be taken.

CITY GOVERNMENT.

THE STREET RAILWAY HEARING BEFORE THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

The Board of Aldermen met Monday evening, Mayor Kimball presiding, and all the members present. The Street Railway hearing was the special attraction, and about a dozen more or less interested citizens appeared.

Mr. H. B. Parker, the president of the street railway company, was the first speaker, and explained briefly the plans of the road, the location asked for, and other matters, which had been given at greater length at former hearings.

Mr. E. H. Pierce spoke against the proposed turn out on Washington street, as being injurious to the street, and dangerous in a portion of the street where there was so much travel. He said the abutments on Walnut street were opposed to any turn out between Cabot street and the railroad, as there was scarcely another street in the city where there was so much travel. The proposed turn out was in front of the Claffin school and would take up the whole road bed. It was not absolutely necessary to have a turn out there, as it might be placed above Cabot street, or on the hill, where it would be less of a nuisance. As the plan of the road was not at hand to be shown at the meeting, he thought the hearing should be adjourned to another time, when the plan could be exhibited.

Mr. Wm. E. Webster said that if, as the President of the road had stated, this was only a formal hearing, there was not much use in his saying anything, but possibly he had exceeded the facts, and the matter was still open for discussion. Last year the subject was fully discussed, but he would simply oppose the location of a part of the road. The railroad company had asked for the whole earth at first, but the citizens wanted to save enough for a sidewalk at least, and a strong remonstrance had been presented, to which it had been objected that the signers were all heavy tax-payers, but he thought it was not wise, when the tax rate was $15.80 a thousand, to sneer at heavy tax-payers. They were a rather urgent necessity. He appeared to oppose a portion of the layout in Newton Centre, and as for the turn outs and tracks in Ward Two, the people of Newton Centre were willing to take their chances of getting over them. The location asked for was on Beacon street, between Walnut and Centre streets, and the street was not wide enough for railroad tracks. The residents believed in ample sidewalks and had built them, and outside of the walks were two rows of shade trees, which left only 27 feet for the road bed, including the gutters. The street was a popular thoroughfare and travelled at all times of the day. If a track was laid in the centre, it would be difficult for teams to pass, and if a double track was laid it would take up the whole street. Over in Brookline they thought a 150 foot street was not too wide for railroad tracks, and perhaps a grand street widening is expected here. Unless such a thing is contemplated, and it would prove very expensive. It is absurd to talk of locating tracks in a narrow street. With all due respect to the President of the company, he thought it required a good deal of cheek to ask for tracks in a 27 foot street, and one of the greatest thoroughfares in the city. The street was wide enough for all other purposes, and if widened at all, it would have to be widened simply for the railroad. He had a route to propose, which was free from the objections of the Beacon street route, and still would take people to the cemetery, of which so much had been said. Let the tracks be laid up Walnut to Homer street, which was only two minutes walk from the cemetery gate, and then it could pass up Homer to Centre, through Willow and Sumner to the railroad station. Homer street was widened a few years ago, and the residents there would welcome the road, as they would get some compensation from it. Homer street was not a great thoroughfare and a railroad would be a great convenience to the residents, whereas Beacon street people did not need it. The streets were wanted for all sorts of purposes, and not merely for railroad tracks. He was confident that the road would not be laid where it would do the least possible damage, and not where it would do the most. It should not be allowed to go through the most valuable streets, where was the highest taxed property, and where all the residents objected.

Mr. A. R. Mitchell said it was conceded that the board would grant a location for the tracks, and he did not oppose this, but he hoped the tracks would be placed where they would prove as little of a nuisance as possible. It had come to such a pass in most cities, that everything was run by corporations, and the streets seemed to be owned by them and not by the people. He hoped Newton would prove an exception, and that the city officials would show that the city had the first right to the streets. The turn out on Walnut street was very objectionable in the proposed location and ought to be placed as far up as the High School, where the cars would need to wait for the scholars, and where it would not be so much of a nuisance.

Mr. J. E. Gilman of Newtonville said that the proposed turn out was located in front of his property on Walnut street, and he protested against it. It was probably too late to protest against the location on Walnut street, but a turn out was certainly unnecessary so near the square, and all his neighbors were opposed to it. Higher up the street it would not be so much of a nuisance.

Alderman Pettie, who occupied the chair during the temporary absence of Mayor Kimball, asked Mr. Webster if teams could pass on either side of the tracks on Beacon street.

Mr. Webster replied that as the cars would take up at least six feet of the width of the road, this would leave only 10 and 1-2 feet for teams to pass on either side, a rather narrow space for a heavily laden wagon.

Alderman Ward asked why the walks were laid out so wide on Beacon street.

Mr. Webster replied that probably it was the object of the abutments to have plenty of room on the sidewalk, and they were none too wide for the convenience of foot passengers. Dr. Stearns, who had lived on the street for many years, represented the general feeling when he said that he would rather pay $100 a year than have a street railroad on Beacon street.

Mr. Mitchell said that if a 45 foot street was not wide enough for a railroad in Newton Centre, what would be thought of Washington street, a much more travelled thoroughfare than Beacon street, and which in places was less than 40 feet wide. Evidently Washington street would have to be widened and at a great expense.

Alderman Grant said he should like to hear how the residents of Washington street felt. There was a railroad already on the street in West Newton, and he would like to know if there were any complaints against it.

Mr. Wm. E. Sheldon said that as far as he knew, West Newton people had no complaints to make. They would welcome a new railroad, and they looked so well to their ways that they were able to walk in a narrow path, and to make a turn out if they met obstacles.

Mr. Mitchell said that from Newtonville square to Harvard street, Washington street was less than 27 feet wide from curb to curb, and with a street railway taking up six to seven feet of the road, drivers would have to be very sober, and their horses very gentle to avoid accidents. The streets should be widened before a location was given for a railroad.

Mr. J. T. Allen said that he had yet to hear of any complaints of the Waltham horse railroad in West Newton, and he had been there a number of years. All the people he knew on Washington street were enthusiastic over the prospect of having a street railway. We expect better tracks than the Waltham road had, and we hope to see the road built very soon.

Alderman Hollis asked to have the location read, which was done, the location being Washington street from Centre street to Charles River, Lower Falls, Walnut street from Washington to Beacon, Beacon to Centre, and Station street to the railway station.

At this point, no one else desiring to be heard, the hearing was closed.

Alderman Grant moved that the agreement with the street railway company be referred to the City Solicitor for examination, to see if all was correctly and properly drawn.

Alderman Nickerson said that he had no objection to the motion, but arrangements had already been made for such examination.

Alderman Pettie amended the order, by adding that the many suggestions and amendments that had been added to the agreement be also examined, so that the report on the whole thing at the next meeting, Oct. 3rd. The motion was passed. OCTOBER BUSINESS.

A communication was received from the Claffin Guards, asking that they be allowed the entire receipts from the Armory Hall, as their expenses had been largely increased by moving to the building. They also asked to be excused from rendering an account of the receipts and expenses since Jan. 1st, 1887, as the accounts had been left in a confused condition by a former commander of the company. Referred to the claims committee.

Residents and property owners asked that Eddy street be laid out and accepted as a public street.

Geo. M. Chase and others asked for a street lamp on Cherry street.

An order was passed, authorizing the city treasurer to dispose of 3-1-2 per cent water bonds to the amount of $65,000, the proceeds to be applied for the water construction account.

Street lamps were asked for on the private way from Fountain street to Lenox street, Ward 3, and on Cherry street between Henshaw street and Cherry street place.

The ward officers reported at the last meeting were appointed, with the exception of Mr. Downs, inspector in Ward 1, and Chas. W. Bassett and W. C. Applin in Ward 7, who had declined. E. O. Childs, A. W. R. Huff and Robert B. Edes were nominated to fill the vacancies, and the appointments were laid over for one week.

Residents of Hartford street, Ward 5, asked for concrete sidewalks.

Mayor Kimball read a bill which had been sent to the school board by the Lawrence Industrial School for $1,000. The school committee took exceptions to the bill being charged to the school appropriation. The matter was referred to the committee on claims.

John Joyce was granted a license to build a shed 50 by 20 on Thornton street, Ward 1, and W. Howes to enlarge his stable, 32 by 40 feet, on Church street, Ward 1.

M. Ellis & Co. were granted a license to move a building on Lexington street, Ward 4, some 300 feet northeasterly.

Wm. Sutton gave notice of his intention to build a dwelling house on Faxon street, Ward 1, 34 by 16 feet.

Residents and property owners asked that Putnam street from Temple to Morton streets be accepted as a public street, it being fully built and laid out 40 feet wide, to the approval of the City Engineer.

$700 was appropriated for the construction of a plank sidewalk for Hammond street, from Ward to Beacon street.

$5,000 FOR STREETS.

Alderman Nickerson asked for the passage of an order appropriating $5,000 for the use of the committee on Highways, to be charged to any unexpended balances, or to the tax list of 1888. He explained the order by saying that the committee had begun the improvements on Brighton street, and they had cost $15,000 more than was anticipated. River street had cost $500 more, and the other $3,000, the committee thought, could be wisely expended in crushing stone and in employing a few more men in the department, as now there were not enough to load teams fast enough to keep the horses at work, and it would be good economy to employ the men.

Alderman Ward asked how much had been expended on Brighton street. (Mr. Nickerson said $3,200.)

Mr. Ward said he was opposed to adding anything more to next year's tax list. There was already a large amount to add; the school house at Thompsonville would cost $5,000, among other things, and that would have to be charged to next year. The Highway committee knew at the beginning of the year how much they had to spend, and they ought to have kept inside their appropriation.

Alderman Nickerson said that the committee could get through on what they had, but they cannot finish the work already begun.

Alderman Pettie said the expenditures of the city had grown to be very large, but still it is difficult to do all that our constituents demand. The committee already had to bear a good deal of criticism in the local papers and elsewhere, because they did not do all that was asked of them. He had been told that he should conform to the wishes of his constituents; he favored low taxes, but he wished to satisfy his constituents, and the committee was in a tight place. The members of the Highway committee had voted an increase of 10 per cent to the public property committee, and a similar increase to the street lamp committee, and now it was hardly fair for members of those committees, who had been able to satisfy their constituents, to turn around and say that the Highway committee should not have a chance to satisfy their constituents. The work on Brighton street had cost more than was expected, because the abutments demanded more work than was contemplated. They had their grounds laid out elaborately, with landscape gardening, concrete walks, etc., and sent their expensive carriages out to drive, and they wanted the streets to correspond.

Alderman Grant moved that the order be postponed until the next meeting.

Alderman Pettie said he saw no objection, as the aldermen would meet before the council, and the motion passed.

NUMBERED STREETS.

Austin, Avon Place, Bacon, Beach, Bowen, Boyd, Brooks avenue, Carlton, Channing, Court, Emerson, Fayette, Gardner, Hull, Hamilton, Harvard, Hovey, Jefferson, Jewett, Lowell, Newtonville avenue, No. School, Orchard, Peabody, Pearl, Pond avenue, Rockland, St. James, Thornton, Walnut street and Park, Wales, Walnut Park, Walnut street from Crafts to Mill, Washington Park, Washington street, Waverley Place, Williams street.

THE COMMON COUNCIL.

The Common Council also met the same evening, President Coffin in the chair and all the members present.

Business from the board of aldermen was disposed of in concurrences, and some new business also introduced and after being acted upon, sent up to the board of aldermen.

Councilman Burr explained the order for paying J. Q. Henry and others $50 for expense incurred in looking up and perfecting the title to their property on Eldredge street, Ward 7. He said that the city had granted the land to these persons, and given them a warranty deed, without having any recorded title of the land. It had formerly belonged to the old Newton street railway company, which had been absorbed by the Cambridge Company, and at the time the city obtained the land, the Cambridge road was leased to the Union Company, and from this company the city bought the land. The Union Company being simply a lessor, could give no title to the land, and it had now ceased to exist. It was felt that the defect in the title should be remedied, and the matter had been laid before the city solicitor. It was found the counsel for the petitioners could do the work more advantageously than the city solicitor, as he was acquainted with all the facts, and he was told to go ahead, and send in his bill. The city was liable to make good its covenants in regard to the title and the bill was a fair one for the work.

The order was then passed, and after the usual routine business the Council adjourned.

NONANTUM.

—John M. Soars has moved into his new house on Faxon street.

—A branch of the British American Association is to be formed in this village.

—James Blue has returned from the beach and secured employment at the Nonantum mills.

—Mr. Edward Richardson has resigned his position as president of the Lowery Society of Christian Endeavor.

—Mr. Henry Copeland of Watertown has moved into the house formerly occupied by Robert Aitchinson on Rustic street.

—While Mr. Frank Boyle of this village was walking through the Boston and Lowell depot a week or more ago, he was run into by a truck belonging to the American Express, and has been unable to work since.

—George Bates, son of Henry and Elizabeth Bates, died at his home on Dalby street in this village Saturday, the 17th, aged 20 years. He has been suffering for several weeks from a complication of diseases. He was employed at the Silver Lake Mills, and the employees of that establishment contributed seventy-five dollars toward the funeral expenses, in that way showing their love for their former associate. The funeral occurred from the church of Our Lady, and was largely attended.

NEWTON LOWER FALLS.

—Captain F. Jordan, after an absence of about fifteen years, is paying a visit to his old home, Mr. Allan Jordan's.

—A dance was held in Boyden Hall on the evening of September 10, under the auspices of the Young Men's Social Club.

—The supply of pipe having given out work has been suspended for the present on the extension of the water main through Grove street.

—Three of the young ladies who graduated from the Newton High school this summer, have secured positions as teachers: Miss Southworth goes to a district school in Conn., Miss Early to a primary school in Swampscott, and Miss Sears to Leverett, Mass.

—The funeral of the late Mrs. Abbott, wife of Judge Josiah G. Abbott, took place from St. Mary's Episcopal church, Tuesday the 20th. Rev. Nathan Parks, rector of St. Emanuel's church, Boston, assisted by Rev. W. G. Wells, rector of St. Mary's church, officiated, and there was a large attendance of the family and friends of the deceased. The church choir rendered the hymn "Rock of Ages" and "Jerusalem the Golden," and the services were of a very impressive character. At the grave the choir sang "I heard a voice from heaven." The remains were interred in the parish cemetery.

BOSTON THEATRES.

"The Red Lamp" will be extinguished Saturday evening, and Diplomacy will be the attraction on Monday evening at the Boston Museum. In this great play by Sardou, Annie Clark will appear in one of her best roles, that of Zicka; Charles Barron will be the "Beauclerc," Edgar Davenport, Julian, and Miss Evesson "Dora." A large audience will doubtless greet this popular drama cast by Boston's favorite company.

"Jim The Penman" has been the attraction at the Park Theatre, this the fourth and last week. Saturday's Matinee and evening performance will be the last opportunity of witnessing this strong play for the present at least. Elaine and A Foregone Conclusion, though billed for this engagement must wait until this fine company's return in the spring. Next Monday evening Miss Annie Pixley begins an engagement in the "Deacon's Daughter."

Among the attractions announced for the Hollis Street this winter are H. E. Dixey in "Adonis," Dion Boucault in a new play "Phryne," and Robson and Crane in the "Henrietta." Minnie Palmer and Modjeska also have engagements at this theatre.

The Booth-Barrett company opened the season at the new Hennipen Avenue Theatre in Minneapolis, for which the claim is made that it is the finest Theatre in America.

"A Run of Luck," with its horses and dogs seems to be a lucky hit at the Boston Theatre, and if large audiences are any criterion the play is a success.

The "Corsair" with its beautiful scenes is still the attraction at the Hollis Street.

NOTES ABOUT TOWN.

A WORD TO THE WISE.

We have thought of compiling a short catechism with some timely conundrums suggested by daily observations here and there.

First, what is the chief end of man, woman, and child, as far as you have been?

Answer, the chief end of man, as far as we have observed, seems to be to eat and drink as much sugar, and in as many forms as ingenuity can devise.

The leading articles of diet at all public eating places are sugar and sugared pastry. Sweet cake and sweetened pies of diverse contrivance, we are sternly obliged to set before all invited guests at our own tables.

All beverages are saturated with sugar. The extent of the consumption of candy can only be imagined. It transends figures. Nearly every country store, along with its own specialty, as dry goods, groceries or drugs, &c., has a candy counter, where the children swarm like flies, and they never seem to get enough. We might give the statistics of the annual consumption of sugar in the United States so much per head, but examples are more to the purpose.

Sitting in a restaurant, we noticed a gentlemanly business man opposite, with a plateful of sweetened pudding, his only dish. On this he spread delicately five tablespoonfuls of white powdered sugar, by actual count. He poured over this saccharine mortar bed, a libation of cream and added another spoonful of sugar.

After eating this he munched a half dozen sweetened doughnuts, and drank his coffee into which he stored three spoonfuls more of white sugar. This was at dinner time. We watched the proceeding furtively, ly, and wondered if he kept it up daily, and what prevented his turning finally into a pillar of sugar.

On another occasion, at dinner, we observed one of the most eminent clergymen in Boston sitting near. He ordered "Washington pie," (one half sugar in itself) with a saucer full of honey! disposed of it all and went out. He was a well known dyspeptic, what could he expect but to die prematurely? He did, and joined the great majority, chronicled as having died of diabetes, a fatal disease, especially aggravated by the use of sugar in any form.

His name was——, we respect the memory of his useful life too profoundly to connect it with his table habit, for he was a noble man, and served well his day and generation. It is said that Hon. Charles Sumner confessed himself addicted to chocolate caramels.

"De mortuis nil nisi bonum."

If we all lived as we ought, one half the physicians would be out of employment and be obliged to fall back upon the land, and go to farming and raising hens.

Doubtless the proportion of saccharine matter in most articles of food is sufficient in a natural state, without adding any more than a mere trifle.

Probably the taste becomes vitiated, and is no longer a safe guide in seasoning. It should then be under guardianship of reason.

But why waste good paper and ink on cautioning signals to the wilfully blind?

| The accomplished author has been even more successful in this volume than in "Gates Ajar" or "Beyond the Gates." There is a wonderful air of reality about it, as well as a fascinating interest. Its subject is the supposed earliest impressions of one suddenly passing into the invisible world, and the effect of its conditions upon him. |        |

Miscellaneous.

—"What do you sell that ribbon for?" asked a young lady in a dry goods store. "Eight dollars a week—oh, beg pardon—50 cents a yard, miss."—[Washington Critic.]

—"You were a nice, quiet little boy in Sunday school this morning, Bobby," said the minister. "I was very much pleased." "Yes," replied Bobby, "pa said that if I behaved myself in Sunday school, I needn't go to church."—[Furnishing Trade Review.]

—"The seats at the circus get narrower every year," remarked a young lady in a horse car the other evening. "When I was told where to sit down there was not a sign of a seat anywhere, only the laps of two gentlemen." "Did you sit down?" "Why, of course," and there was a lapse in the conversation. —[Buffalo Courier.]

—Many men do not know how to carry a watch. It used to be the fashion to carry it in the waistcoat pocket. This necessitated girdling one's waist with a chain. Now a man's vest front is unadorned. The idea is English. It prevents one breaking his chain while leaning over a billiard table. It is more safe, and, above all, if a fellow is obliged to hypnoticate his time-piece he can keep his coat on, and no one will be any the wiser. —[New York Mail.]

—In San Francisco there are four journals regularly published in Chinese characters. By the Chinese method a good printer can produce only 400 sheets a day. Five days' work, therefore, is required to print an edition of 1,000 copies. The journals are printed with black ink upon single sheets of white paper, except on the Chinese new year, when the printing is done with red ink or upon red paper. —[Printers' Register.]

I have been a sufferer from catarrh for the past eight years. Having tried a number of remedies advertised as "sure cures" without obtaining any relief, I had resolved never to try any other patent medicines, when a friend advised me to try El's Cream Balm. I did so with great reluctance, but can now testify with pleasure that after using it for six weeks I believe myself cured. It is a most agreeable remedy—an invaluable Balm. —Joseph St. wart, 124 Grand avenue, Brooklyn.

SELMA, N. C., Feb. 11, 1887.

Gentle man—Yours inquiring whether or not I had been benefited by Kaskine, and if so to what extent, &c., to hand. In reply say that my health has not been as good in twenty years as now. I suffered with chills from malarial poison contracted while serving in the Confederate army on the Peninsular Campaigns in Virginia. Did not miss having a chill at least once in twenty-one days, and more frequently once in seven days, for more than fifteen years. The result was very poor health and a general letting down of the system which only those similarly affected can appreciate.

In this condition I visited New York in November, 1885, on business. While there I stopped with Mr. E. D. Barker, of the University Publishing Company. I told Mr. Barker of my condition. He called my attention to your Kaskine and procured for me a bottle. After my return home I took the pellets as directed and found much relief afforded thereby. Of this change I wrote to Mr. Barker, who sent two or three bottles during the past year. My health greatly improved. I increased in weight from 165 pounds to 200 pounds, my present weight. I believe the Kaskine did it. Quinine had failed, as other remedies usually administered in such cases.

Now, unless in case of exposure to extra bad weather, I do not have chills, and my general health is good. I turned over half a bottle to a young friend a few weeks since. I learn from her mother that she was much benefited by it while it lasted.

I trust you may be able to introduce Kaskine generally in this country, in which many suffer from diseases consequent upon malarial poison in the system. From my own experience I can emphasize its excellence for such diseases. If I can serve you call on me.

I am very truly yours,
JOHN C. SCARBOROUGH
Ex-Superintendent of Public Schools, North Carolina.

THE SUCCESSFUL TICKET.

There is no question but that the Republican convention nominated the ticket that will win at the polls, and Governor Ames is sure of another term. He has made a fairly satisfactory, if not a brilliant official, and his mistakes will be overlooked by the great majority of voters, on account of the character and methods of the men who carried the day at Worcester.

His associates on the ticket will give it additional strength, and probably the result of the election will show that all the petty criticism State Treasurer Beard has received during the year has only added to his popularity with the voters. The people like a man who has the courage of his convictions, and there is no question but that Mr. Beard has plenty of courage. Now that western Massachusetts has been recognized by having been given the attorney generalship, it will probably outdo itself in the way of an old fashioned majority for the whole ticket.

The platform adopted was satisfactory in most respects, and reads well, which is one of the most important things about a political platform. On the question of tariff revision, its utterance is disappointing to a large number of Republicans, who do not believe in free whiskey and tobacco, and who think that if the surplus revenue must be reduced, the reduction should come in any other form than this. The suggestion of free sugar is an excellent one, and to this might be added a number of other necessities of life, by which the poorer classes would be benefited, as they would not be by free rum and tobacco.

The civil service plank aptly calls attention to the Democratic opposition to this reform, and demands that the civil service rules be extended to other departments, not under its provisions. This is definite enough, and the demand should be so emphasized that the next session of Congress will obey it, and take the civil service entirely out of politics.

The temperance plank is explicit enough and advanced enough to satisfy all but determined third party men, and the stand taken on the public school question is a bold and eminently satisfactory one. The public schools should know neither party nor sect in their management.

Governor Ames is heartily endorsed, and the appeal to the voters to select such representatives to the General Court, that the high standard of Massachusetts legislation may not be impaired, is one that should be heeded. The platform might even have gone further than this, but the suggestion is a good one, and there are indications all over the state that unusual care will be taken in making nominations this year.

NO DRAINAGE FOR MORSE FIELD.

The residents of Morse field are not to have any relief from Watertown, and evidently all that town cares about them is to collect their taxes. Newton had voted to drain its portion of the district if Watertown would join in and drain its share, the work being of such a nature that it could be done much more cheaply if both acted jointly. Our city government has acceded to all the demands of the Watertown authorities, and shown unusual courtesy in meeting all their requests. Every possible objection was brought forward by the Watertown authorities, for the sake of postponing action, and when these were all met, and their terms acceded to, the Watertown selectmen had nothing to do but submit the matter to a town meeting.

This was done on Tuesday evening last, and as was expected, the order was overwhelmingly defeated. No money will be expended on this side of the river by Watertown, if it can possibly be avoided, and the only way the residents of that section can hope to be relieved of the surface water that now fills their cellars at every rain, is by annexation to Newton.

It would obviously be inexpedient for Newton to drain its part of the territory, when Watertown does nothing, as from the nature of the division lines, and the lay of the land, the Newton drain would be quite as much of a relief to Watertown as to Newton. Arthur H. Bailey, a resident of the Morse field district, was the leading opponent of the order at the Watertown town meeting, and worked against the interest of his own section and stood almost alone against his neighbors. He evidently appreciated the situation, and argued that Newton should take care of its own drainage and leave Watertown to act independently—that is, do nothing. Mr. Bailey has recently sold his house and is soon to remove to Cape Cod.

The unfortunate Watertown residents on this side of the river are very indignant, but they can do nothing, save work for annexation to Newton. Watertown is very glad to get the money they pay towards the town expenses, as it helps towards keeping the other side of the river in good order.

EXCEEDING APPROPRIATIONS.

The Highway committee have asked for $5,000 in addition to their appropriation, but they have only followed the example set by other important committees, which have exceeded their appropriations. If any committee has an excuse for extravagant expenditures, it is the Highway committee, which is besieged on all sides with applications for improvements, and some of them are so urgently needed that it requires more firmness and foresight than the average committee possesses to turn a deaf ear to these demands. This year there have been complaints from every ward in the city, with possibly the exception of Ward 7, because long-needed improvements were not made, and the committee have been flooded with petitions from Nonantum to Oak Hill, all asking that their own particular case should receive immediate attention. With our many miles of streets it is almost impossible for a highway committee to keep within the most liberal appropriation, and Alderman Pettie was not far wrong in laying the blame for any excess of expenditure upon the "constituents." Highway surveyors are but human, they do not like to make enemies, or to neglect their duty of keeping the streets in good repair, and if they once begin an improvement, it is difficult to stop. They say that the Public Property committee and the Street Light committee had to ask for an additional appropriation, and if one committee does it, there is no reason why another should not. The committee has a good deal of work on hand, which can be finished more economically now than six months from now, and it would seem to be wise to have the work done, even if the sum asked for is deducted from what would have been the amount appropriated for highway purposes next year.

The Street Railway question has had its last hearing, and it will without doubt be granted a location with but little more delay. Probably nothing will be done about building the road this fall, but the materials will be bought, the cars ordered and arrangements made to begin work upon the road as early as possible in the spring. The work of construction will probably not take long, as the company is composed of men who push forward energetically whatever they undertake, and by another summer the road will be in operation.

THERE has been a loss of 280 from the voting list since last year, by death, non-assessment, and failure to pay taxes. ## GRAND CONCERT!

T. TREMONT TEMPLE, BOSTON,
Wednesday Evening, Nov. 16, 1887, at 7.45.

When the NEW AMERICAN ORATORIO "EMMANUEL"

Soloists—Mrs. E. HUMPHREY-ALLEN, Miss GERTRUDE EDMONDS, Mr. GEORGE J. PARKER, Mr. CLARENCE E. HAY.

FULL ORCHESTRA, 23 MUSICIANS, and GRAND ORGAN.

Organist—S. R. WHITNEY.

Tickets—75c. and $1.00. All seats reserved; to be obtained at ticket office, Tremont Temple, on and after Thursday, Oct. 13.

The Congregationalist, July 28, '87, says: "The oratorio of 'Emmanuel' is refined and dignified, and not too classical for the average chorus and audience. The author merits the gratitude of lovers of sacred song."

Prof. W. F. Sherwin, Conductor of Music at the late New England Assembly, So. Framingham, writes as follows:

Boston, Sept. 21, 1887.

MY DEAR MR. TROWBRIDGE:

"Having, during the late session of the New England Assembly, tested the merits of your new oratorio 'Emmanuel,' I desire to assure you that the work proved delightfully interesting in every way to singers, orchestra and the public; receiving enthusiastic and unqualified commendation from all. The general excellence is so uniformly throughout that it is difficult to say which parts are most interesting. It is worthy of special mention that the text adheres very closely to the original New Testament Scriptures, and is literally reproduced in their full strength and beauty, rather than adapting them to the music. The solo parts are full of beauty, and sufficiently artistic to be relished by highly cultivated singers, while the choruses are inspiring in a marked degree, never failing to kindle and hold the interest of singers. All the music, while not so difficult of execution as to put it out of the reach of the average musical organization, breathes the spirit of true dignity and christian earnestness, expressed in a musically manner which reflects great credit upon the composer, and it seems thoroughly original. I sincerely congratulate you upon your success in giving to the public a work so admirable in all respects, and so happily adapted to meet the needs of hundreds of choral organizations all over the land. I am sure that an unprejudiced examination will show such that 'Emmanuel' is just what they want. Hoping it may speedily attain to the popularity it so well deserves, I am

Fraternally yours,

W. F. SHERWIN."

—Last Sunday was the twenty-seventh anniversary of Rev. H. J. Patrick's connection with the Second Congregational church at West Newton. Mr. Patrick preached an interesting sermon from the text contained in Ezekiel, 13th chapter, 18th verse, and taking as the theme of his discourse the thought, "Be not time servers." The year just passed had been one of general prosperity, and though no marked interest had been shown, there had been a quiet steady growth as illustrated by the following figures: Twenty had been received into the church, and four had removed to other churches, while only one member had been taken by death. $1000 had been given to benevolent objects, and $1000 had been raised by the ladies at their fair; $5000 had been expended in all. Nine funerals had occurred and five marriages. The church proposes to hold a fellowship meeting on the one hundred and sixth anniversary of its foundation, which will occur October 21st.

—A fair, under the auspices of St. Bernard's Parish, for the purpose of extinguishing the debt on the parochial residence, was opened at the West Newton Catholic church on Monday evening. Gifts of almost every conceivable nature from a full blooded Jersey cow to a doll and a jumping-jack have been received, and will be disposed of. A very fine whip, to be voted to the most popular coachman, attracts a good deal of notice, as also does a new Corning buggy, the gift of Mr. P. A. McVicar. The cow, a donation from Dr. Timmins of South Boston, is not at present upon the scene, but will be forthcoming when her fortunate owner is determined upon. Among the other gifts may be voted a parlor stove, from A. J. Fiske & Co., of West Newton; a silver fruit dish, H. H. Hunt of West Newton; a tea set, Wm. Pettigrew of West Newton; an antique oak rocking chair, Mrs. Ritchie of Auburndale; hanging lamp, O. F. Lucas of West Newton; a handsome marble French clock, Mr. M. R. The department had some lively work, but succeeded in extinguishing the flames in about an hour. A great deal of damage had been done, which the insurance will probably cover. Mrs. Parker was negotiating for the sale of the house to Boston parties. Mr. Dwight of Pittsfield, who was reported last week as having leased the house, has been looking at the place. Rev. Mr. Worcester on Woodland avenue. Mrs. Parker has the sympathy of all her Auburndale friends.

—Last Saturday evening the young people connected with the Newton Boat Club met at the club house at Riverside to participate in the last concert-dance given by the club to their friends this season. The hall and grounds were brilliantly lighted by Chinese lanterns, and the very elegant candelabra lately presented to the club by Mr. Churchill of the new firm of Morey, Churchill & Morey attracted considerable attention. The evening was too cool to allow of the use of the balconies, and we understand that but one boat load were so early as to venture upon the river. The assembly in the hall was large, and all seemed to have experienced a most enjoyable time. Several well-known Newton ladies were present as chaperones. There were a number of guests from Waltham, Boston and Cambridge present, and all were united in hoping that at no very distant day the club may give a repetition of these delightful reunions.

Ladies' Cloaks.

The well known house of Springer Brothers call attention in this issue to their fall and winter styles of fashionable cloaks, which comprise all the latest novelties. They have received large importations direct from the leading houses of London, Paris and Berlin, and are constantly adding to their stock from their own manufacture. On account of the great extent of their business there is neither fire in Boston that can compete with them, either in the artistic design of their goods, or the excellence of their work, and ladies in search of the best as well as the latest styles should call at their retail department.

The South Baptist Conference.

The morning trains on Wednesday left a large number of passengers at the Newton station, all delegates to the 26th anniversary of the Boston South Association, which was held in the Baptist church.

The conference assembled at 10 o'clock a. m., and a service of prayer was held. At 10:30 the annual sermon was delivered by Rev. F. T. Whitman of Allston. After the sermon, letters were read from the various churches, and the meeting adjourned to noon.

At 2:30 o'clock the conference re-assembled at the church. After a short prayer service, the reports of committees and a circular letter from Rev. J. H. Gunning of the Harvard street church, Boston, were read and discussed. It was announced that the Dorchester Temple Baptist church had been added to the membership of the association. The hand of fellowship was formally extended to the representative, the pastor of the church, Rev. Mr. Ferguson, and he was warmly welcomed to the church association. The committee of arrangements at the next annual gathering is as follows: The moderator, Rev. F. T. Whitman and Rev. Dr. J. B. Brackett of Brookline. The meeting will be held at Allston. The preacher chosen was Rev. Dr. Brackett, with Rev. D. B. Juten of South Boston. The subject of the annual circular letter was "The Evangelizing Work of the Christian Church." The paper set forth the duty of the church in winning men to Christ. It was responded to by Dr. Bosworth, Rev. Mr. Titus, Rev. Dr. Adams, Rev. Dr. Belamy and Rev. D. B. Juten.

At the evening service a large audience was present, and the question for discussion was "Is the Moral Teaching of Jesus Practicable?" The Rev. F. E. Dewhurst read the paper. The speakers were Rev. Dr. Gordon, and Rev. Dr. Brackett.

The dinner and supper were served in Armory Hall, and the arrangements were so perfect that there was no confusion about serving the large number who attended. Three long tables extended lengthways of the hall, with seats for 350 people. Red tickets were given to the first comers at the church and these admitted to the first tables. White tickets were given to the later comers, and these admitted to the second dinner and supper. There was a large force of waiters and the supply of eatables was so abundant that many basketsfull were left.

The Oratorio of Emmanuel.

This Oratorio, which was so successfully brought out in Newton last spring, will be produced in Tremont Temple, Boston, November 16th, with a picked chorus of 200 voices, and the same distinguished soloists who appeared in Newton. There will also be an orchestra of 23 pieces, and the grand organ, the latter in charge of Mr. S. B. Whitney. The organ will be of great assistance and add much to the full rendering of the music. Full particulars are given in the advertisement in another column. Tickets will be in demand, and all intending to hear this American composition, under such favorable auspices, would do well to engage seats as soon as they are ready for sale, Oct. 13th.

THE DEATH OF SUMMER.

JAMES H. GILKEY.

How sadly dawns the Summer's dying day!
There is a coldness in the deep blue sky,
Where mazy clouds are moving heavily,
Like ships becalmed that drift down the bay;
Soft airs that scarcely move the aster's spray,
As if the heart of Nature breathed a sigh,
Linger about to see the Summer die,
And every silent flower seems to pray,
As with uplifted face, or drooping head,
It breathes a fragrant tribute to the dead;
Perchance thou art not dead, sweet Summer-tide,
Nor lost the beauty thou to earth hast given,
Perchance thy thousand glories—glorified,
Like souls immortal, shall appear in heaven.

THE HAUNTED CORRIDOR.

BY C. W. WILLIS.

The wine-like glow of sun-set yet illuminated the great bay window, but the rest of the apartment was already enshrouded in the gray shadows of twilight indistinctness; the huge chairs of carved oak looked like gigantic monsters from some foreign shore. From the walls frowned down the family portraits, and the crimson hangings above the arched doors waved restlessly back and forth in the draughts of wind that swept through the corridor.

"I don't believe a word of it!" said Aunt Ruth, with considerable emphasis. "A ghost story, indeed!"

"Tell me about it, Lillian," said Captain Hazlewood, to whom the bay window with its far-off prospect of snowy hills veiled in twilight, to say nothing of Lillian's nearness, were infinitely more attractive than the modern regions of Alunick place.

"It is not much of a story," said Lillian, flushing up to her very eyelashes at the sound of her own soft voice; only years ago, long before my great-grandpapa built this house, the site was all one unbroken wood, and there was a tradition that a beautiful girl was murdered by her lover. Her grave, they said, was beneath the foundations of this house, but I don't believe that."

"Of course not," interrupted Miss Ruth, with a toss of her head. "I have no patience with old superstitions."

"What are you looking for, aunt? Have you lost anything? Shall I call for Harris to bring the candle?" asked Lillian, a moment afterward, coming to her aunt's side.

"Nothing, nothing," said Miss Ruth, with some embarrassment in her voice. "Come, don't stay out there any longer in the biting cold, unless you both want to be laid up."

"It is not cold here, aunt," pleaded Lillian, "and the starlight is so beautiful on the stone pavement. Do let us remain until that fiery planet has mounted a little higher."

But a peremptory summons from Col. Orme himself, who had just waked from a comfortable nap by the glowing fire in the library to a sort of vague wonder as to where Ruth and the young people had gone, settled the matter.

"Never mind, Lillian," whispered Charles Hazlewood. "Bye and bye, when your uncle has gone to his room and Aunt Ruth is busy with her curl paper in her dormitory, we can have a stroll through the ghost's territory."

Lillian gave him an arch glance as she tripped after Aunt Ruth into a hall which led to Colonel Orme's brilliantly lighted library.

"I wish Captain Hazlewood wouldn't remain out there," said Aunt Ruth anxiously. "He will take cold and besides—"

"Besides, what, aunt?"

"Lillian," said the old lady. "I wish you would go down and see if the house-keeper has prepared that posset for my sore throat."

Lillian went to execute her aunt's behest.

How peacefully the distant hills and valleys slept in their snowy mantles on that glorious December night! It reminded one of a lovely painting, executed with brushes dipped in pearl and shaded with pencils of glimmering silver. At least, so they seemed to Charles Hazlewood as he stood in the recess of the gigantic bay window, nearly hidden by the curtains, the faded splendor of whose tarnished embroidery carried the mind unconsciously a century back on the stream of time. But, then, Charles was in love.

The tall old-fashioned clock in the hall was striking twelve, and the colony of crickets under the warm heart-stone were falling into a dreamy sort of chirp, when Aunt Ruth emerged from her room on tip-toe, candle in hand.

Now Aunt Ruth in nodding false curls, lace head-dress and young style of dress was a very different style of personage from Aunt Ruth with her head tied up in a silk handkerchief, her false curls laid aside, and long white dressing robe enveloping her thin figure, and the latter was by no means the more prepossessing of the two. Probably some such consciousness swept across the good spinster's mind, for she shuffled hastily past the solemn eyes of the portraits on the wall. "I am sure I dropped them somewhere here," she murmured, passing in front of the bay window. "It is very provoking! There goes my candle out! I think I can find them, though, the starlight is so bright. Mercy on us, what is that? The ghost! the ghost!"

Aunt Ruth fled shrieking down the corridor, her hands clasped over her eyes, before which was imprinted the appalling vision of a tall white figure sweeping past, all in white, with a crimson stain at its pallid throat!

The house was aroused into instantaneous commotion, lights flashed out at the various doors and an eager circle surrounded Aunt Ruth, who was verging into hysterics.

"It glided past me like a gust of wind," she cried, replying at a hazard at the questions rained down upon her; "all in white, with a dreadful mark of blood upon its throat! It is a warning! I know it's a warning that I haven't long to live! Oh, what shall I do? what shall I do?"

"I don't understand what you are doing in the ghost's corridor at this time of night," interrupted Colonel Orme, staring at his sister as if not quite certain whether this was an actual occurrence or a dream.

"Well, if you must know," said Miss Ruth, with a little hysterical sob, "I dropped my false teeth out there, just after dark, and I didn't like to look them up with Lillian and Captain Hazlewood standing by; and so—"

"Oh, that's it, eh?" said Colonel Orme, laughing. "I think, sister Ruth, you are over-particular for a woman of fifty."

"Only forty-nine, James," interrupted Miss Ruth, indignantly.

"But the ghost?" inquired young Hazlewood, who had just arrived on the scene of action with a rather embarrassed air.

Upon which Aunt Ruth gave way to the combined influence of her brother's unkind remark and the fright of ghost-seeing, and fairly fainted without further notice. According to the usual custom of woman-kind on such occasions, Colonel Orme and the other gentlemen were hustled out into the hall, the victim of the female officials meanwhile being treated with cologne, stilled with burnt feathers, and rolled up in hot flannel.

"She is recovering, poor dear creature," was the final verdict hurled at Colonel Orme through a crack in the door.

"Well, I'm glad of it, I'm sure!" said the colonel, dolefully rubbing his hands, "for it's cold out here in the hall. Why hello! is this you, my Lillian? What's the matter? You haven't seen a ghost, I hope."

"No papa," faltered Lillian; but—"Suppose we three adjourn to the library, Colonel Orme and I will undertake the task of explanation," interrupted Charles Hazlewood, while Lillian's cheeks grew like flame.

"Well, may I venture to inquire what this all means?" interrogated the bewildered colonel, when the library door was safely closed.

"It means, sir," said Charles, laughing, yet a little puzzled how to proceed, "that Lillian, your daughter, and I were just looking out at the stars in the embrasure of the great hall window, when we saw some one approaching with a light. Lillian went to see what the apparition meant, when Miss Ruth (whom it proved to be) dropped her candle and went shrieking away."

"So Lillian was the ghost, eh?" said the colonel, repressing a very strong inclination to laugh.

"You see, papa," interrupted the young lady, "I wore my long cashmere mantle, for I was afraid of taking cold, and it was tied at the throat with red ribbons, and—"

"And Aunt Ruth took it for granted that you were the murdered heroine of our family ghost story," said the colonel, archly. "But allow me to ask, young people, what you were so interested in?"

"Well, sir," said Hazlewood, "I had just asked her if she wouldn't marry me—don't run away, Lillian—and she said 'Yes'—that is, if I could win her father's consent."

"Well?"

"And I would like to know what her father says to the proposition," added the young officer, laughingly detaining Lillian, who was struggling to escape.

"He says," answered Colonel Orme, "that your intemperity in facing the ghost deserves some reward, and he likewise supposes that his daughter must be allowed to have her own way. Take her, Charlie, and don't spoil her. No thanks now; but let me go and see after your Aunt Ruth."

"Papa," whispered Lillian, as he rose with his hand on the door.

"Well, my dear?"

"Don't tell Aunt Ruth—that?"

"That you were the ghost? Just as you please." And he went, chuckling, to inquire after his sister's health.

There is no evidence that he ever did betray Lillian's secret, but two things may be regarded as settled facts in the records of Alunick Place; one is, that Aunt Ruth strenuously denies the existence of ghosts, and abhors the very sight of her niece's white mantle with cherry trimmings; the other is, that she is particularly careful never to pass through the solemn old haunted hall alone after sunset.—Somerville Journal.

A Common Cold.

Is often the beginning of serious affections of the Throat, Bronchial Tubes, and Lungs. Therefore, the importance of early and effective treatment cannot be overestimated. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral may always be relied upon for the speedy cure of a Cold or Cough.

Last January I was attacked with a severe Cold, which, by neglect and frequent exposures, became worse, finally settling on my lungs. A terrible cough soon followed, accompanied by pains in the chest, from which I suffered intensely. After trying various remedies, without obtaining relief, I commenced taking Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and was

I contracted a severe cold, which suddenly developed into Pneumonia, presenting dangerous and obstinate symptoms. My physician at once ordered the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. His instructions were followed, and the result was a rapid and permanent cure.—H. E. Simpson, Rogers Prairie, Texas.

Two years ago I suffered from a severe Cold which settled on my Lungs. I consulted various physicians, and took the medicines they prescribed, but received only temporary relief. A friend induced me to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. After taking two bottles of this medicine I was cured. Since then I have given the Pectoral to my children, and consider it for Colds, Coughs, and all Throat and Lung diseases, ever used in my family.—Robert Vanderpool, Meadville, Pa.

Some time ago I took a slight Cold, which, being neglected, grew worse, and settled on my lungs. I had a hacking cough, and was very weak. Those who know me best considered my life to be in great danger. I continued to suffer until I commenced using Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Less than one bottle of this valuable medicine cured me, and I feel that I owe the preservation of my life to its curative powers.—Mrs. Ann Lockwood, Akron, New York.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is considered, here, the one great remedy for all diseases of the throat and lungs, and is more in demand than any other medicine of its class.—J. F. Roberts, Magnolia, Ark.

—There will be a service in the Unitarian church on one Sunday evening of each month during the winter. The first service will be held Sunday evening, Oct. 2d, when the Rev. A. A. Brooks of Greenfield will preach. All are cordially invited to be present.

—They had a great sensation in West Roxbury near the Newton line last Saturday, caused by the report that some ladies had found a skeleton in the woods. The report was investigated and the skeleton of a large dog was found, upon whose collar was inscribed, "J. H. Mullen, Oak Hill, Newton, licensed."

—The last news from Prof. Burton, who has gone abroad for a year's study, is that he has mainly recovered from the sickness induced by his voyage, and expects a pleasant winter's work at Leipzig. His department is much missed at the seminary, but the gap is well filled for the seniors by valuable electives from other professors, while for other classes the work is simply changed a little in order.

—The following is the program of the Sunday evening course of lectures at the M. E. church: Oct. 2, "What is the church?" Rev. W. R. Clarke, D. D. Oct. 9, "What has the church done?" Rev. W. R. Newhall. Oct. 16, "What have I done for the church?" Rev. G. S. Butters. Oct. 23, "Why am I outside the church?" Rev. F. Nichols. This course will be given in Auburndale, Newtonville and Newton.

—Saturday afternoon, Oct. 1, the new Reading Room in the smaller Associates' Hall will be opened to the public. There will be a large variety of magazines and newspapers, and an admirable collection of reference books. The public library agency will be at the Reading Room in the future instead of Mr. Peck's store as formerly; thus the reading facilities of the village will be in one place, a convenience that will be appreciated by the citizens.

—Frank W. Gilkey, the carpenter who has been missing since July 24, and for whom the "Woods" in this city have been searched several times, has been found in Buffalo, N. Y., wandering about the streets, and of unsound mind. He was brought East and taken to Islesboro, Me., where he has relatives. Just before he disappeared a sum of money was found missing from the house where he boarded, and he was accused of the theft. He stoutly protested his innocence, but rather than submit to arrest he promised to pay the money. The affair seemed to prey upon his mind and he suddenly disappeared, many thinking that he had committed suicide. Behind him, at the time he departed, he left carpenter's tools valued at $100, a good suit of clothes, and in his trunk was found $200 in money. He wore his working clothes when he went, and he had them on when found Sunday.

—The first meeting of the Baptist Social Union, after the summer vacation, was held in Boston on Monday. Rev. Dr. Hovey spoke in memory of the late Dr. William Hague and gave a sketch of his life, preaching and character. Hon. Levi C. Wade was called upon to speak for the Newton Centre church. He had received a circular, he said, asking if God helped men in business, and at first had thrown it aside as having too obvious an answer. But on second thought he decided it worthy of more consideration, and that a more pertinent question could not be asked than the commercial value of religion. This was an age of materialistic inquiries, and whatever pointed toward the material welfare of the human race was eagerly looked into. It might be depended upon that nothing could work to this welfare without the power of the religion of Jesus Christ. There was no doubt either but that God did assist men in business; not always by giving them what they wanted, for that was not always real help, but by giving them courage and strength. Business men could not do better than to carry the principles of religion into business, and if this was done it would have an influence that could not be measured.

—The political campaign was opened by the prohibitionists at the Associates' Hall, Monday evening, the hall being well filled. The Germania quartet sang several selections. Mr. James Cutler introduced Judge Robert C. Pitman as the chairman of the meeting, and the opening prayer was made by Rev. T. J. Holmes. The chairman made a short address, in which he repudiated the republican party, for refusing to repeal the license law, and denounced the democratic party, and urged all to fight both parties and work for the repeal of the license law, which, he said, was working great damage to society. He believed the solution in the coming unity to be worse than a visit of Asiatic cholera. In many of our cities the local government is controlled by the saloon keepers. The democratic party made no pretenses in the way of fighting this element, and the republican party took no active measures to prevent its continuance. The republican party has a glorious record of the past, but its mission has been fulfilled. All conscientious men should do what they can to have the license law repealed. Remarks were also made by Rev. A. A. Miner, D. D. of Boston, and others. The quartet was composed of Edward A. and Fred F. Cutler and Messrs. Taylor and Cole, all of this village. Mr. F. H. Wood presided at the piano.

—The following account of the Prohibitory meeting was sent in by an occasional correspondent and gives another view of the meeting besides that given by our regular correspondent: "Strong and stirring speeches were made by the Rev. Dr. Miner and Judge R. C. Pitman. Judge Pitman having been a prominent leader in the republican party from the starting point, gave a carefully studied review of its history in relation to the temperance question, emphasizing its non-prohibitory character. Dr. Miner followed in much the same strain. He stated and reiterated emphatically the statement that the licensing in Boston was in the hands of the republican aldermen, absolutely, and irrespective of the license vote, and would remain in their hands whatever the vote might subsequently be, and this fact, he said, was not generally known. Those in power naturally did not wish it to be realized by the people. The liquor men meant business and used the republican officials as tools. Both speakers received frequent and hearty applause. Dr. Miner's eloquence is always conceded even by his opponents and in spite of his denunciatory attacks. His vehemence and terrific hostilities are blended with a fathomless sincerity and fidelity to convictions and a gentleness which is very 'other-worldly,' and is felt as an under current in all he says. The doctor's carefully prepared statements and arguments for the need of the new third party, ought to be known and considered by all. At the close of the meeting a prohibitory league was formed. The well-rendered music by the male quartet was warmly applauded."

CHESTNUT HILL.

—Messrs. Cobb and Jacques have taken possession of their new residences.

—Dr. D. D. Slade's new stable is about completed, and is commodious and convenient.

—Mr. Coffin of Reservoir station will soon erect a house on his line lot south of the Chestnut Hill station.

—A new street is to be cut through from the Essex road to Beacon street, in the western part of Chestnut Hill.

—Mr. R. H. White's new house will be one of the handsomest residences in this section, and its fine proportions are much admired.

—There is now a prospect that a plank walk will be laid on Hammond street this fall. The order appropriating $700 for the purpose has been referred to the highway committee.

—The repairs on the chapel are nearly completed, and will add much to its appearance and convenience. New furnaces have been put in, and the interior put in perfect order.

NEWTON HIGHLANDS.

—The youngest son of Mr. George M. Geyer had a piece of the middle finger of his left hand cut off while using a hay cutter one day this week.

—There seems to be but one opinion expressed in regard to the fountain on the square, and that is, it is mounted too high. The city will probably lower it.

—We understand that the Skinner house has been leased to Dr. Burr, who will soon take up his residence and commence practice here. We hear him well spoken of.

—The Bragdon family will remove immediately to their new house on Lake avenue, as Mrs. Emily W. Hyde has let the house occupied by them to other parties, who wish to occupy at once.

—The building of the proposed railroad station at Eliot has come to a stand still again on account of disagreement between the railroad company and Mr. Adams, the owner of the land of the proposed site for the station.

—The younger members of the Society of Christian Endeavor held a social in the Congregational chapel on Thursday evening of this week, and enjoyed themselves much, as young people usually do.

—Mr. L. A. Ross is building a small house near the Newton Cemetery for Mr. Henry Ross. He has a house nearly finished on Walnut street which is offered for sale, and has another house nearly completed on Duncklee street for Miss Duncklee.

—The new street from the railroad station to Lake avenue, now that the ledge has been removed, will be put in condition for public travel. We have not heard of any name suggested for the street as yet, perhaps some one would like to propose a name.

NEWTON UPPER FALLS.

—Mr. C. H. Hoyt, who was so seriously injured a few weeks ago, is able to be about again.

—Rev. Thomas DeGruchy, formerly pastor of the Baptist church, was in this village last week.

—That the south side of the city needs a hook and ladder truck has long been apparent. That a chemical engine would be of great benefit, none will deny. These must come in the near future. While at West Somerville recently, we saw a piece of fine apparatus in service there that would be admirably suited to our wants, and which can be obtained at a cost much below that of a truck and chemical engine, if purchased separately. The above apparatus consists of a hose reel, carrying 800 feet of hose; two 35 gallon chemical tanks in front, between the reel and crane neck; two extension ladders, one 30 and the other 15 feet long; several smaller ladders, hooks and numerous smaller minor equipments. The length of all is 27 feet, and is mounted on platform springs, making a handsome piece of fire apparatus. With a similar piece of machinery located here, we would have ample ladder service for nearly all our fires, and a chemical engine for our high points, when the water pressure is too small to be effectual. In other words, we would have a hose carriage, chemical engine, and hook and ladder truck combined in one, which would meet all our wants in that line for many years to come.

NEWTON LOWER FALLS.

—Mr. Rufus Moulton and wife have gone on a visit to York, Me.

—Miss Minerva Leland is filling a position as teacher in the Newton High School.

—Mr. E. T. Rice and family have returned from the White Mountains to their residence in this place.

—Wiswall's mill is shut down until the new machine room and some other repairs and improvements are completed.

—Mrs. Burnham of Lowell, who came to attend the Davis celebration, having been a former pupil of Mr. Davis, and who has been very seriously ill at the home of Mr. William Davis, died on Thursday afternoon.

—St. Mary's church kept "Harvest Home" for the second time on Sunday last, the church being decorated with great taste. No more beautiful blending of colors can be imagined, than that produced by the autumnal foliage and flora, with the great variety of fruit and vegetables. The chancel rail was wholly covered with brilliant leaves and shrubs, with the purple aster, the golden rod, and the deep crimson of the barberry. Hop vines with their rich green clusters, wreathed the gas standards, golden pumpkins and squashes with other vegetables, filled the corners of the rail, and the credence was piled with fruit. Tall stacks of corn, with ears fully ripe, made a striking background for the altar. Wheat and grapes typified the food and drink of the Eucharist. Corn stalks with their rustling leaves lined the walls, and told of the harvest past. The choir rendered the music for the day most effectively, an anthem "Fear Not, O Land," being specially prepared for the evening service. The sermons by the rector drew plain lessons from the passing autumn and the summer ended, while the tender care of our Heavenly Father in never ceasing His bountiful provisions for the needs of His erring children, was made an incentive to daily gratitude and thanksgiving. May the lesson of the hour be heeded by souls looking on to the eternal reaping and harvesting.

Running Machinery Nights.

The suit of Matthew Burns of Newtonville against the Newton Electric and Power company, which was on trial before Justice Holmes in the Supreme court Tuesday, involves an interesting question to the public and manufacturers who run their machinery nights to the annoyance and disturbance of residents adjoining the factories. Some kinds of business are carried on largely at night, the producing of electric light being notably a business of this kind. Mr. Burns, who lives on Crafts street, in his bill of complaint alleges that the defendant has built and maintains a factory within 12 feet of his house, and the noise and whizz of its machinery makes night anything but pleasant to him and his family, depriving them of their sleep, and causing a tremor and vibration to his house which makes living there uncomfortable; that the steam comes into his yard and makes it dangerous for children to go within its range, and also greatly deteriorates the value of his property. He wants the court to issue an injunction to restrain the defendant from running its machinery at night. The defendants contend that their business requires a running of their works in the night time, and that they do so with as little disturbance and as quietly as possible, and that to enjoin them would ruin their business and property. The case was taken under advisement to allow Judge Holmes to visit the premises, which he did on Thursday.

NEWTON.

—Miss Carrie Brown returned from the Berkshire Hills on Thursday.

—The Newton Flower Mission closed its work for the season on Friday, Sept. 30.

—Mr. Edward Angier has gone to Riverside, Cal., where he may remain permanently.

—Sixteen new voters registered their names at the registrar's meeting in Armory Hall, Tuesday.

—Mrs. A. W. Huff is visiting friends in Baltimore and Washington, and will be away a month.

—Miss Post's dancing class is assured, and will begin in Armory Hall, Saturday morning, Oct. 15.

—Fred H. Hitchcock has been chosen one of the Senate, the students' governing body at Amherst College.

—Dr. L. R. Stone was suddenly called to South Carolina this week, to attend a brother of Mrs. Stone, who is very ill.

—Miss Wetherell, who has been the guest of Miss Edith Page for a few weeks, left Thursday morning for Montreal.

—Mr. John Warner, who has been seriously ill for the past two weeks, was able to be out again Thursday, and is improving slowly in health.

—The bazaar in Town Hall, Watertown, in aid of St. Patrick's parochial school, attracts a large number of Newton people every evening.

A great improvement has taken place in the incandescent lights at the depot since the new machinery was put in. They are now very satisfactory.

—Mr. John Souther and his daughter, who have been at Hotel Hunnewell for the past year, left on Monday for Japan, where they will remain several months.

—P. O. Carroll, for a long time coachman for Dr. Field, has been appointed hosenman of No. 1 Engine. He has previously served in the fire department.

—The Newton Bicycle Club will be entertained Tuesday evening by Mr. A. A. Glines, at his residence in Newtonville. Paxton will cater and a good time is anticipated.

—The subject of Rev. Mr. Nichols' morning discourse at the Methodist Church on Sunday will be, "The Light of Life." In the evening he will discourse on "A Comprehensive Creed."

—The High School boys will be interested in the advertisement relating to Miss Post's dancing class, in another column. A few more young gentlemen are desired.

—Col. Albert A. Pope would have been nominated for senator in the 8th Suffolk district, but his large and increasing business cares rendered it impossible for him to become a candidate.

—Francis Murdock & Co's has been the great attraction for ladies the past week, and the extra force of clerks have had their time fully employed. Visitors are surprised at the large variety and excellence of the bargains that are offered.

—At the annual meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, Mr. W. C. Strong of this city presented the report of the committee appointed to prepare a memorial on the death of Mr. C. M. Hovey. Mr. Strong supplemented the report with a short address of eulogy.

—The Clavin Guards will celebrate their 17th anniversary next Monday evening, with a dinner at Armory Hall, at 6.30. Members of the city government and the five members will be the guests, and Col. Bancroft and staff will also be present. The Waltham orchestra will furnish music and some excellent speeches are expected.

—During the last few weeks numbers of those who have been diligently seeking homes in Newton have had to go elsewhere to live. For one small house there have been five applicants. Here is a good chance for an investment. Why don't capitalists put up a large number of medium sized houses at a fair rent? There would be no doubt of their being let at once.

—The approach of wet weather causes the people who have to pass through the railroad tunnel to wonder if the railroad company are going to drain it this fall as they promised. In wet weather there is from six inches to a foot of water in the tunnel, and it is dangerous as well as disagreeable place to pass through. It is certainly time that the drain so long talked of by the railroad company was built.

—An afternoon class in German for ladies is being formed at Miss Grant's school on Park street. The German language is in daily use among the pupils, who find much pleasure in greeting their teachers and fellow pupils in the language that conveys so much of good will and true feeling. A special feature of the ladies' class will be the study of pronunciation for German songs, also table conversation and polite forms of greeting.

—The Autumnal Festival, an occasion always anticipated by the children of Grace church, occurred on Monday evening. The parish house was filled with teachers and children. An interesting program was presented, consisting of music by the Misses Park and Messrs. Shinn & Hamblen, and readings by Miss Flint, the Misses Hale and Edward Fennessey. After very bountiful refreshments had been enjoyed, the children were delighted with a picture gallery with living portraits.

—The subject chosen by Rev. F. Nichols, the leader of the Y. M. C. A. meeting, last Sunday was, "Blind Bartimeus."—He felt his need. He had faith to believe, and he put that faith into practice and cried, "Thou Son of David have mercy on me." A number of profitable lessons were drawn from this miracle. Next Sunday C. A. Harkell, the vice-president, will be present, and address the meeting. A male quartet will also sing several pieces.

—Thursday morning one of Mr. Paxton's teams came rushing down Centre street distributing tubs and cans liberally on the way. Near the library the wagon wheel struck the fender of a phaeton in which a lady was seated. Fortunately the blow was a slanting one and the lady escaped injury. Mr. H. H. Cutler's bicycle was struck and carried along from Hubbard &

Procter's store nearly to Bush's stable, and there deposited considerably shattered. In turning from Elmwood street the wagon was completely overturned and the horse proceeded alone to his destination. The horse and wagon were but slightly injured.

—Frederick D. Lyon, who has charge of the improvements on Bacon's block, fell from a ladder on Saturday morning, cutting a gash three inches long in his scalp, spraining his right ankle and receiving severe bruises in other parts of his body. He was taken home and Dr. Frisbie dressed his wounds. He and Mr. J. N. Bacon were in the second story inspecting the work of demolition, and some one of the workmen moved the ladder by which they ascended, so that it did not stand securely. Mr. Lyon had a very narrow escape, but he is now improving and in a fair way to recover.

—Messrs. F. G. Barnes & Son have recently negotiated the following leases of real estate: The French roof dwelling house and lot owned by Mrs. Lucy E. Prescott, situated on Centre street, Ward 7, to Sarah J. Baker of South Boston; the home-stand of Mrs. Charlotte P. Blake on Jefferson street, Ward 7, to Dr. T. O. Loveland of Boston; the estate of Mary A. Davis, situated on Washington street, Ward 1, to George H. Hastings of Boston; at West Newton, the estate of H. H. Hutchings, Lenox street, to George E. Crawley of Boston.

—An illustration of that moral education so much desired, has been given in one of our schools. A visit to room 2 of the Underwood School on any Friday morning in June or September would have shown the teacher's desk covered with flowers, which were brought by the children, and when arranged in bouquets by the teacher, were sent to the Flower Mission in Boston. During the months mentioned and the latter half of May the pupils of this room sent 402 bouquets, and the children are among the youngest in the school. In addition to the pleasure thus given to the sick in the hospitals, the lesson of thoughtfulness for others is valuable for the children.

—The congregation of Grace church were told on Sunday, by the Rector, the Rev. Dr. Shinn, of a notice from the executor of the estate of the late Henry H. Linder, who had provided in his will a legacy of $5,000. Dr. Shinn then said that the building debt on the first of October was $10,500, having been reduced from $48,000 during his rectorship. He added that a gentleman had pledged the last $4,000, so that only $7,500 had to be raised. As the service was over a lady contributed $1,000, and since then various amounts have been offered, so that it looks very much as if Grace church would be presented for consecration in a short time. Collecting committees are busy canvassing the congregation, and the people of the parish are much interested.

—A union meeting of the several Christian Endeavor societies was held at Eliot Lower Hall, Wednesday evening. The attendance was large, every section of Newton being represented, with the exception of Newton Highlands. The time from 7 until 8 was devoted to social pleasures and refreshments were served. Messrs. Barker, Partridge, Elston and Marsh favored the company with vocal selections, and there was also some general singing. Parker Fiske of Auburndale opened for discussion the question of the evening: "Do Christian Endeavor societies meet the wants of our young people, and if not how can they be made to?" Messrs. Agry, Partridge and Smallwood of Newton, Woodman, Davidson, Butters and Woodworth of Newtonville, Faulkner of Nonantum, Goodrich of Medford and others participated in the discussion. Mr. Cue, the president, presided, and Mr. Richardson, secretary. At the consecration meeting after the discussion, some forty took part.

—The annual meeting of the Newton Natural History Society was held in Room 4, Eliot block, last Monday evening. Dr. Frisbie gave a detailed account of the three field days to Marblehead Neck, Concord, and Newport. Mr. H. J. Woods presented to the society a fine specimen of organ pipe coral. Dr. Frisbie exhibited a beautiful specimen of crystallized quartz from Crystal Mountain, Alabama, and a specimen of marble, obtained in the Monocacy River Valley. This is a marble conglomerate and is very beautiful. The Old Hall of Representatives in the Capitol at Washington has several tall pillars made from this marble. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, G. L. Chandler; vice-president, W. C. Bates; secretary, Prof. S. E. Warren; treasurer, H. J. Woods; curator, Jesse Fewkes. A committee consisting of the president, G. L. Chandler, W. C. Bates and H. J. Woods were appointed to make arrangements for time and place of meetings during the coming season. Prof. J. K. Richardson gave an interesting and instructive lecture on the "Fixed Stars." His clear, concise method of imparting information rendered his lecture doubly interesting, and it is to be regretted a larger audience was not present to profit by it.

—All who were among the jolly company of fifteen at the "86 fraternity" meeting at the Fremont House, Saturday evening, will remember the occasion with much pleasure. There was no ice to be broken, but there were many who had not met for a year, and the few minutes before supper were spent in mutual confidences about present conditions and future prospects. Occasionally an especially good story gathered all around the speaker to enjoy the latest news about one of the company. The important matter of supper disposed of, speeches were in order, and the president, John Cutler, called upon the following, whose replies it is needless to state, were felicitous: "The class of '86, Newton High School," president, Wallace Moore; "The Lyceum," president, W. M. Jones; "High School Review," Harry Whitmore; "The Societies," Harry Haskell; "The Politician," John Brimblecom. The mention of "our beloved head-master, Mr. E. H. Cutler," by one of the speakers, called forth hearty applause, showing that '86 is loyal to its teacher and friend. An animated discussion about the future meetings of the society occurred, and the meeting closed with a few songs and hearty wishes for another gathering at Christmas.

Newton Exhibitors at the Mechanics' Fair.

Newton is not without its manufacturing industries, as a visit to the "Mechanics Exhibition," Boston, will prove. In the basement at the left hand side, as one descends, the Pettie Machine Works of Newton Upper Falls exhibits a carding engine. This company was the first in America to produce this kind of machinery, having been established in 1831. The carders manufactured by the Pettie Works are used in the Willimantic Thread Factories, and one of the employees of the thread works has charge of the carder on exhibition.

A little further from the stairway may be seen a large space occupied by nine machines, upon which hang cards "The Newton Machine Co." The wool is received from the carding machine rough and uneven, and is put through these nine machines to remove the defects. After running through a gill box, the wool is sent to the comb, one of the finest combers manufactured. It may be interesting to state that in this comb are about 42,000 needles, which remove all foreign substances. The wool then passes through four gills of various kinds and three drawing boxes, as they are called. The object is to make the wool even and smooth; corrugated rollers, one pair running faster than the other, reducing the weight per yard. In addition to these fine machines the Newton Company manufacture lathes and wrenches at their shops in Nonantum.

In the grand music hall at the end furthest from the stage, the Nonantum Worsted Company have an attractive display of the "Star Light" Knitting Worsted. Near by, Peabody & Whitney exhibit a large variety of baby carriages and toys. In the third balcony in the space marked "Women's Patents," Mrs. Hodgdon of Newton exhibits her new system of dress cutting, illustrating her ideas by means of two pretty dolls.

J. R. Robertson has on exhibition in the northern balcony of the main hall some specimens of the fine canoes and boats which he builds at his shop in Riverside.

That Electric Car.

The electric car which has been in process of construction in New York for experimental purposes on the Cambridge railroad has arrived. The car is of ordinary Stephenson style, with a high top and ventilator ceiling. The bottom of the car is several inches higher than the platform, considerable space underneath being necessary for the motors. In entering passengers are thus obliged to step up several inches from the platform. The car is supplied with two Sprague motors, one on each axle. It is fitted with four light chandeliers in the centre, and lights also at the end. There are also electric signal bells, one with which to give notice of the stopping and starting of the car, and another to warn travellers of the approach of the car. There is also an automatic whistle by which passengers may attract the attention of the conductor. On the outside of the car are the signs, "West End Railway" and "West End Railroad Company."

New Fall Millinery.

Mrs. Woods will be prepared to display the stock of new millinery goods, with which she has just returned from New York, at her rooms on Elmwood street, next Wednesday and Thursday, October 12th and 13th. Her pattern hats and bonnets and fine display of novelties in millinery will no doubt attract crowds of ladies as they have in the past, and will well repay a visit.

Messrs. Raymond & Whitcomb's Winter Trips to California.

The first of Messrs. Raymond & Whitcomb's California tourist parties in the winter series of 1887-88 will leave Boston, Thursday, November 10, in a new and magnificent train of vestibuled Pullman palace cars, which will include a palatial dining-car. These new appointments of travel leave nothing to be desired. Everything will be of the most luxurious character. This party will arrive at Pasadena, Saturday, November 13, shortly after the opening of the second season at the Raymond, Los Angeles and other Southern California points will be reached the same day. Many new features will be introduced into these excursions the coming season. There will be twelve outward trips, with a choice of three different routes, and nineteen trips returning, with a choice of five different routes. The hotel list includes the Raymond, at East Pasadena, the new Hotel del Monte, at Monterey, the Palace Hotel, in San Francisco, the Arlington, at Santa Barbara, the new Hotel del Coronado, at San Diego, and a dozen other famous Pacific Coast resorts. Independent tickets are sold, which include every incidental expense of the journey out and back, and permit the traveler to exercise his own preferences regarding time and place of sojourn in California, and the time of his return. The return tickets are good on all trains through the winter, spring, and early summer. A handsome descriptive circular of 122 pages has been issued, and may be obtained of W. Raymond, 236 Washington street, opposite School street, Boston.

A Reliable House.

For the best and latest styles in suits for men and boys the reliable house of Spitz, Hays, & Mork are noted for the excellence of their goods and the moderate nature of their prices. They give their customers a large assortment to select from, and the care taken in the selection of the materials and in the manufacture, make it an object to trade with them. Their "loss and tag" suits for boys are so well known that it is necessary only to call attention to them, and they are sold at the low price of $5. Boys' fine suits are provided at a slight advance in price, and their young men's suits are just the thing for school or business. For particulars see advertisement.

CITY GOVERNMENT.

THE STREET RAILWAY LOCATION AGAIN POSTPONED.

The Board of Aldermen met Monday evening, Mayor Kimball presiding. All the members except Alderman Johnson were present. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

The ward officers nominated at the last meeting were confirmed.

A communication was received from Hon. R. M. Pulsifer, President of the board of trustees of the Cottage Hospital, asking that $2,000 be appropriated for the expenses of the hospital for 1888. The large demands made upon the hospital necessitate its enlargement at an early day. The trustees extended a cordial invitation to the members of the city government to visit the hospital and become familiar with its workings. The communication was referred to the committee on finance.

PETITIONS.

Albert Metcalf and other residents of Lenox street petitioned for two lamps on that street.

The petition of F. A. Dewson for a street lamp on Highland avenue was granted.

The Newton Electric Light and Power Company asked for a license to put in two steam boilers and engines into their works on Crafts street, with a capacity of 200 horse power. The application was ordered advertised and a hearing will be given Monday evening, Nov. 7th, at 8 p. m.

P. A. Carroll was appointed hoseman of No. 1 Engine, to fill a vacancy.

The communication from the school board, notifying the City Council of the imperative need of a school building at Thompsonville, and also asking why the school buildings were so unfit for occupancy at the beginning of the school year, and what was the remedy for such procrastination, was received and referred to the public property committee.

The claims committee reported the petition of Ida H. Blaisdell, for damages to property on Homer street by the city's drains, and on their recommendation it was referred back to the highway committee.

Alderman Pettie recommended that the petition of the permanent drivers and engineers of the fire department for an increase of pay be granted, and that $50 more per year be paid them after Jan. 1, 1888. The order was passed.

A communication was received from Edward H. Mason, attorney for Annie C. Cole, owner of 10,032 feet of land in Newton Centre, bounded on Summer and Everett streets, stating that the grades on both streets had been changed during the year, by which her estate had suffered heavy damages, and asking for relief; referred to the claims committee.

The petition of Miner Robinson for leave to run a telephone wire on Otis street was granted.

M. C. Mayo and others asked for 4 street lamps on Clarendon street.

A petition was received from the Cambridge street railway company, through Curtis Cummings, its president, stating that the road had been making experiments in electricity, and was expecting to receive a car to be run by an electric motor. If successful the company intended to use the motor instead of horses, and asked for a permit to use such a motive power on its tracks in Newton. It was stated that such permission had been granted to the company by both Cambridge and Boston, and the orders passed by those cities were submitted. They allowed the use of storage batteries, but did not permit the system of overhead wires and poles. An order was passed with similar restrictions.

Notices of intention to build were received from Evan Jenkins, dwelling house 32, on Hawthorne street, Ward 2; and M. E. Baird, a house 27 by 30 on Hyde street, Ward 5.

THE $5,000 ORDER.

Alderman Nickerson moved that the order appropriating $5,000 additional for the highway department be taken from the table.

Alderman Pettie said that many times appropriations were made that were known to be too small for the purpose, and that it would be impossible to do any work required for the sum named, and then a committee was admonished not to exceed its appropriation. The public property committee had had to apply for an increase, in order to finish the public library addition. The highway committee had 120 miles of roadway to take care of, and some 240 miles of sidewalks, and so their appropriation had to be a large one. He did not believe in the policy of allowing public buildings to decay, and omit work that ought to be done to save them, merely from a desire to keep within the appropriation. Just so, the highway committee could have kept within its appropriation, but it could not have done so economically. $80,000 for 120 miles of road was only 10 cents a foot, less than enough to pay one man's wages, and it included repairs, new work, paving, sidewalks, care of gutters, removal of snow, and so on. It hardly allowed one man to a mile and a half of road.

Alderman Hollis asked if the extra appropriation was needed for work already begun, or for work only on the schedule.

Alderman Nickerson replied that $1,500 was for the completion of Brighton street, $500 for the completion of River street, and $2,000 for crushing of stone; no new work was contemplated.

Alderman Grant said that reference had been made to the public property committee. He was happy to announce that that committee had both finished the library addition and the High school addition, work calling for the expenditure of some $70,000, and kept within the appropriation some $200. The $2,000 increase on the library was due to repairs on the old building not contemplated when the new work was planned. The work could be done more cheaply than, and would have to be done within a year or two anyway.

The public property committee had kept within its appropriation, and intended to work that could not be done without exceeding the appropriation was laid aside until another year. The Highway committee should keep within the appropriation ["They can" from Alderman Pettie,] and he did not believe in carrying forward a large debt to next year. The sinking fund next year would have to be doubled, and the calls for money will be very large. The Highway committee will want $20,000 extra for bridges, and other calls will be heavy. If they can live within their appropriation they should do so.

Alderman Pettie said it was easy enough to keep within an appropriation, if that was the ultimatum, and the only thing worth considering, but he did not believe it was good economy to allow public property to go to waste in order to do it. How many public buildings are in such a condition to-day that they are a detriment to the city?

Alderman Ward said that an appropriation should not be exceeded unless it was actually necessary. It would be better to finish Brighton and River streets as far as the appropriation would allow and then stop. It was not the proper way to dig out a whole street and then leave it impassable.

Alderman Nickerson said the digging out of Brighton street was begun three years ago, when parties offered to take out the material at no cost to the city. It was supposed at first that the road-way only would have to be attended to, but Mr. Farlow had insisted that the wall should be rebuilt in front of his property and the sloping bank moved. He said that he had opposed the change of grade, and now he insisted that the street must be put in proper condition at once, and that if it remained in an impassable condition another winter, he would have to bring an action against the city.

Alderman Grant said that that altered the case; if the committee had got into any snarl and there was danger of a law-suit, he would vote for enough money to help them out and put the street in proper condition.

Alderman Pettie said he was glad to learn that the public property committee had such good contractors that they would keep within contracts made by them. Unfortunately the highway committee can not deal with contractors. Brighton street should have been done last year, but there was a peculiar pressure from certain members to fix up Snake Hollow, and the influence in favor of it was not hard to understand. Mr. Farlow told me last spring that he had been badly treated by the city, and had good cause for bringing an action against it. Brighton street on one side of him had been dug up and left impassable and Kenrick street on the other had been left in an impassable condition, and his patience had become exhausted. There was no particular snarl about the matter, but two large drains, not contemplated at first, had had to be put in at considerable expense.

Alderman Grant moved to make the amount $2,000, which would cover both streets.

Alderman Pettie said he believed the amendment would not prevail and said that it was rather mean not to meet them half way and make the amount at least $2,500.

This caused a good deal of laughter, and Alderman Hollis moved to make the amount $2,500.

Alderman Nickerson said that one estate on River street was left in bad condition, and it ought to be fixed up.

The amendment of Alderman Hollis was adopted, Alderman Grant and Ward voting No. The order was then passed for $2,500 additional, Alderman Ward voting No.

THE STREET RAILWAY.

The street railway agreement was then called up, and City Solicitor Slocum said that he had made an examination of it and made a new draft, with only some verbal alterations, and the agreement was perfectly legal.

Alderman Nickerson said that the President of the street railway company had signed the agreement, save the clause that a 52 pound rail should be used, as he thought a 35 pound Richards rail was sufficient.

Alderman Grant moved that a 35 pound rail be allowed to be used.

Alderman Harwood said that the 52 pound rail should be used. The 35 pound rail was not heavy enough, and this had been the testimony of the expert brought by the company. We did not want a cheap road in the Newton streets.

Alderman Grant said that the chairman of the highway committee and the city engineer had visited Malden and reported that the 35 pound rail used there was sufficient, and he was satisfied that such a rail would answer.

Alderman Harwood said that the West End road was a laying 96 pound rail, and all the railroad men he had talked with thought that the heavier rail should be used.

Alderman Hollis said that at a previous meeting he had favored a 35 pound rail, but he had made inquiries since of men who were held to be authorities on railroad matters, and they had said that if electric motors were used the heavier rail was needed, but if the cars were moved by horse power the lighter rail would do.

Alderman Pettie said that the company only objected to the heavy rail on account of the extra cost, but he favored it, and the company would probably find it the most economical in the road.

Alderman Grant said he had talked with the president of the Cambridge road, and his testimony was that the lighter rail would be sufficient.

Alderman Nickerson said he did not favor changing the weight of the rail, and he hoped the company would use electric motors and not horses.

President Parker cut short the discussion by announcing through one of the aldermen that he would agree to use the 52 pound rail.

Alderman Ward asked if the agreement would permit the company to erect overhead wires and poles in the streets.

Alderman Grant read from the charter granted by the legislature, from which it appears that the company cannot erect such poles and wires without the special permission of the board of aldermen.

Alderman Nickerson then read the order granting the location to the company.

On motion of Alderman Pettie, action was postponed until the board had inspected the route and considered the objections to Beacon street, and to the turn out in Walnut street near the railroad track.

Thursday afternoon was appointed for the inspection, and after the approval of sundry bills the board adjourned.

NOTES ABOUT TOWN.

EAST WIND.

Why do we meet nice people on the street, in the cars, and at church, whom we know well, and are known of for years, and yet without mutual recognition,--passing each other even on the same sidewalk, mute and unbending, each one shrinking from the first token of acquaintance? Answer:

Society requires it. We have never met socially, and have not been introduced. Again, we are creatures of habit, and having once drawn the head into the shell, the tendency is to do so every time, and keep it there. With some Boston-born people this proclivity is so overmastering that they scarcely ever, of their own accord, speak to anyone.

They wait to be spoken to, and approached by the usual prescribed forms and modes. These are exceptional cases; but they illustrate the effect of a New England atmosphere of caste and formality; inhaling the east wind from childhood they are not at home in a more genial air.

Unworthy motives might be assigned, but charity suggests the above as sufficient.

The late Hon. Charles Francis Adams by his personal manners, partly inherited, acquired the sobriquet of the "ice man."

This habit, so repellent to our warmer blooded southern and western friends, is an English trait, brought over a long while since, in those big ancestral sea-coasts.

The insular reserve that makes an Englishman an island wherever he is, has been transmitted through generations of direct descent. Heredity and climate together, are the moulds in which national characteristics are shaped.

Along the milder South Shore and Buzzard's and Narragansett Bays, and so on to Rhode Island and Connecticut, the Yankee has blossomed out into a more accessible and less formal personage.

The best antidotes to Boston rust and dry rot is travel and cosmopolitan intercourse.

"But," says one, "he and his family put on airs, and claim superiority."

"Perhaps you misjudge them; but suppose we admit the claim rather than dispute it; what then? what is to happen?"

"Why! they don't wish to associate with their neighbors."

"Ah! is that all?"

"They expect to be looked up to and treated with deference."

That can be arranged satisfactorily, but as to the deference as you called it, suppose for the sake of argument, you are not disposed to render it.

What will happen then?

The fact is, my friend, when homage is withheld, the idol shuts up and moves away, or goes into some other business. It takes two to make one aristocrat. Walking loftily with scorn and grimace, along a lonely road on the back side of Newton would look theatrical and silly. Why? There is no audience, nobody to be snubbed.

The Pharisee, when he gave thanks that he was such a "big warrior," had his eye not reverentially upward, but down on the streets and slums of Jerusalem. Pride always raises itself by its boot-straps on the heads of others.

If ever these nobodies should combine in a general boycotting, Loftus and his family would have to do their own work.

"When Adam delved and Eva spun, Where was then the gentleman?"

Man, in the abstract, has nothing to be proud of. The sentiment surely had no place among the original emotions. How it came into the world is a psychological mystery, and whether of male or female origin, still more so. All we have is a loan on call, without demand or notice.

Who under the sun, moon, and stars do people think they are? What is man, anyhow, to the ground he struts upon? The furrow of five minutes earthquake would leave no more trace of the holes he has dug, and the rocks he has piled up, than the keel leaves upon the ocean.

What has he done on the earth to show that he ever owned it? Look at Nineveh, Babylon and Thebes of yesterday, London, Paris and New York of to-day, and the Golden City of to-morrow, all alike in origin and destiny.

What are any cities more than Boston and Chicago, waiting for the upsetting of a kerosene lamp, or the careless handling of a match? What are his farm houses, his mills, his title deeds, and old genealogies? The everlasting hills laugh in derision at the ownership of man--a mere tenant at will coupled with stewardship, of which an account is kept, and a settlement to be rendered, as of an "unprofitable servant."

RECEPTION TO MRS. ARMSTRONG.

GIVEN BY THE LADIES' FOREIGN MISSION SOCIETY OF ELIOT CHURCH.

The Ladies' Foreign Mission Society of Eliot church gave a reception, Monday afternoon, to Mrs. C. C. Armstrong of San Francisco, wife of Dr. Richard Armstrong and mother of Gen. Armstrong. The lady was one of the earliest workers in the mission field of the Sandwich Islands, sent out by the American board.

The reception was held in the early afternoon at the residence of Mrs. G. D. Gilman, among those who greeted Mrs. Armstrong being the children of many of her friends and acquaintances in times gone by, beside many residents of Newton and vicinity who were only acquainted with her through her missionary work.

The meeting was called to order by Mrs. Charles Billings, president of the society, who conducted devotional exercises, and then introduced Mrs. Armstrong, who said in her introductory remarks that what she might say would only be in the nature of an informal talk about missionary life in the Sandwich Islands, but people in the vicinity of Boston were supposed to know these islands as well as herself, especially after the visit of the royal party. She then gave a brief sketch of her own early life as a farmer's daughter, "teaching school sometimes, and going to school sometimes"—the former something rare in those days, when women's work in the various professions was hardly known—until she came to Boston as a bride, and went with her husband to his field in this heathen land. This was in 1831, and the journey was made from Boston to New Bedford in an old-fashioned jolting stage coach, Rev. Daniel Green accompanying them, and Rev. Samuel Holmes receiving them at that place. The passage was to be made in a whaling vessel, and the Christian ladies of that town brought the departing missionaries all kinds of furniture, edibles and furnishings to help mitigate the hardships of the voyage, kindnesses which were remembered throughout all these years with gratitude, although a storm before their arrival at Rio Janeiro swept almost all these gifts from the deck.

There were 20 persons in the company, and the voyage was of six months' duration. All the passengers suffered greatly during that time, as the vessel was not in the least adapted to passenger carrying. In this storm the oil for the furnace had been washed overboard, and, therefore, the butter from the table had to be used for that purpose until a blackfish was caught, when the butter was again used for its proper purpose. When the ship put in at Rio Janeiro for repairs, the passengers were able to take a three weeks' rest, and a wealthy Scotch merchant kindly invited Mrs. Armstrong and another lady to his home during that time. The beauties of Rio Janeiro were described, and the sad feelings inspired by the sight of slaves carrying bags of coffee on their backs through the plantation chanting in Spanish, "I'm a poor slave! I'm a poor slave," as they worked.

"I thank God," said Mrs. Armstrong, "that my son, who was born in a pagan land, is doing missionary work in a Christian land at Hampton." An interesting account of the gathering of missionaries on the Hawaiian Islands, the modes of transportation and of living was then given, a small model of a grass-thatched hut being used to illustrate a description of the native houses. The curiosities upon the table were taken up and their uses explained by the speaker, the next in order being a circle of yellow "eboli" feathers, valued at $500, similar to the one worn by Queen Kapiolani while she was in Boston. Then there was a necklace made of woven threads of human hair, clasped by a polished human bone, several beautiful specimens of "kapa," a kind of cloth made by beating out the bark of trees, which was patterned in rude, yet often harmonious, designs, by a block of wood in which various designs were cut; a pipe smoked by Kamehameha I., and some very fine rush matting. Native utensils, polished coconut bowls, rare wood made up into all sorts of dishes, and a calabash bottle covered with odd carving and inlaying.

Many other interesting articles from Mr. Gilman's collection were viewed by the ladies at the close of Mrs. Armstrong's earnest and charming talk. Mrs. B. Spaulding, who went out in the same ship with Mrs. Armstrong, is now on a visit to friends in Providence, her home being at Evanston, Ill. These two ladies, who went out to this field as brides, and who bade one another farewell on an island of the Pacific, will meet again after these many years at Mrs. Gilman's home, as Mrs. Spaulding is expected to arrive in Newton at any moment.

"The Prohibitionists are Nehemiah," Editor of the GRAPHIC:

As many men are inclined to make the way of the Politician plain, I will try with your kindness to explain some of the doings of Nehemiah 445 years before the birth of Jesus Christ. He came to the ancient city of Jerusalem from Shusan, to rebuild the walls, and his enemies made fun of him, scorned at him, and told him that a fox running over the walls would throw them down, but Nehemiah continued to lay one brick upon another. As he was building the walls they threatened him, but he placed an article of defence in one hand of his builders and the work went on, and when the walls were in such a condition that all people could see that they must be soon up in full, his enemies tried to hold a parley with Nehemiah. They wanted him to come down to them and make some arrangement, so that they would receive all the glory, but Nehemiah went on and finished the work that he was commissioned to do by the same God that ordered the first Temple erected. So far this is the teaching of the Bible in the days of Nehemiah, and history we find repeats itself. As the Republican party made a great deal of fun out of the Third Party in its infancy, thus the G. O. P. told of the ruin that would be sure to follow if we persisted in drawing the voters away from them. The wicked Democrats would get into the conduct of the government, and our nation would be lost indeed. They were appealing to our patriotism that we might save them. Then last year they asked us to come down and talk it over with them, that they would put a plank in to the platform so that the great people could say if they wanted prohibition, and they are tinkering the same plank this year, and begging us to come over and save them as the people of Macedonia asked St. Paul to do for them. Paul went, and helped them, but we are not going to be St. Paul this time, we are Nehemiah this year, and we are going to make a complete job of our repairing this year, and then we shall be in position to defend ourselves, and take the aggressive as did Nehemiah of old. This is the only way we can secure the destruction of this liquid damnation, this destroyer of the sons and daughters of our fair land. Let us use all our power to make this a Christian land, and vote as we pray; in fact let us be nothing short of prohibitionists, for temperance men and women are the ones that fill the drunkard's graves, not the total abstinence.

Words and Places.

It is amazing what an amount of curious and valuable information has been brought together by Isaac Taylor, an English Vicar, in his book bearing the above title, and published by MacMillan & Co. His object has been to trace the origin of names, and thus to note the history, which names embody and preserve. The book is a perfect treasury of rare facts and is probably the most complete work of the kind in our language.

Selecting at random some illustrations we know that the following derivations will not only instruct but perhaps surprise some to whom such study is new.

1. A Spruce person was originally a person dressed in the Prussian fashion, for Prussia and Spruce were interchangeable words.

2. Bosh, was imported from Africa, from the Cape region, the metaphor having been taken from the worthless bush which is burned every autumn. "It is all bosh," means it is worthless like the low rubbishy bush which must be cut and burned out of the way.

3. Derrick, a machine for raising heavy weights and galleys, perpetuates the memory of a hangman of the days of Elizabeth.

4. Worsteds, takes its name from Worsted, a village near Norwich, England.

5. Yankee, is probably an East Indian corruption of Anglois or English.

6. Shawl, is the name of a valley in Afghanistan.

7. Saracenet was originally a silken fabric, derived from the Saracens.

8. Farthing, is the fourthling or quarter of a penny.

9. Tariff, from the town Tarifa, whence the Moorish cruisers rallied forth to plunder vessels. Their plunder, however, was orderly and upon a fixed scale of payment. The sum thus paid became known as the tariff.

10. Assassin, from the name of a tribe of Syrian fanatics, who considered murder a religious duty.

Ladies' Wraps and Mantles.

On the corner of Essex and Chauncy streets, a few steps off Washington street, Boston, is the wholesale and retail ladies' cloak establishment of Messrs. Springer Bros. The show room of the latter department is one of the finest in the city, and displays to excellent advantage the high class goods to which the firm pays special attention. The department includes a custom department, and, in contradistinction from the generality of such houses, manufactures its own garments from imported materials, in the latest foreign styles. In seals they are showing some elegant long wraps, trimmed with deep otter. In long mantles in plush, in combination with striped and patterned silk stuffs, a variety of elegant garments, embroidered, heavily braided, beaded and finished in the latest and most approved fashions, many of the best having the long sleeve or wing. Short mantles are also shown in the same materials. For young ladies there are wraps in light-weight Scotch goods—most tasteful garments for fall and winter wear. In jackets they are showing some very neat and dressy garments in Gobelins blue, dark green and all the latest colors, many of them being embroidered in the most elaborate manner. The custom department is one of the most successful branches of the business, and its connection with the establishment renders it possible to satisfy the most exacting of tastes.

A Successful Firm.

For some weeks past many thousands have noticed the workmen engaged in making alterations in the large sandstone building at the corner of Washington and Sumner streets, but probably few suspected that A. Shuman & Co. were making another addition to their extensive warehouses. Such was the case, however, and now the improvements are practically completed.

On the Washington street floor the cashier's desks and the retail shipping department have been transferred to a more convenient location. This entire floor is crowded with suits, overcoats and garments of every description, for children and boys, either for dress or "school" wear, and a wide variety. The second story of the corner building has been fitted up for the firm, and is devoted exclusively to gentlemen's fine ready-made clothing of every description. It is reached from the second story of the adjoining building—so long occupied by the firm—by six steps, twenty-four feet wide, forming a most imposing entrance from the old quarters to the new. This gives a spacious suite of rooms extending from above the main entrance at No. 40 Washington street to the corner of Sumner street and down that thoroughfare to the entrance at No. 2. The new salesroom is fitted with substantial counters, so arranged as to give ample space for examining the goods, while the abundance of light in the room is cause for surprise and delight. Originally the Sumner street side was lighted by windows two feet apart, but in order to gain the best possible light, two of these windows have been thrown into one, making a superb effect and admitting the brightness of day to all parts of the floor, while numerous mirrors give added lustre to the place. A large additional show window has been added to the Washington street front, which is to be devoted entirely to the exhibition of fabrics, which can be cut and made to order in the gentlemen's custom department. This great firm now occupy six stories on Washington street and four bounded on Washington and Sumner streets. The record of this house commands it to everybody and it is a credit to the city to have such a justly celebrated clothing firm as Messrs. A. Shuman & Co. in its midst.

We are willing to bear personal testimony to the efficacy and value of Hood's Sarsaparilla, which we have been advertising some years in our paper, having used it for blood impurities with great success. It is a preparation of standard merit, made of perfectly pure ingredients, and thoroughly effective in cleansing and purifying the system. For eruptions, boils, etc., it can be relied upon every time. Our own experience with it has been most gratifying, and we are glad to give it this endorsement.—Athol (Mass.) Transcript.

I am Proud

to say from personal experience that Sulphur Bitters, which will be found in another column, is the best spring and blood medicine to be found. It is prepared by an honest firm who seem to use cheap and worthless medicines, but use the best that money can buy.—Editor.

Entered at Newton P. O. as Second Class Matter.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

The GRAPHIC will become a six column paper October 29th, the enlargement being rendered imperative by the increase in the advertising patronage of the paper. A year ago, an increase of six columns was made, but for the past six months we have been cramped for room, and from one to three columns of local matter has been crowded out every week, while for the past month we have been unable to accept all the new advertisements offered. The circulation of the paper has grown so rapidly under the present management that few suburban papers can show a larger list of subscribers, which fact advertisers seem to realize.

A contract has been made with the Babcock Printing Press Manufacturing Co. of New London, Conn., for one of their largest sized fast presses, with all the modern improvements, which is to be shipped at once, and be in readiness for printing the enlarged paper of October 29th. After this week the date of the paper will be changed to Friday, the day on which it is printed.

THE TEMPERANCE QUESTION.

Two prominent citizens of Newton were interviewed the past week in regard to this question, Hon. Robert R. Bishop and Col. Edward H. Haskell. Their views are of especial interest at this time, in view of the coming state election.

Mr. Bishop spoke especially of the duty of every voter who wishes to promote the cause of temperance. Let him vote for the third party candidates, he said, and the result will be to assist in defeating strong and sterling temperance men, nominees of the Republican party, to such an extent as to jeopardize temperance measures and the hope of temperance reform in the Legislature. His vote, if so thrown, will simply be in aid of the Democratic party and its measures, and will tend to secure the election of its candidates. If last year the Prohibitory party had not, by diverting the temperance vote, elected several Democratic members of the Senate, the public would not have now to lament the failure of admirable and important temperance measures passed by the House but defeated in the Senate. The Republican party is composed, by a large majority, of temperance men, and it is the only party which offers any hope of effective temperance legislation in the state, and it is the only party which offers any hope of effective temperance legislation in the future. Let the temperance man, then, unless he prefers the deluge, in the hope of dry land afterward, do everything in his power to strengthen the temperance sinew and nerve in the Republican party.

Col. Haskell, who has lately become a resident of Newton Centre, took an even more decided stand, and said "that the cause of temperance can be best promoted by an avowed determination of the Republican party in this state to take a manly stand, both in the state convention and in their legislative policy, the coming winter, against the saloon and its corrupting and demoralizing influences. Let them take this position squarely, and be prepared to defend it, not because of the temporary good, or bad effects it may have on the party, and without reference to the votes which may be gained or lost, but because this issue has become a paramount one to the great mass of our fellow-citizens, and is of the most vital concern, as a measure of public policy, also, to all our people. Let the Republican party take up this issue as one involving the highest moral considerations, as it did the slavery question, and there can be no doubt either as to the issue of such a contest or the ultimate beneficial effects that will accrue to it as a result of such action. I believe the time has come when the Republican party should champion the cause of temperance throughout the length and breadth of our land; and it should do it honestly, fearlessly and most vigorously."

Both of these gentlemen are leaders of the Republican party, and have great influence in its councils. Judging from their expressed views, they seem to be fully as much interested in the temperance cause as any of our Third Party friends.

The collection of local town histories in our Newton Library is respectable and highly appreciated. It might be extended so as to include, at least, those of Eastern Massachusetts, and are especially such as the recent History of Easton, the History of Dedham, of Dorchester, of Framingham and the towns adjoining, etc.

The Middlesex County Republican convention was held at East Cambridge, Thursday morning. J. Henry Reed of Westford was nominated by acclamation for county commissioner for three years. Mayor Kimball was re-elected one of the county committee.

The WALTHAM TRIBUNE does not like all the "slober, slober, slober" over the president's wife. This is evidently a new and aggravated case of spelling reform.

The fact that there is a demand for fine ready-made Clothing for Gentlemen, which, in all the essentials of variety, finish, fit and workmanship shall approach garments made to order, at a material saving in the price from custom-made habiliments, and ready for immediate use, induced us to arrange this floor and devote so large a space for a Gentlemen's Department.

—Mr. Geo. Breeden has just added a new piazza to his house on Walker street, which is in itself a great addition to the street as well as the house; it is nine feet wide and of very handsome design, and was wrought at the novelty wood works of Boston, and put up by Higgins & Nickerson of this village.

—On Sunday evening last, the young people of the Methodist church formed themselves into a society of Christian Endeavor. Delegates were present from the society connected with the Congregational church, who extended to the new society the congratulations of the old. Miss Nellie Wells is to lead the meeting next Sunday evening, at 6.45.

—The first meeting of the Goddard Literary Union took place Tuesday evening in the Universalist vestry. For the first meeting of the season, a good company were in attendance, and an interesting program was given, notwithstanding that many disappointments on both the literary and musical programs were experienced, because of the illness of proposed participants.

—Mr. P. Tancered of Boston, the purchaser of the Richardson estate on Highland avenue, has begun to make improvements by removing part of the ell and putting on a new one of handsome design in its stead, and with circular bay windows and wide piazza in the front, will add much to the attractions of the avenue. Higgins & Nickerson are doing the work.

—Mr. Avery on Crafts street is making considerable of an alteration to his residence on Crafts street, by adding a conservatory and bay window to his dining room, and fitting the room with oak floor and wainscoting, and finish throughout; the repairs are under the supervision of M. J. Brown, architect, which is a guarantee enough that everything will be in good taste.

—Charles Murphy, driver of Hook and Ladder No. 1, had a rather exciting time on South street, Boston, Sunday night, where he was set upon by two fellows, who attempted to rob him of his watch and chain. They found, however, that they had got hold of the wrong man, as Mr. Murphy defended himself with great skill and energy. In the fight the chain was broken, the ring pulled out of the watch and the crystal smashed, but he still held on to the watch. Two policemen, heard the disturbance and appeared in time to arrest the assailants. They gave the names of John Murray and Daniel Murray, and will probably be cautious about attacking a Newton fireman next time. Mr. Murphy had just missed the last train for Newton and was on his way to a hotel, when attacked.

—W. H. Earle, the prohibition candidate for governor, is to speak during the campaign in this village. The prohibitionists intend to thoroughly stump the state.

—More water mains have been laid the present season than in any other previous season since the water works were put in, and the same is true of service pipes. There are now over 80 miles of water mains in the city.

—St. Bernard's fair, in aid of the new parochial residence, has been well attended during the week, and a grand entertainment will be held in the basement of the church next Tuesday evening, for which extensive preparations have been made. Admission will be 25 cents with reserved seats 35 cents.

—The improvements at the Unitarian church are nearing completion, and it is possible for visitors who are willing to run the risk of new paint and plaster to get some idea of the changed appearance of the audience room. It is now being frescoed and the outside of the church is being painted two shades of brown.

—Messrs. F. G. Barnes & Son sold at public auction on Tuesday, Oct. 4, the former homestead of Dr. A. W. Whitney, on Washington street, comprising house, stable and 21,750 sq. ft. of land, to Dr. Fred E. Crockett, for the sum of $7,750 and the taxes of 1887. Dr. Crockett will occupy it for his own residence as soon as he can dispose of the lease of the house he now occupies.

—It is so very seldom that one of our prominent citizens ever attains to the great age of one hundred years, that we are glad to hear that there are efforts being made to secure two portraits of Mr. Seth Davis. One is to be painted from a daguerotype taken at the age of fifty years, to be presented by his former pupils to the Davis school, the other from sittings at the ripe old age of one hundred years. N. B. Onthank, the artist who painted his family portraits some twenty years ago, now has these portraits on his easel.

—Mr. A. R. Richards made one of the party which started Oct. 5th on the tourist special train for Philadelphia, Gettysburg and Washington. The trip was arranged by the Penn. R. R. Co. and the tourists are to travel in the new vestibule cars.

—The Ladies' Benevolent Society of the Congregational church held its annual meeting on Thursday afternoon. In the last year it sent four barrels of clothing to home missionaries, one to Hampton for needy pupils, and one to the poor in Boston.

—An excellent opportunity to study German is to be offered the ladies of this village by Miss Susie Aiken, who, we understand, intends starting some afternoon classes to meet twice a week under Fraulein Roth. The terms are very reasonable and the opportunity too good to be neglected.

—Rev. Mr. Metcalf arrived in New York from Europe on Monday, and was given a welcome home by his parish on Thursday afternoon and evening; the children called at his residence from 4 to 5 p.m., and the adult members from 7.30. The occasion was a very pleasant one, and all were glad to see Mr. Metcalf so much improved in health.

—Two men were seen about the premises of Mr. E. R. Frost on Auburn street last Sunday morning about 3 o'clock. They were trying to effect an entrance to the house at the back door, and upon being seen, and spoken to, they left hurriedly without explanations. It is thought that they attempted to enter other houses on the same night, but met with the same success everywhere.

—The 9th annual meeting of the W. C. T. U. Auxiliary was held on Saturday. Eight of the departments of work have been taken up in the past year. There are nearly fifty members, and they hope for better things than in the past, in this coming year. In the department of the flower mission the workers have sent 1535 texts and bunches of flowers to Homes, Hospitals and Prisons in Boston, occasionally, and regularly to the Reformatory Prison in Sherborn, where they were given to those who were trying to do well, and worn as a badge.

—On Tuesday evening, Oct. 4th, Miss Charlotte Fiske Bates of Cambridge, the well-known poetess, gave a delightful reading in the parlors of the Woodland Park Hotel. Miss Bates read entirely selections from her own poems, many of which are familiar to us through the columns of the Century Magazine. Her dialect pieces, among them "Risk" and "The Two Ants," are perhaps the best known. The sonnets on music and on autumn were especially well received, and a piece of poetic prose, entitled "The Confession of a Poet," charmed all. Several satiric poems on current subjects caused considerable amusement and applause, and the evening passed very pleasantly.

—At the Missionary concert on Sunday evening in the chapel of the Congregational church, an interesting talk on the Missionary work in Turkey was given by Rev. Mr. Lee of Marshfield. He spoke of the sufferings from famine in that region at this time, and said that generous as had been the response to the appeals made in their behalf, much more help would be required, for it would be several months before any crop could be raised there. All present were interested in listening to Dr. John Nembula, who came to this country with Rev. Stephen Pixley, a missionary of the A. B. C. F. M. among the Zulus. His grandmother was the first convert from heathenism among that people. He has been studying medicine, and recently graduated from the Chicago Medical school, and is soon to return to his native land to help his people by ministering to their physical needs, hoping to be the better able to aid them spiritually.

NEWTON LOWER FALLS.

—The mill of C. F. Crehore & Son is shut down for general repairs.

—At the meeting of the board of registrars at Boyden Hall on Wednesday evening, seven citizens were registered as voters.

—The new dam which has just been completed for the Dudley Hosiery Mills is now one of the strongest and best on the Charles.

—Many complaints are heard on account of the total eclipse of the electric lights on several very dark nights last week, especially Saturday night.

—Considerable interest is being taken in the petition to the Boston & Albany Railroad Co. for changing the name of our station, and a remonstrance against the proposed change, both of which documents have been circulated among the residents. Let us hope that when a change is made something more sensible and euphonious may be found than Wellesley Falls, which is even worse than the present appellation.

—A matter of far more importance to the railroad company and the residents of this vicinity than that of a new name for the station, is the fact that the Concord street crossing is a most dangerous place for men and horses, and since the addition of so many trains narrow escapes from serious, perhaps fatal accidents have become a thing of daily, almost hourly occurrence. Sooner or later this wanton carelessness will be paid for dearly, and it might be a matter of economy as well as of humanity to have the place properly protected by gates or a flagman, or both.

—Class For Dancing.

Miss Lilla Bell Viles will open a class for instruction in fashionable society dancing at the Allen School Hall, West Newton, Friday, Oct. 14, '87, from 4 to 6 p.m. Waltz, Polka and Schottische, correctly taught, also the novelties of the season. York, Military schottische, Alsatian polka, etc. The standard and lancers quadrille, plain and diagonal, also single and double formation. Terms, ten lessons, $4.00. Private lessons.

—A new furnace is being put into the North Evangelical church by Walker, Pratt & Co., of Watertown.

—John Miller, aged 46, who has been sick for several months, died at his home on Bridge street, Sunday evening.

—Mrs. John T. Lanman and Mrs. E. F. Jennison held a missionary meeting Wednesday afternoon in the vestry of the North church; the attendance was small.

—A slight fire occurred in the house of Wm. Thompson on Sunday evening, occasioned by the explosion of a lamp, and but for the timely efforts of Dr. Phillip Vincent the house would probably have been destroyed. Fifty dollars will pay all the damages; the house is owned by John Jones and is insured.

Beautiful For Goods.

It is very doubtful if there is a house in Boston that can produce a finer stock of fur goods of all kinds than that of Messrs. George N. Higelow & Company. Their display of muffs, for instance, is in a word faultless. It is not only the different rich skins, but also the neat work put into them that tells. Skilled employees work for this firm under the supervision of Mr. O. A. Jenkins, junior member of the firm, and are among the best furriers anywhere to be found. Some of the richest specialties are also in the possession of this house, the most wonderful of which are three pure white otter skins which are very rare, and people who have been in the fur business many years say they never saw a pure white otter skin before. Another attraction is a luxurious Iceland lamb robe, also white and of the finest and softest wool. Still another feature are the fine bear sets, superb seal saques, etc. Beside the above, a large and varied stock of gents silk and beaver hats are found here, this firm being agents for the celebrated Heath's London hats. Goods in this line are also made to order. This large store is very light and nicely arranged for the comfort of patrons. The arrangements of the ladies' department are especially excellent.

OCTOBER MAGAZINES.

SCRIBNER'S.

The October number of Scribner's Magazine shows the same keen editorial discrimination, and the same vigorous apprehension of what a great magazine should be, that have marked the earlier number of this notably successful literary enterprise. "Caverns and Caves" is richly illustrated with views of noted caverns, grottoes, lava-caves and sea-chasms. Professor Shaler describes the various groups of caverns, clearly explaining how each variety has been produced. He also gives some useful hints about explorations, and discusses the modifications of animal structure produced by living in caves. Another paper of interest is the thoughtful article by Gamaliel Bradford. The leading article is a richly illustrated description of "The Paris School of Fine Arts," by Henry O. Avery, who is a graduate of that institution, and writes with true appreciation. The illustrations were made from the handsomely photographed of the buildings, which are exclusively made by the French Government. E. H. House's charming Japanese story, "The Sacred Flame of Torii Ji," is concluded in this number. It is exquisitely illustrated. Octave Thunet contributes a strong and pathetic story of the Arkansas river-bottoms, entitled "The Mortgage on Jeff," which contains a very original motive and fine character-drawing. Under the title of "In the Village of Viger," Mr. Duncan C. Scott contributes several charming character-sketches of Canadian village life. The poetry of the number includes a delicate tribute to Thackeray by H. C. Bunner, entitled "On Reading Certain Published Letters of W. M. T.," a sonnet called "Freedom," by Elvot Weld; and poems by Graham R. Tomson and Charles Edwin Markham.

THE CENTURY.

College men will turn first in the October Century, to the paper on "The American Game of Foot-ball," written by Professor Alexander Johnston of Princeton, in which the development of the Rugby game on this side of the Atlantic is described, and interesting aspects of the game are considered. This paper is admirably illustrated with spirited drawings by Irving R. Wiles. The frontispiece of the number is a striking portrait of Harriet Beecher Stowe, engraved by T. Johnson from a photograph by Sarony. This portrait is apropos of a paper by James Lane Allen, entitled, "Mrs. Stowe's 'Uncle Tom at Home in Kentucky,'" which recounts the life of the Kentucky slave of the old time, in a series of typical scenes. The illustrations, by Mr. Kemble, drawn from life, reproduce characteristically the epoch which Mr. Allen describes. The Lincoln History and the war papers are of the usual interest and value. It is announced that the battle series will close in the November number. Mr. Stockton's "The Hundredth Man" is concluded, and of course ends with a surprise for the reader—else it could not be by Mr. Stockton. Mr. Stedman contributes a paper of criticism, entitled "Twelve Years of British Song." The poetry of the number includes contributions by Richard E. Burton, Ellen M. H. Gates, Julia C. R. Dorr, Samuel W. Duffield, Sarah M. B. Piatt, Helen Gray Cone, Louise Imogen Guiney, and Robert Burns Wilson. An open letter on "Secret Societies in College," by Rev. Charles S. Robinson, is of timely interest.

St. Nicholas for October is the last but not the least excellent number of the current volume. A charming story by Miss Alcott, with which it opens, lends strength to the hope that there are more to come in the new year of St. Nicholas. The present story is entitled "An Ivy Spray." Frank R. Stockton contributes one of his capital personally conducted papers, on "The Low Countries and the Rhine," with abundant illustrations of the many interesting scenes described. "General Grant at Vicksburg" is the title of General Adam Badeau's war story, which is pleasantly supplemented by a very clever Southern sketch, "Ole Mammy Pissy," by Jessie C. Glasier, the author of the amusing story, "A Gunpowder Plot," in the July number. There are four characteristic illustrations by E. W. Kemble. John R. Coryell tells about the curious habits of an absurd bird with the queer name Kiwi-Kiwi, and Mary J. Safford writes about a self-respecting and knowing dog that stopped a mutiny. George J. Manson tells ambitious youths how they may become successful dry-goods merchants; while boys of a more literary turn may gain encouragement from "The Boyhood of John Greenleaf Whittier," as told by W. H. Rideing. Nora Perry, Mary Mapes Dodge, Rosseter Johnson, Frank Sherman, Alice Wellington Rollins, Junia Stafford, and Margaret Vandegrift are among the other contributors.

The Atlantic Monthly for October opens with a series of letters edited by Lucetta P. Hale and Edwin Lassetter Byrner, which are published under the title of "An Un-closeted Skeleton." Whether they really are old letters, or a clever story into the form of correspondence, the reader must discover for himself. Dr. Holmes's final paper in his series is given in "Our Hundred Days in Europe." The tragic incident in the installment of Mrs. Oliphant's serial serves to bring out that power which she never shows to better advantage than when she depicts some sudden and terrible occurrence in the midst of the prosaic surroundings of every-day life. Percival Lowell has a second paper on "The Soul of the Far East," in which he gives a very amusing and interesting account of the curiosities of Japanese language and expression; while Mr. Theodore Child gives an account of Millet and the Millet exhibition in Paris. There is also a bright and readable paper composed of anecdotes of Charles Reade, an article on the "Blue-bird," poems by Helen Gray Cone, entitled "Two Moods of Failure," a Royalist song of 1645 being contrasted with a Puritan song of 1660. Under the title of "A Second Glance Backward" Susan Fenimore Cooper gives an account of her father's endeavor to have an American book printed in Italy about 1825, and also gives descriptions of Cooper's Italian life. The number concludes with a continuation of Crawford's "Paul Patoff," two able reviews, Books of the Month, and the Contributor's Club. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston.

The popularity of Frank R. Stockton as a story writer is attested by the fact that the Scribner's have sold over 110,000 copies of his books; and the 30th thousand of Mrs. Burnett's delightful story, "Little Lord Fauntleroy," is announced by the same house.

The special Christmas number of Scribner's Magazine is already printing, to provide for the unusually large edition both in England and America.

Sore Eyes

The eyes are always in sympathy with the body, and afford an excellent index of its condition. When the eyes become weak, and the lids inflamed and sore, it is an evidence that the system has become disordered by Scrofula, for which Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best known remedy.

Scrofula, which produced a painful inflammation in my eyes, caused me much suffering for a number of years. By the advice of a physician I commenced taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. After using this medicine a short time I was completely

Cured

My eyes are now in a splendid condition, and I am as well and strong as ever.—Mrs. William Gage, Concord, N. H.

For a number of years I was troubled with a humor in my eyes, and was unable to obtain any relief until I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine has effected a complete cure, and I believe it to be the best of blood purifiers.—C. E. Upton, Nashua, N. H.

From childhood, and until within a few months, I have been afflicted with Weak and Sore Eyes. I have used for these complaints, with beneficial results, Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and consider it a great blood purifier.—Mrs. C. Phillips, Glover, Vt.

I suffered for a year with inflammation in my left eye. Three ulcers formed on the ball, depriving me of sight, and causing great pain. After trying many other remedies, to no purpose, I was finally induced to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and three bottles of this medicine, have been entirely cured. My sight has been restored, and there is no sign of inflammation, sore, or ulcer in my eye.—Kendall T. Bowen, Sugar Tree Ridge, Ohio.

My daughter, ten years old, was afflicted with Scrofulous Sore Eyes. During the last two years she never saw light of any kind. Physicians of the highest standing exerted their skill, but with no permanent success. On the recommendation of a friend I purchased a bottle of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which my daughter commenced taking. Before she had used the third bottle her sight was restored, and she can now look steadily at a brilliant light without pain. Her cure is complete.—W. E. Sutherland, Evangelist, Shelby City, Ky.

Cutler; treasurer, John J. Noble; directors, W. H. Gould, C. E. Richardson and Dr. F. E. Banfield. —The first of a series of monthly sermons at the Unitarian church was at 7 o'clock, Sunday evening, by the Rev. A. A. Brooks of Greenfield. His sermon was a very interesting one. He said that "we are the sons of God, and therefore to forget men is to forget God. Our duties to God lie largely along our course of contact with our fellowmen. The poor, the unfortunate, we know something about; they receive from us some attention. The rich, those distinguished for any reason, receive our attention. If any one goes over Niagara Falls in a barrel, we at once find out all about him. But the middle class, unless the few who happen to be agreeable to us, we know but little about, and that little is mostly of their outside life, and the inner is usually better. Men are better than they seem. The world is full of those who cry for our help. If our hearts are right we will see enough to help. We should know ourselves, but it is not well to be forever peering into our own souls to see how good we are. The most interesting people perhaps most demand our sympathies. We are all brethren, so let us extend help where it is most needed, and let us be true."

—Rev. L. C. Barnes, who has been called as pastor of the Baptist church, has an interesting record in his chosen work. He is a graduate Kalamazoo College, Mich., and of Newton Theological Institution. His first pastorate of three years, was in St. Paul, Minn., from which place he went to Pittsburg, in August, 1882, and during the more than five years of his labor there 335 additions have been made to the church, of which number 177 have been received by baptism. The net increase has been 237, and the whole number of members, May 1, 1887, was 608. Besides a growth in membership there has been a marked development in Christian work, as is seen in the establishment and prosecution of an industrial school and two prominent Bible schools. During the first year of the pastorate, ending in the autumn of 1883, less than $3,000 were raised for missionary objects. In the year ending in the autumn of 1886, more than $9,000 were raised for such objects.

—The prettiest wedding of the season in Newton Centre was that of Miss Hattie Fay to Mr. H. Russell Reynolds of Dorchester. The ceremony took place in the Unitarian church, Oct. 5th, and was performed by the Rev. Grindall Reynolds, uncle of the groom, assisted by Rev. Horace L. Wheeler, pastor of the church. A great deal of taste was shown by the young lady friends of the bride in the arrangement of the decorations. Potted plants and flowers covered the platform and on either side of it were mounds of beautiful autumn wild flowers and leaves. The church was quickly filled with gentlemen and ladies in evening costumes. Many elegant toilets were noticed among the latter. Soon after 8 o'clock the doors were thrown open, and to the strains of the "Bridal March," from Lohengrin, played by Mr. Lynes of St. Paul's in Boston, the bridal party entered. The six ushers led, followed by the bridesmaids, Miss Reynolds of Dorchester, sister of the groom, and Miss Fenno of Brookline. Last entered the bride, leaning on the arm of Mr. Babcock, who gave her away. The bride was dressed in a plain, white corded silk, with court train and long tulle veil, extending to the hem of her dress. She carried in her hand a bunch of white roses. The bridesmaids wore dresses of a new shade of yellow, which attracted much attention. Another dress much admired was a blue satin of an exquisite shade, worn by the bride's sister. After the ceremony a reception was held at the house of the bride's mother, lasting until 10 p. m. The bride and groom left immediately for an extended tour, including Montreal, Quebec, Thousand Islands, Lake Champlain, Lake George, Saratoga, and Newport. After their return Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds will reside in Dorchester. They were the recipients of many beautiful and valuable presents, among them two checks of $1,000 each. The ushers were Messrs. Pope, Ellis, Farrington and Stevens, and Mr. Henry Anderson acted as best man.

—Mrs. S. C. Cobb has commenced a cellar for another house on the corner of Chester street and Hillside avenue. It would be of much benefit to the Highlands if Chester street were accepted by the city.

—Mr. E. P. Seaver at Waban has opened a bank on his premises. It is a bank of sand of very choice quality for mason's use. It is being used in the construction of the Baptist church at Newton Centre.

—The Monday club met with Mrs. Phipps and were addressed by Miss Norton of Honolulu, Sandwich Islands, on the Mormon problem. There was a large attendance, and several new members joined the club.

—Mr. Watson has commenced the making of a new street through his land, from Columbus to Chester street. We would suggest that the new street be called Dana street, in honor of Rev. S. H. Dana, the first pastor of the Congregational Society.

—The number of scholars attending the Hyde School at the present time is two hundred, which number is thirty-six less than two years ago. This is accounted for by several families with several children in each moving away, and their places taken by families with children too young to attend the public schools.

—The adjourned land sale of two hundred and seventy-five house lots on Woodward and some unoccupied streets, took place on Wednesday. This is the largest sale of house lots that has ever taken place in this vicinity. The sale was conducted very successfully by Mr. Elliott J. Hyde, who reports every lot sold at satisfactory prices. About 50 were taken by Newton parties, and the rest by bidders from Boston.

—The annual meeting of the Congregational sewing circle was held in the chapel on Wednesday, and the following persons were elected officers for the coming year: President, Mrs. S. C. Cobb; vice president, Mrs. Logan; treasurer, Mrs. Nash; directors, Mrs. Lovings, Mrs. Pottle, Mrs. Terry, Mrs. Denison, Mrs. Eagles, Miss A. Webster; voted to hold the meetings of the society at the chapel, the gentlemen to be invited to attend a supper and sociable in the evening.

Health Lectures.

The New York World publishes the following eulogistic cablegram regarding an American lady who has just returned to the United States after an absence of six years in Europe: The success abroad of the lectures of Mrs. Anna Longshore-Potts, (an American woman who won her full right to practice of medicine by hard study and a rigorous examination), has been almost phenomenal both in London, Paris, and the chief provincial cities of England, Ireland, and Scotland. She delivered her first health lecture at Great St. James Hall, London, in 1885. *** Mrs. Potts is held in high esteem by the British public at large, as well as by the medical profession. Her success is a compliment to the Women's Medical College of Philadelphia. *** Mrs. Potts holds advanced but not fanatical ideas. She has been successful in Great Britain, not only as a lecturer, but as a practitioner. —[London Cablegram.]

CLAFLIN GUARD ANNIVERSARY.

ITS 17TH BIRTHDAY CELEBRATED ON MONDAY EVENING.

The 17th anniversary of the Clafin Guards was celebrated at their Armory on Monday evening, with the assistance of a large number of City government officials and fine members. The hall was handsomely decorated with flags and Japanese lanterns, the stage filled with evergreens, and the long tables for the banquet arranged in the form of a hollow square upon the floor. They were decorated with a great variety of flowers and fruits, and presented a very attractive sight as the company sat down to dinner, which was served in Mr. Paxton's best style. The Waltham orchestra occupied a position on the stage and discoursed fine music during the dinner and at intervals afterwards.

The invited guests occupied seats at the head of the hall and included Rev. Mr. Hornbrooke, Adjutant Benyon and Lieut. Edes of Col. Bancroft's staff, Ex-Alderman Powers, George S. Jones, H. B. Parker, Lieut. French of Co. A, Captain John C. Kenrick, Representative Walworth, I. N. Peabody, Sheriff Tucker, Dr. Webber, H. C. Daniels, Walter Stearns, City Engineer Noyes, J. W. Follett, and a number of other fine members; Mayor Kimball, Col. Kingsbury, and a large delegation of aldermen and councilmen arrived later, after the meeting at City Hall had adjourned.

After full justice had been done to the banquet, Captain Kennedy, who wore his new honors very gracefully, called the assembly to order, and made the introductory address, in which he referred to his 13 years service in the company, beginning as a private and rising through all the grades of rank until he had attained to his present position. He paid a high compliment to the company for its excellent record, not only in military but in moral matters. It had no reason to be ashamed of the record of the company at any of the annual encampments. At the last one, the company sent 61 men, and not one of them failed to report for duty every day. No liquor was taken to the camp, as was the custom with some companies, and both officers and men were sober, and the Clafin Guards stood at the head of the list in this respect. Captain Kennedy then introduced in a very pleasant manner who said that his military experience was so brief he hardly dared address such a company. He had been thinking that the company was indebted to him in one respect, however, and that was for his part in getting his people out of the building, so that it might be occupied by the company. A train that was passing during Mr. Hornbrooke's remarks, enabled the company to understand why the church left the building. Mr. Hornbrooke said that he was perhaps entitled to a pension, as he had borne a musket one day during the war when the town in which he lived was alarmed by the report that Morgan's men were coming. The militia in times of peace was often disparaged, but it should be remembered that to have peace we must be prepared to fight for it, and that an organized force is often necessary for the protection of society. Though the militia may never fight, it would if there were occasion, and its existence would do much to prevent the occasion arising. At the time of Morgan's raid, a company of a thousand untrained men was captured by 50 of his well disciplined force, which proved the importance of training and discipline. To do the most effective work, a militia must be well organized, and though you may never have to do such work, we are confident you will do your duty if the occasion should arise, and that you will acquit yourselves like men in the hour of trial.

Mr. E. H. Frye of Wellesley was then introduced, and gave some humorous recitations, which were received with laughter and applause, especially the story of Captain Dempsy's speech.

Captain Kennedy said that there was no question of the expediency of maintaining a state militia, as had been proved by the street railway riots at Cambridge last spring when Mayor Russell called out the militia; the riot ceased at once. In this city, in 1876, when the water works were being put in, there was a riot among the Italians employed upon the work, and the Clafin Guards were ordered to be in readiness for service, but fortunately they were not required. He then introduced the chief executive officer of the city, as a man who appreciated the importance of a local military company.

MAYOR KIMBALL

was received with great applause, and apologized for the lateness of the hour at which the members of the city government arrived. He congratulated the company on the completion of its 17 years of existence, and presented the regrets of ex-Gov. Clafin, after whom the company was named, who was kept away by another engagement, but wished to have the company know of his interest in their welfare. Mayor Kimball said that he agreed perfectly with Captain Kennedy, as to the importance of having a well-organized State militia and he was very glad that Newton had a company, and the beautiful Armory was evidence that the city government was liberally disposed toward the company. We have no standing armies in this country, because the people themselves take part in the government and are patriotic and intelligent, but there are times when some organized force is needed. The expense of maintaining the militia was not large, and he was sure that the city government would grant any reasonable request of the company, and their record entitled them to every consideration. He congratulated the company on its recent excellent choice of officers, and on the good feeling and enthusiasm that prevailed in the ranks, and he assured them of the best wishes and support of the people of Newton.

EX-ALDERMAN POWERS.

The mention of his name was received with applause, and Mr. Powers said that he came as a soldier citizen. He had been a soldier and knew his duties. Every government was more or less based on force, and there had to be force to execute the laws. The duties of a member of the state

EAT PERFECT BREAD!

Nature's Great Vital Energy Recuperator.

Wheat, a natural food, contains all the fifteen elements found in the human body, and chemical analysis shows all natural foods, vegetable and animal, contain these same fifteen elements and nearly in the same proportion as the human body. Deficiency of vitalizing elements is the trouble with fine flour.

ARLINGTON WHEAT MEAL.

(AN UNEQUALLED FOOD FOR ALL.)

This differs from the Graham flour of Commerce in being ground from the WHOLE GRAIN of the choicest Selected White Wheat. In the coverings of the Wheat are the Phosphates which go to constitute bone and muscle, and materially assist digestion by causing the rapid decomposition of the food. It is in this way the Phosphates in ARLINGTON WHEAT MEAL act, giving new power and strength to the system.

Reasons Why it is Preferable to Flour. REGIMEN AND DIET.

Every effort of the mind or movement of a muscle involves the expenditure or waste of nervous energy and vitality, in proportion to the magnitude of the effort; these wasted products pass off with effete substances from the body, while recuperation is effected by nutrition. The loss of Physical force by using Common Flour is immense, which analysis proves. See Facts.

ANALYSIS.—WHEAT VS. FLOUR.

Flour is the only impoverished food used by mankind—impoverished by the withdrawal of the tegumentary portion of the wheat, leaving the internal or starchy portion. See the facts! In chemistry we find that in 100 parts of substance—

Wheat has an ash of 17.7 parts; Flour an ash of 4.1 parts,—an impoverishment of over three-quarters.

Wheat has 82 parts of Phosphoric Acid. Flour 2.1 parts of Phosphoric Acid,—an impoverishment of about three-quarters.

Wheat has 0.6 Lime, and 0.6 Soda.— Flour 0.1 Lime and 0.1 Soda,—an impoverishment of five-sixths Lime and Soda each.

Wheat has Sulphur 1.5; flour has no Sulphur.

Wheat has Silicic Acid 0.3; flour has no Silicic Acid. Wheat has Silica 0.3; Flour has no Silica.

Pure Wheat Meal Contains More Life Sustaining Properties Than any Other Food.

The history of the Roman Empire in the time of Julius Caesar shows that wheat, as an article of food, combined with fresh outdoor air life, is capable of producing and sustaining the highest type of physical manhood the world ever saw. The empire was built up and maintained by soldiers whose main article of food was wheat.

Dogs fed by Magendie (vide Kirks & Page's Physiology) on flour, died in forty days; other dogs fed on wheat meal flourished and thrived. The three-fourths impoverishment of the mineral ingredients proved fatal to the first. Why should mankind suffer from living on impoverished food as they do?

People who live mostly upon flour will, if they use the Arlington Wheat Meal, find their expenses in this department diminished three-fourths. The Wheat Meal will go farther and give four times as much nutriment as an equal amount of flour.

Laboring men can do their work with less exhaustion, because it contains more Sustaining Forces than any other food.

It is a natural food for every Brain Worker, containing the necessary Elements to strengthen the Brain. Children who feed on this need never be troubled with Cholera Infantum which destroys so many children.

Many Cases of Dyspepsia of long duration, have been cured by eating Wheat Meal, and it is a POSITIVE CURE FOR CONSTIPATION.

The Meal makes the best Gravel for the Sick, and Porridge equal to Oat Meal.

The Arlington Wheat Meal has been on the market for the past 12 years, and has the HIGHEST REPUTATION. Being ground from the best pure wheat, it furnishes to the public the means of supplying a perfect food. Its quality as it leaves the Arlington Mills is guaranteed to be of a superior excellence and purity. Beware of imitations. Ask your grocer for it, and take no other. Trade supplied by Whole Grocers. SAMUEL A. FOWLE, Proprietor, Arlington, Mass.

militia were not all mere play, as some of the croakers would find if they had to mount guard at the general encampment. A man was a better citizen for having served a term in a military company. He knew what it was to obey orders, and to maintain discipline. Militia men were not dudes, which diseases affected many of our young men. They were growing up with no manliness, no character, no ideas, and the best way to impart some of these necessary qualities to them, would be to put them in a good military company. The Clafin Guards has his best wishes for their success under their new commander.

COL. I. F. KINGSBURY

was then introduced as the first commander of the company, and as a veteran who knew what war was, and who had filled every office held by him with distinction. Col. Kingsbury was rather taken back at the enthusiastic applause which greeted him, but spoke of his interest in the company, and the exemplification of civil service rules it had given by electing its present commander. The company had a splendid record, and had kept it up from the start. It was an honor to the city, and as such was fully appreciated. Col. Kingsbury made an excellent speech, and closed with a very amusing anecdote.

ADJUTANT BENYON

was next called upon, as a representative of the Colonel of the regiment, who was unavoidably absent. The company gave its recent captain the most enthusiastic reception. He said that he could say without prejudice that there was not in the state a better disciplined or better organized company, or one that was better prepared for active work. It had no shirks in the ranks, and he hoped the good work would go on, and that the list of fine members would increase until it embraced every citizen of Newton.

responded in his usual happy manner, and said that although not a military man, he was always pleased to read of the successes of the company, and was proud of its position and its record.

MR. HENRY E. COBB, who had just arrived from another meeting, was then called upon, as a former active member of the company, and a citizen who still kept up his interest in it. Mr. Cobb said that as one of the original members of the company, he had a peculiar interest in it, and he gave some interesting incidents of his experience as a soldier, among them being the guard duty it performed at the time of the great Boston fire.

REPRESENTATIVE WALWORTH,

a former captain, was the next speaker, and said that he congratulated the company on its choice of a captain. He had been the first to discover the military genius which burned in his breast, and had promoted him from a private to the rank of Corporal. Mr. Walworth then gave an interesting account of the militia legislation in the last legislature, and the ease with which the state militia had been increased by twelve companies, and the other amendments passed. He was glad to say that Company C had always been a temperance company, and one that the people of the city had been proud of.

J. W. FOLLETT

was called upon as a citizen, who could give points to Captain Kelly of the Boston nine, and won the applause of the company by proposing himself as a fine member.

ALDERMAN HOLLS

was called on to respond for the Grand Army Veterans, and after other speeches the anniversary exercises came to an end. Captain Kennedy received many compliments for the happy way in which he introduced the speakers, and for the success of everything connected with the anniversary.

Every wife and mother in the country should know the great value of Ayer's Sarsaparilla as a blood purifier. It gives tone, health and strength to the vital organs, cures all irregularities, and expels impurities from the system. Young and old use it. Price 25¢.

Perfect health, strength, vital energy and activity of the human mind and body depend on natural food, and cannot be developed and maintained by other than natural food. Starch is a mere heater, and articles of food that are mere heaters afford no nourishment for bone, brain, nerves, muscles or any solid parts of the body. Three times the heating elements required are generally received into our bodies as food, where we eat nothing but flour bread, sugars, fats, and various forms of carbon—all pure heat—which are found in our food, morning, noon and night. The grand distinction between the elements that merely add a little fat and heat to the system and those other elements which build up and nourish all parts, is the key to the whole science of health. We should eat simply natural food, which does not overheat, burden and constipate the body, and on which we can live by using a much smaller quantity, and have clearer heads and stronger bodies, without the injurious effects on health and longevity; and the whole body sufficiently sustained and weakened. We should eat such food as will properly nourish every part of our bodies; the vital organs should not be left to suffer from improper food and to break down in common with other parts with disease—particularly lung disease. The heat is the heat, as are wanting in nitrogen and phosphorus. Poor food makes poor blood, the prime cause of consumption.

CONGREGATIONAL CLUB.

FIRST MEETING AFTER THE SUMMER VACATION.

About one hundred members and guests of the Newton Congregational Club gathered in the pleasant parlors of the Second Church, West Newton, on Monday evening. The doors were opened at 5 o'clock and supper was served at 6. Rev. W. S. Smith invoking the divine blessing. At 7.30 the exercises of the evening were commenced, the intervening time having been devoted to social intercourse.

Rev. Mr. Evans of Nonantum opened the meeting with prayer. President Hyde occupied the chair and spoke briefly. Rev. H. J. Patrick, the delegate to the meeting of Congregational clubs at Salem, reported a hearty reception and a good time. President Hyde, who also attended the gathering, added that Brother Patrick rather astonished the Salemites by his fire and eloquence.

REV. CALVIN CUTLER, on behalf of the Outlook Committee, said that they found it hard to exercise their functions at present, as there is something in the atmosphere that prevents clear vision. A grand opportunity exists for the exercise of Christian charity and forbearance. Discussion is not to be feared, for the days of bitterness and strife are never to return. In our own city all the pastors are with their flocks again with the exception of one "Lamb," who is absent, but whose place is filled by another whom we are glad to have with us to-night. One of the societies has begun work on a new house of worship, and looking over the fence, as we are permitted to do, we find the Baptist church at Newton Centre erecting a handsome temple of worship. Above, the sky is clear, and the Holy Spirit waits to descend on the churches. The committee believes the time is ripe for a great awakening, and asks if some earnest, wise evangelist may not be the means of starting the movement?

The executive committee had no report to make. President Hyde spoke of the failure of the members to reply to the notices sent out, and their failure to come sometimes when they had signified their intention of so doing, entailing loss upon the club which provided suppers for them.

Reuel W. Waters was proposed for membership by D. S. Farnham, the nomination going over until next meeting as required by the rules. Messrs. Wm. O. Knapp and Geo. Churchill were unanimously elected members of the club.

REV. F. E. CLARK, late pastor of the Phillips church, South Boston, opened the discussion of the question of the evening—"Conditions of Success in our Christian work in the immediate future." Mr. Clark was a Newton boy, his father having been pastor of the church at Abundant. For several years he has been pastor of the old Phillips church, a post just relinquished to devote his whole time to the work of the Christian Endeavor Societies, of which he was the founder, and is now the National President. The primal condition of success, said Mr. Clark, is the presence of the Holy Spirit. This is a universal condition of success in church work. But there are three conditions which are peculiarly necessary to-day. The first of these is a definiteness of conviction. The world to-day turns to the Christian church for a definite answer to the great fundamental questions affecting the life to come. We must be able to say we know absolutely the truth of the essentials of Christian belief. Doubt on our part may mean the loss of many souls.

A second condition was a definiteness of expectation. This looking for success is the secret of the success of a wise evangelist. In the spring the crop is sown and in the autumn the farmer expects the harvest. So it should be in the church. Let us prepare the field, looking to the week of prayer as our harvest-time when we shall gather the fruits of our labor. More should be made of the week of prayer which is the climax of the year. The work must be done before, but why should we not expect at this season to reap a bountiful harvest?

Definiteness of organization is the third condition of success. Cold, formal organization will not accomplish the end, but a thorough organization full of life and spirit can do a great work. We find organization in the material world all around us, especially in Massachusetts where there is machinery capable of producing as much as half the working population of the world, 100,000,000, using brawn and muscle only. If organization in the industrial world is so successful, why should it not be employed in church work? Mr. Clark here referred to the work accomplished in South Boston by organization, without which he could never have reached success, and set the congregation to work. For after all, he continued, the unit is the individual, and God works through each one of us for the conversion of the world.

After singing "Just as I am" by the company, Mr. Clark in reply to a question of Mr. Gilman, gave an outline of the organization in his church. The young people are organized into ten committees of five each, which are changed every six months. Each committee has its own special field of labor, and makes a monthly report of its work. The ladies also have their committees and societies. On the last night of his pastorate four reports were presented from the Sunday School, the Ladies Societies, the Christian Endeavor Society, and the Chapel Committee. He had always made it a point to be present, and assist the young people at their meetings, and always kept himself informed of their work.

REV. H. J. PATRICK thought that in Newton with its seven scattered churches, it was impossible to do what had been done in South Boston in the way of mapping out the work. But much could be done, and he offered as three conditions for success: first, a better acquaintance with each other; second, a heartier, warmer fellowship; third, a concerted action for the conversion of souls. The seven churches in Newton should do a magnificent work, but what were they really doing for the conversion of souls?

Too many look upon the church as a place of privilege, said REV. W. S. SMITH, and not as a place in which to work for Christ's Kingdom. Each should ask the question, "Is there any part of the work from which I would be missed, were I to be taken away?" God puts us in a special church for a special work, and we should do something for Him.

REV. G. C. PHIPPS

compared the moral force of a church to the accumulated power in the balance wheel of a machine, which enables it to punch cold steel. The power in the wheel is so great that the punch must be forced through the steel or something give way. So it should be in a church. There should be that moral force which enables the pastor to accomplish whatever he attempts. Each individual must be equal to the strain put upon him, or the machine becomes shaky and cannot do its work.

DR. D. G. HARRINGTON

thought that the pastors should direct the efforts at organization, and lay out the work for the churches.

of West Newton thought what Mr. Patrick had said of the seven churches of Newton, was true of each one. We should all of us feel the necessity of individual effort, and try to help each other to it. A church may be thoroughly organized, and have the Spirit present, but unless there be some one to begin the work it will never be accomplished.

The next meeting of the club will be held Nov. 21, an amendment to the by-laws providing that the third Monday of every month be the date of the meeting having been passed.

City Government.

Both branches of the City Council held short sessions on Monday evening, the board of aldermen holding a special meeting to confirm an election officer. All the members but Alderman Harwood were present, and Mayor Kimball presided.

THE FIRE RECORD.

Chief Bixby presented his report for the quarter ending Sept. 30, 1887, of the fires in the city. There were 11 alarms, 7 from signal stations and 4 still alarms and by telephone. Seven buildings were damaged, and the loss was $1,220; the insurance paid was $111,50; the loss on contents was $540 and the insurance paid was $500. The total insurance at risk was $18,500. Six of the fires were incendiary, three from fireworks and 1 from matches; 2,600 feet of hose were used, 226 feet of ladders, and the miles traversed by the fire companies were 27. The time of the firemen was 23 hours and 70 minutes.

Milo F. Hargaden was confirmed as deputy clerk of Ward 3.

The bill of the water department for the water used in sprinkling the streets was presented; 14,438,710 gallons have been used, and the bill was $1,975.04. This leaves but $20 of the appropriation for watering the streets, which is the reason why the watering carts was taken off last Saturday.

The order for a plank sidewalk on Hammond street, Ward 6, from Ward to Beacon, to cost $700, was reported with the approval of the Highway committee, and was passed.

Alderman Johnson presented the application of Chas. Lawrence for license to erect a stable on Newtonville avenue, Ward 2, corner of Harvard street, 30 by 30. I. N. Peabody applied for license to erect a shed for storage in Ward 7, 20 by 10 feet. Wm. Pettigrew gave notice of his intention to erect a dwelling house on Aspen avenue, Ward 4, 35 by 55 feet; and one on Chestnut street, Ward 3, 48 by 42, to be built of wood and stone.

The Newton Centre associates asked for a street lamp on Pleasant street, to light the entrance of the new reading room.

THE COMMON COUNCIL.

In the common council, President Coffin presided, and Councilmen Kennedy, Moody and Pond were absent. Business from the board of aldermen was disposed of in concurrence.

The order appropriating $2,500 for the use of the Highway department caused some debate, and at first failed to receive the necessary two thirds vote. Councilman Powell voting no. After the arrival of other members, Councilman Powell moved a reconsideration, and the order was passed unanimously.

After other routine business, both branches adjourned at 7.45.

The New Theology.

The attitude of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions towards the so-called new theology, has become a matter of public interest and is meeting with rather severe condemnation. Hon. R. R. Bishop says of it:

"I think the conduct of the extremists on the side of the majority in the American Board, before and during the meeting, unworthy of themselves and of Congregationalism. I by no means say this of all, and do not mean to say that the extremists have consciously started out of set purpose to do a wrong act, but they are given over to partisan zeal. The campaign edition of the Independent, sent gratuitously to everybody before the meeting, and distributed by the cartload at Springfield, was a thoroughly unwarranted attack upon Professor Smyth on the Sabbath question, coming out in this number too late for contradiction, it reminded me of similar attacks upon political candidates on the eve of elections. In the arguments at the meeting the extremists insisted upon their own interpretation of their opponents' views, that is, they set up a man of straw, painted him the color they saw, and proceeded to knock him down. I have no doubt that the real man looks to them just as they paint the other, but we have a law in this State against the employment of color blind public servants.

"The house of lords in England is in danger because of the grievances that the Queen and ministry can create peers to turn the scale of great questions, but the American Board pauses in the midst of a great debate to elect reinforcements for one side. I think also that the principle on which the new men (doubtless excellent men personally) were elected was worse than the manner of their election; the question in the minds of those responsible for their choice seems to have been, 'How can we best perpetuate our view?' Instead of 'How can we best represent the Congregational denomination?' If the latter had been the question it does seem as if a class of men like, for instance, Timothy Dwight, president of Yale College; Dr. John P. Gulliver of Andover, a veteran Congregational scholar, whose theological views are certainly satisfactory to the majority, or Prof. Edward P. Crowell of Amherst, whose theological views I do not know, but to whose judicial and Christian spirit I would leave the settlement of any question, might have been selected.

"On the whole, I am inclined to agree with what George M. Stearns says about rushing straight into a stroke in politics [religion] without stopping to see what the result will be."

REPORTS OF GOVERNMENT CHEMISTS

As to Purity and Wholesomeness of the Royal Baking Powder.

"I have tested a package of Royal Baking Powder, which I purchased in the open market, and find it composed of pure and wholesome ingredients. It is a cream of tartar powder of a high degree of merit, and does not contain either alum or phosphates, or other injurious substances. E. G. LOVY, Ph.D."

"It is a scientific fact that the Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure. H. A. MOTT, Ph.D."

"I have examined a package of Royal Baking Powder, purchased by myself in the market. I find it entirely free from alum, terra alba, or any other injurious substance. HENRY MORTON, Ph.D., President of Stevens Institute of Technology."

"I have analyzed a package of Royal Baking Powder. The materials of which it is composed are pure and wholesome. S. DANA HAYES, State Assayer, Mass."

The Royal Baking Powder received the highest award over all competitors at the Vienna World's Exposition, 1873; at the Centennial, Philadelphia, 1876; at the American Institute, New York, and at State Fairs throughout the country.

No other article of human food has ever received such high, emphatic, and universal endorsement from eminent chemists, physicians, scientists, and Boards of Health all over the world.

NOTE—The above DIAGRAM illustrates the comparative worth of various Baking Powders, as shown by Chemical Analysis and experiments made by Prof. Schedler. A pound can of each powder was taken, the total leavening power or volume in each can calculated, the result being as indicated. This practical test for worth by Prof. Schedler only proves what every observant consumer of the Royal Baking Powder knows by practical experience, that, while it costs a few cents per pound more than ordinary kinds, it is far more economical, and, besides, affords the advantage of better work. A single trial of the Royal Baking Powder will convince any fair-minded person of these facts.

* While the diagram shows some of the alum powders to be of a higher degree of strength than other powders ranked below them, it is not to be taken as indicating that they have any value. All alum powders, no matter how high their strength, should be avoided as dangerous.

REPRESENTATIVE CANDIDATES.

The caucuses for the selection of delegates to the Republican representative convention are called for Saturday night of next week, and the claims of various candidates are being discussed with much interest.

The custom of giving a representative a second term will be followed in the case of Mr. Walworth, as he made an excellent record the first year, and is entitled to the honor. For the second representative there will be a more or less lively contest.

The two leading candidates appear to be ex-Alderman Powers and City Solicitor Slocum, either of whom would fill the duties of the position with credit to the city. A correspondent, who is one of the leading Republicans of Newton, presents the claims of Mr. Slocum in another column with considerable force, and endorses him as a man who would always be found on the right side of the temperance question, in whatever form it came up. It would be fair to say, however, that any Newton representative could probably be depended on to do the same, out of regard for his own political prospects, if for no higher reason.

Nevertheless, Mr. Slocum would make an excellent official, and he would "in every way represent Newton most faithfully," as our correspondent asserts. He has exceptional ability, a record that will bear the closest scrutiny, and he is a representative Newton man, familiar with its interests, and capable of looking out for them should they be threatened by adverse legislation.

The locality argument that is advanced in his favor is not entitled to much weight in a city like Newton, but all the weight there is in this argument is in favor of Mr. Slocum. Ward 2 claims that it has not had a representative of its own choice for at least fifteen years, and that as a simple matter of justice and fairness, it is entitled to the office this year.

SCHOOL BOARD CAUCUSES.

Why would it not be a good plan to have separate caucuses for members of the school board, at which all women who are entitled to vote should be admitted, and be given an opportunity to have some voice in the selection of candidates?

There are strong arguments in favor of such a plan, and very little to be said against it. The mothers of the city are more directly interested in the public schools than the fathers, and they are in a majority of cases better qualified to express an opinion. They are given an opportunity to vote, it is true, for members of the school board, but they have no voice in the nominations, and have to vote for such candidates as the men may select.

This is neither just nor fair. The right to nominate should accompany the right to vote, and it would be only courteous to allow them this privilege. It would be worth the trying for one year at least, and there is every probability that the result would be a distinct improvement in the candidates selected. Had the policy been pursued in recent years, it is probable that more care would have been exercised in the choice of members, and some deplorable mistakes would not have been made. The usual practice of leaving the choice of candidates for the school board until the far end of a convention, when every one is tired, and then nominating any one who will stand, must not be followed in the future, if we expect our schools to keep up with the great advances that are being made in other cities. It would certainly do no harm to allow the women a chance this year, and it might prove to be a very successful experiment.

AN UNFOUNDED RUMOR.

The Boston Herald on Monday caused quite a sensation by publishing the following: "It is rumored that Hon. Robert R. Bishop will enter the political arena as the Republican candidate for Mayor."

The rumor had not the slightest foundation, save perhaps in the fact that Mr. Bishop has been suggested as one of the strongest candidates that could be nominated against Mayor Kimball. A representative of the GRAPHIC called on Mr. Bishop, who was both surprised and amused when informed of the rumor. He said that he would not accept the nomination under any circumstances. The office was one of great honor, and any man might well feel proud of being elected Mayor of Newton, but he could not accept such an office without serious neglect of very important private business.

The plan of electing all city officials by ballot, instead of by the present method of appointment by the City Council, is being agitated. This would give us a ticket of about a yard in length, and make the work of counting the returns about twice as difficult as at present, but whether any useful purpose would be served is the question. The present method has secured satisfactory officials, as a general thing, and the City Council is composed of picked men, who know more about city affairs, the merits and demerits of the officials in question, than the average voter could be expected to know. If there is any good reason for the change, it ought to be made public, but those who are advocating it ought to know that a change would require a special act of the legislature, and that the City Council has no power to make the change.

The new electric car on the Cambridge road was a disappointment on account of the slow rate of speed. We hope this will not discourage the Newton Street Railway from any experiment with electricity. The defect in the Boston car will probably be remedied long before the Newton road begins operations.

The Republican ward and city committee met at City Hall, Thursday evening, and decided to hold the representative caucuses on Saturday evening, October 22nd; the city convention, Wednesday evening, Oct. 26th. The Senatorial convention will be held in Waltham next Wednesday.

JUDGE PITMAN will preside at the Prohibitory ratification meeting in Music Hall, Boston, next Monday evening. He seems to be the only Massachusetts judge that takes an active part in politics.

Street Railway Meeting.

The street railway meeting at Associates' Hall last Saturday evening, proved to be a very amusing affair. It was called to oppose the street railway location in Beacon street, and just the opposite action was taken. Hon. R. R. Bishop presided, Councilman Read was secretary and some 75 persons were present. Mr. W. E. Webster opposed the location and advocated Homer street. Mr. C. S. Davis favored Beacon street, and said that as he had over 170 feet of land and 7 houses on the street, he was more interested than Mr. Webster, who only owned 100 feet. The Beacon street location was the best for all parties, he thought. Mr. Henry Ross and Mr. Ross advocated Beacon street, giving as the reason of the meeting that the railway should be on Homer street. Mr. Rand moved to amend by inserting Beacon street in place of Homer. After considerable discussion Mr. Rand's amendment was carried by one vote, 27 to 25. A vote was then taken on Mr. Rand's resolutions, which resulted in 29 yeas and 29 nays. Mr. Webster then asked what had become of his resolutions, and was told by the chairman that they had been lost by the substitution of Mr. Rand's amendment. Mr. Webster then asked opportunity to read his resolutions again, but the meeting adjourned. The proceedings gave rise to some confusion, and it has been reported that the meeting voted in favor of Homer street, and in favor of Beacon, but it seems to have been a drawn battle. It was noticeable that not a word was said against the street railway.

—Mr. Fred Tainter will be greatly missed as sexton of the Universalist church, which position he will soon relinquish. He has been a faithful and obliging attendant.

—The praise meeting in the Universalist vestry was omitted last Sunday evening on account of the indisposition of Mr. White. They will be resumed next Sunday, at 7.30, as usual.

—Dalhousie Lodge, F. A. A. M., exemplified the third degree in the presence of a large and interested audience on Wednesday evening. Five candidates were initiated into the complete degree.

—The Board of Health will visit the low lands about Cork City Saturday afternoon, to see what has caused the great prevalence of malaria there the past summer. About half the inhabitants have been sick.

—Miss Holm, who lost her pocket book in the Newtonville depot while visiting Miss Cook, has recovered it, by way of a Toledo lady who found it in the depot at Springfield. How it ever came there is a mystery.

—The young people of the Universalist parish, who have formed a society calling themselves the "Lend a Hand Society," met in the vestry Wednesday afternoon; a fair number were present, and much interest manifested.

—Mayor Kimball was present at the celebration of Mayor's Day in Lawrence, on Tuesday, where 12 executives of Massachusetts cities were among the invited guests. It would not be a bad idea to have a Mayor's Day in Newton, as other cities find them very pleasant and profitable occasions.

—The Universalist parish occurred last night. A good number were out; supper was served promptly and temptingly at 6.30, and a novel musical entertainment was given in the evening, an account of which will be given in next week's paper. The trustees are making quite an effort to render these sociables thoroughly attractive, and surely the initial step was a promising one.

Suffolk West Conference.

The Suffolk West Conference met at the Central church Newtonville, Wednesday, and nearly every church was represented. The church was filled to overflowing in the afternoon. Rev. A. H. Quint of Allston was chosen moderator and Rev. H. A. Hazen recording secretary. The subject of the afternoon discussion was: Revival as 1. Their place and value in the life of the church; 2. Hindrances to a revival; 3. Without the church. The speakers were Rev. H. J. Patrick of West Newton, Rev. J. E. Fullerton of Brighton, Rev. Geo. Gannett, Rev. Dr. Webb and Mr. J. F. C. Hyde. A bountiful collation was furnished by the ladies of the church, and most of the delegates remained to the evening session.

At 7 o'clock the evening meeting opened and the Central church of Boston, Rev. Dr. Duryea, pastor, was selected as the next place of meeting. The committee on raising funds for the Needham church reported that $2,000 of the needed $6,000 had been raised, and it was voted to continue the contribution another year.

REV. THEODORE J. HOLMES

opened the third topic, that of Agencies in revivals, considering the agency of the Holy Spirit, which is needed to revive our interest, to awake enthusiasm, and a devoted spirit, and to make our work successful when done. In order to do our best work we must be taught of the Spirit.

GRANVILLE B. PUTNAM

of West Newton spoke of "The Church through its members," referring to the great success of lay work in the past, giving as an example the noon day prayer meetings in 1857. It is the duty of the members to stand by their pastors and assist in his work; to go to the Sunday School as a teacher or as a pupil in the Bible Class, and to regularly attend the prayer meetings. Too much is left for the pastor to do, and the members are not alive to their duties and opportunities.

Rev. John F. Gleason, who was to have addressed the gathering on "The Church through its Ministry," was absent, having gone home to take part in a practical revival meeting. Rev. Dr. Duryea kindly consented to take Mr. Gleason's place, and gave a very interesting view of this agency.

Francis O. Winslow of Norwood considered the work of evangelists very important, especially in small communities where there is little life. Rev. Herman N. Barnum, D. D., of Harport, Turkey, gave a short resume of the discussion, addressing himself to the results of revivals. Revivals, said Dr. Barnum, must begin with the individual and proceed from him to the world.

The fine quartette of the Central church assisted in the music, and the Central church received a vote of thanks from the conference for its generous hospitality.

—There will be a concert in City Hall Monday evening, in aid of St. Bernard's church. Local talent assisted by Boston artists will be the attraction.

—In the police court this week there were five cases of intoxication, three for disturbing the peace, one for assault with a dangerous weapon and one of larceny of clothing.

—The stand pipes throughout the city have been taken down and laid away for another year. Let us hope that we will have frequent rains the rest of the month, to keep down the dust in the streets.

—On Wednesday evening, Mr. Earle, the prohibition candidate for governor, and Judge Pitman will address a meeting at City Hall, Nov. 19th, Rev. A. J. Gordon will speak at Auburndale.

—Mayor Kimball and the members of the water board visited New Bedford on Thursday, to attend the annual inspection of its water works, said to be the most perfect system in New England.

—A reception of the Woman's Educational Club will be held at the house of Mrs. L. G. Pratt, West Newton, Thursday, Oct. 27th, from 3 to 5 p. m. The first meeting in November will be devoted to short papers on "Summer Outings," by members of the club.

—The Sunday school of the Unitarian Society held its first meeting after the summer vacation, last Sunday in the new church parlors. Until the new course of study is perfected, Mrs. Walton will meet the united classes and interest them in addresses and recitations. A new singing book will also be introduced.

—Mrs. W. H. Stewart is one of the heirs of the late Noble Maxwell of Boston, who left a fortune estimated at two millions. As there are no direct heirs, the money goes to the nephews and nieces, among whom are Mrs. Stewart and her two sisters. The number of heirs is not large, so that each will receive a handsome fortune.

—The annual festival and sale arranged by the ladies of the church at their chapel, will be held Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 26 and 27, commencing at 3 o'clock p. m. Useful and fancy articles in great variety have been contributed, and ice cream and refreshments will be provided as usual. It is hoped that a generous patronage awaits them.

—Dr. Haynes and family left here Thursday for his new home in Minneapolis, Minn., much to the regret of a large circle of friends. The doctor has had an extended practice, and by his genial manners and quick sympathies, has endeared himself to all those who have enjoyed his kindly ministrations and professional services.

—Sunday morning next, Rev. W. F. Thomas of Henthada, Burma, will preach at the Baptist church, West Newton, and in the evening deliver an address at the Annual Missionary concert of the Sunday School, at 6 o'clock. Mr. Thomas is a most interesting speaker, and in addition there will be recitation and singing by the members of the Sunday School. The public are cordially invited to both the morning and evening service.

—Sunday, Nov. 20, has been designated as Hospital Sunday and will be appropriately observed in the various Newton churches. The management of the Newton Cottage Hospital are anxious to secure a still larger contribution this year from the religious societies, as the expenses have been greater than was anticipated, owing to the large number of patients who have received treatment, and as an increase is anticipated in this direction in the future.

—The American Baptist Home Missionary Society connected with the churches of the Boston North Association, held its annual basket meeting in the Baptist church, West Newton, on Wednesday morning. The several churches were all represented and the attendance was large, a special car being provided for those living at a distance. The exercises commenced at 10 o'clock and after devotional services, Mrs. Sheppard, a converted Catholic, and others addressed the meeting. A social meeting was held in the afternoon.

—A farewell party was given to the members of the S. N. C. Saturday evening, Oct. 8, by Miss Mira Metcalf. To celebrate the occasion an old-fashioned supper of baked beans and pumpkin pie was served, and all the members attended in costumes of ancient date. The house was tastefully decorated with wild flowers and seed cucumbers, squashes and corn adorned doors and mantels. The house was lighted entirely by candles, and a large S. N. C. brilliantly illumined welcomed all from the parlor. After tea parents and friends were invited to a frolic party, and every one enjoyed themselves to the fullest extent.

—There is considerable interest taken in the question of candidates for the school board from this ward, the terms of both the present members expiring this year. Mr. Fisher Ames has been so valuable a member that he can not well be spared, and there is a strong feeling in favor of insisting that he should accept another term, in spite of his well known determination to retire. For the second member the suggestion of having it filled by a lady meets with favor, and the name of Mrs. Lucius G. Pratt has been suggested by a number of those most interested in the schools. They say that the mothers are most directly concerned in the welfare of the schools, and have a better understanding of the duties than any person without children could have; that Mrs. Pratt is exceptionally well fitted by education and travel for the position, and has always been interested in educational matters. If Mrs. Pratt could be persuaded to accept, a better selection could not be made.

CHAMP.

"It would be all right, don't you—don't you know, if, if only you—you didn't eat so much." It was no wonder that Teddy hesitated. Such a thing could not possibly be said without hurting Champ's feelings. And, oh, how dreadful, how cruel it was to be obliged to hurt his feelings! Teddy felt that he had only one friend left in the world now; and—there was no disguising the fact—everybody felt it, and everybody said so, there was no room in the world for that one because he ate so much.

Champ wagged his tail. He would have spoken, only his experience had taught him that nothing ever talked except poor foolish, two-legged animals, to whom nature had given no clothing, and who were always fretting and worrying about something he didn't understand. He looked at his little master very sympathetically, cocked one ear forward, and waited for what came next.

"Come in, Teddy,—come in! It's taken you a whole hour now to say 'good by,' and I want you to be bright and fresh in the morning. Shake hands with Champ once more and then come in."

It was a bright and cheery voice that spoke. But—"Oh, dear!" thought Teddy, "how easy it is for some people to live! He's got every thing and every body in the world, and I've only got Champ. And now I can't have him."

"Come in, Teddy,—come in!"

"You, too?" Teddy felt quite desperate.

"Yes, me, too. Come in and I'll give you a kiss. I don't like that big dog."

Effie looked very attractive. To be sure, she wasn't Champ; but she was very sweet. Ted was not very well acquainted with her although she was his own cousin. Still, he was quite fond of her. If he could only have her and Champ, too, then everything would be right. But no. They had told him that Champ must be given up. He "ate too much." Oh, it was too dreadful! Ted felt that he could not bear it.

"You go in!" he called out to Effie, quite roughly. Then he turned to Champ. "It can't be. I won't have it!" he sobbed, burying his face in the rough coat. "I'll never, never, never eat any thing! But I must have you! They'll see! We'll show 'em."

Ted whispered a number of directions in Champ's ear. Champ winked knowingly. Ted grew very impressive, and Champ nodded. He was going to smile, but suddenly he recollected that such an expression of his feelings was beneath his dignity. Ted's hand was on his collar.

"Now, Champ, I've got to go; but you understand. See I'm going to take it off." Ted pushed and pulled; and, finally, the tongue of the buckle was pushed out of the hole in the strap. One tug, and it was large enough for Champ to get his head through. My! how his ears were in the way. Ted nearly scraped off his head. Not quite though. "Pull it! Pull it! Don't speak Champ,—don't. Don't say a word. I couldn't help it. It's necessary, you know. Now he's a good dog, and—and—and—you understand."

Champ could scarcely help speaking. He had "All right!" on his tongue's end. Then he considered that speech was frivolous and only fit for human beings. So he contented himself with a wink.

"What you so long for?"

"Couldn't help it, Effie," Ted ran as fast as his feet would carry him, wiping his eyes with the sleeve of his jacket as he went.

"Come, let's go to papa."

"No, I won't."

"Why not?"

"Because he won't let me have Champ. I think it's the awfulest, cruelest thing in the whole world to make me give up Champ. I do."

Ted's feelings overcame him, and, rushing past Effie, he ran upstairs to his own little bed in the farm house; and there, with his head buried in the pillow, he sobbed out his long, long, bitter lament over the troubles of his little life.

When Rev. James Middleton received a letter telling him that his only brother was dead, and had left a little lad to the rough mercies of the world unless he should be willing to help the orphan, that gentleman could not for a moment suppose that there was more dog than boy in the case. How could he imagine that his young nephew had a playmate, a friend, another self, from whom he could not be separated without tearing open afresh all the wounds made in his tender little heart by the death of his father?

Yet so it was. Teddy and Champ,—they were a couple quite as devoted as any pair of twin brothers that ever lived. They had grown into each other's hearts by years of close association. Champ's place was by Teddy's side, wherever that might be. He shared his humble meals, and at night slept by the side of his bed.

One day, the boy was found with a spelling book on his knee, teaching Champ his letters. This was after some one very much interested in Teddy's welfare had insisted that he must go to school. Teddy's father was persuaded. The boy did not like it at all, particularly when he found that school was not an arrangement in which Champ could not share. Champ did not learn to read; and, I am sorry to say, Teddy did not make very quick progress either. Indeed, his spelling book was fresh and bright and not at all well thumbed, when he was allowed to leave school.

"How can he afford to keep such a big dog?" the neighbors would say, in speaking of poor Tom Middleton. Well, when people love a child or an animal dearly, they usually find out some way to provide for it; and Tom Middleton used to say that he had two children, Teddy and Champ. Of course, he loved Teddy best; but he was quite capable of going without his supper any time rather than that either of them should be hungry.

Champ had been made a present to Mr. Middleton, years ago, by a dashing young navy officer, who had brought him all the way from Switzerland. Champ and his master were fast friends; but in his frequent absences abroad, the dog was left behind. He was put to board at Tom Middleton's, and Tom and his boy Teddy grew to think the dog their own. No, poor Tom was dead. His order was to take Teddy; and Champ,—dear, dear Champ!—he could not go too, he said—he ate so much.

When in coming came Mr. Middleton, who had been kindly entertained at a neighbor's farm house, put Effie and the boy in the wagon and started away for the neighboring town where his home was. It was only 12 miles distant, so the journey was not a long one. The last words Mr. Middleton said as he took up the reins were: "You're very kind, Mr. Holmes, about that great dog, Champion. He ought to be valuable. If they give you any considerable sum for him in the city be sure that you deduct from it all that it costs you."

The little party received a warm welcome from Mrs. Middleton. What a pretty lady she was! And just think of it, she actually stooped down and kissed Ted! Not that he liked to have a woman kiss him. No, he hated it. But somehow he liked being in a house where there was a woman. The other boys at school were always talking about their mothers. Mothers were things that baked doughnuts and put up lunches to be eaten at recess. Ted liked Mrs. Middleton very much; what an enormous doughnut she gave him at supper.

Perhaps it was the memory of that doughnut—anyway, something made Ted feel very mean as he crept down stairs that night about 12 o'clock, and through the back door and then around into the road.

"Hush-h-h-h!" said Ted. "Softly, now, softly, softly. Don't speak for your life, I've got to consider."

Ted considered for some time. Champ had kept his word. Ted knew he would when he promised. But what to do with him now? The best thing he could think of was to take him into a patch of woods not far off, and tie him to a tree for the night.

Life flowed on very quietly, and Ted was happy. To be sure he had a terrible weight on his mind. It prevented him from enjoying his meals, and interfered with his fun on Saturdays and holidays. Not but what he managed to eat. Oh, how he did eat!

"I don't understand it," Mrs. Middleton would say. "You are a generous provider. James, and it's well you are; but I never saw anything like the way that boy eats. The amount he consumes is wonderful."

"He's growing, Mary; that accounts for it," Mr. Middleton would answer.

But his wife would shake her head. "I don't think so. He eats enough for two growing boys, and yet he gets thin every minute. I don't understand it."

The truth was Ted had begun to feel his position very keenly. His conscience was troubling him. Day by day he became more unhappy. After all, what was this but stealing? He had Champ, but then he could not enjoy having him one minute. If he had not found a little cave among the rocks to keep him in, all the boys in the village would have found him out long ago. Poor Champ was not happy. He could have no exercise except for a half hour at a time, when his young master would steal away and take him out. As for his food, he never seemed to get enough, not even if Ted had starved himself. And then, Mr. and Mrs. Middleton were so good to him! How could he bear to go on deceiving them in this way? Oh, it was too bad! He was just writhed with it all.

The truth is that Ted would very soon have confessed his sin to his uncle and aunt, and made things right by a full account of all his misery and suffering. But one day a terrible event occurred,—one that pushed everything else from the hearts and minds of the whole household. Little Effie went out to play on the hillside toward the lake with some friends, and when evening came she did not return.

For some time, they could not realize it; but when darkness came, and no child appeared, then they understood the calamity that had befallen them.

Where was Effie? Was she drowned? Was she lost among the mountains? Was she carried away by tramps? A thought came to Ted. He rushed up to her room, seized one of her little shoes, and then, as fast as he could run, he hurried off to Champ's cave.

Oh, how glad Champ was to see him! But there was no time for play, no jumping about, and no caresses. Ted had something important to say. "See here, Champ," he cried, "I want you to listen, and listen hard. You can do it, and only you. Don't you remember how you were brought up,—how you lived in Switzerland? You know how it was your business to go out and hunt up travellers,—poor creatures lost in the snow. You know how your father and mother did it. The monks taught you, for Mrs. Middleton read me all about it. Effie's lost; and you are to go and find her, just like you did in Switzerland. Here's her shoe. Now smell it. Smell good, and now go. Find her Champ, find her. Good—good—by."

Oh what dreary days followed! During the first few hours they thought they would certainly find her at once. When night came, they said they could not fail in the morning. But night came and then morning, and then night, but no Effie. Ted had one more hope than the rest, but even that seemed to fail him. The dog, too, was gone. Champ had not come back. Effie and Champ both lost—both gone, as it seemed, forever.

Poor Mrs. Middleton! It was hardest for her because she could only sit at home and wait. Mr. Middleton could go and assist in the search. Day by day he and his neighbors went out; but at night it was always the same story.

One day Mr. Middleton took a boat and went down the length of the lake. Ted was with him. They were at the old task, but very hopeless now. Effie had been gone four whole days.

After rowing a long time, Mr. Middleton saw a boat that had apparently drifted ashore. He went up to it, wondering carelessly what had been in it. Without any special object they both went ashore and began the old hopeless tramping. Before they had gone very far they found them selves near a house.

Ted was running on before to make the inquiries, when suddenly a rifle shot rang out on the air. Then they heard a woman's voice.

"You've done it, sure, Bill!" she shrieked. "The murderin' raskin'! Sure he'll not stale me fud any more."

Teddy screamed. There before him stood Champ wounded and bleeding, but with the old knowing look in his great brown eyes.

"Where is she, Champ? Where is she?" the boy shrieked.

Sadly Champ looked up at him, and limped forward. Teddy sprang to Mr. Middleton.

"Uncle! Uncle! We have found her. Champ has found her. Champ has her, sure."

Mr. Middleton recognized the dog, but it took him some time to understand Teddy's breathless story. When he did, he said at once: "We must follow Champ."

Oh, what a sad tramp it was! The anxious father, the weeping boy,—Ted did not mind crying now,—led on, out through the woods by a wounded dog. Slowly they went, for every move hurt Champ; but at last they found what they sought.

Curled up under a tree, a great loaf of bread by her side and one hand grasping an apple, lay Effie. Ted took only one look. Then his arm went round Champ, and side by side the dog and the boy lay down.

Ted says Champ told him the story while Effie told it to her father. She had strayed away from her playmates, and gone to play in an old boat. It had slipped away from the strand, and before Effie knew it she was drifting down the lake.

"Oh, papa," she cried, "it must have been a miracle, and a great one! Then it went ashore and I got out and walked forever and forever. Oh, it was so tiresome! and I was so cold and hungry. All night long, papa, I walked and walked. I was frightened, papa. Oh, so frightened! I cried and I screamed, and no one heard me. Then I was so tired I lay down and fell asleep. Then, in the morning, the dog came. He fed me, don't you see, a great loaf of bread and apples. Every day he brought something, and I drank out of the river. Oh, papa, papa, I thought you would never come."

Mr. Middleton held his little girl close to his heart. What he felt to get her back safe in his arms again I could not undertake to tell.

"Did Champ die?"

Oh, dear no! The country people, when they learned why he had stolen their dinner, could not do too much for him. A horse was harnessed and a great wagon filled with straw, and upon it Champ was laid, and driven into town. The very greatest surgeon that lived there was told the story, and he was proud to probe for that dreadful bullet.

Out it came, and the wound was dressed. Then Champ was taken home, and a great heart of Mrs. Middleton's sitting-room was not considered too good to be his bed.

When he got well, his picture was taken; and a splendid silver collar was especially engraved with what Ted called his full name—"Champion Edward Middleton."—[Harper's Young People.]

For 30 years I have been troubled with catarrh—have tried a number of remedies without relief. A druggist here recommended Ely's Cream Balm. I have used only one bottle and I can say I feel like a new man. My catarrh was chronic and very bad. I make this voluntary statement that others may know of the Balm.—J. W. Mathewson, (Lawyer), Portland, Me.

Two bottles of Ely's Cream Balm cured the wife of a well-known U. S. A. General and also two young officers of the same rank of catarrh. Price 50 cents. Pleasant to use.

The First Sign

Of failing health, whether in the form of Night Sweats and Nervousness, or in a sense of General Weariness and Loss of Appetite, should suggest the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This preparation is most effective for giving tone and strength to the enfeebled system, promoting the digestion and assimilation of food, restoring the nervous forces to their normal condition, and for purifying, enriching, and vitalizing the blood.

Failing Health.

Ten years ago my health began to fail. I was troubled with a distressing Cough, Night Sweats, Weakness, and Nervousness. I tried various remedies prescribed by different physicians, but became so weak that I could not go up stairs without stopping to rest. My friends recommended me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which I did, and I am now as healthy and strong as ever.—Mrs. E. L. Williams, Alexandria, Minn.

I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla, in my family, for Scrofula, and know, if it is taken faithfully, that it will thoroughly eradicate this terrible disease. I have also prescribed it as a tonic, as well as an alterative, and must say that I honestly believe it to be the best blood medicine ever compounded.—W. F. Fowler, D. D. S., M. D., Greenville, Tenn.

Dyspepsia Cured.

It would be impossible for me to describe what I suffered from Indigestion and Headache up to the time I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I was under the care of various physicians and tried a great many kinds of medicines, but never obtained more than temporary relief. After taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla for a short time, my headache disappeared, and I soon performed my duties more perfectly. Today my health is completely restored.—Mary Harley, Springfield, Mass.

I have been greatly benefited by the prompt use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It tones and invigorates the system, regulates the action of the digestive and assimilative organs, and vitalizes the blood. It is, without doubt, the most reliable blood purifier yet discovered.—H. D. Johnson, 383 Atlantic ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

A JOLLY AFFAIR.

VISIT OF THE NEWTONVILLE FIRE ASSOCIATION TO GLOUCESTER, THE GUESTS OF THE STEAM FIRE ASSOCIATION OF THAT CITY.

The Newtonville Fire Association, W. L. Higgins president, which left Newtonville on the 5.03 p. m. train, Wednesday evening, Sept. 28th, accompanied by Mayor Kimball, Alderman Pettie of the Fire Committee, E. H. Pierce, F. H. Humphrey of Steamer No. 2, J. E. Watson, driver of Steamer No. 3, and members of the Association as follows: E. C. Waterhouse, vice president; T. E. Nickerson, secretary and treasurer; J. H. Williams, A. Wancourt, C. Coleman, F. Dexter, J. B. Watts, J. F. Horrigan, C. Estey, R. F. Cranitch, B. Dew, F. B. Barlow, L. E. Weatherbee, arriving at Gloucester 1.28 o'clock, were met at the depot by the members of the steam fire association of Gloucester, Chief Eng. Marchant, and members of the fire department, accompanied by the Gloucester City Band. The line of march was taken for the steamer house located on school street, which was magnificently trimmed with Chinese lanterns and flags and hung over the doors was a transparency of "Welcome," and were received with the booming of cannon and a grand display of fireworks. After a reception and collation the line of march was again taken to the different engine houses of the city.

Arriving at Denance engine house they found it handsomely decorated, and they were hospitably received and entertained by Capt. Warr and members of the company. After the inner man had been again fully satisfied, they were invited to the parlors above, where a social time was enjoyed, and speeches made by Alderman Parsons of Gloucester, Mayor Kimball, Alderman Pettie, E. H. Pierce, and President Higgins of the Association, and recitations by C. Estey and singing and other entertainments by other members of the association. At the conclusion of the rounds they were conducted to the Pavilion Hotel, where another collation was partaken of, and where they were quartered during their stay.

Fishing excursion Thursday at 8.30 o'clock, the company proceeded by the band, and accompanied by Chief Engineer Marchant, Alderman Homans and Shepherd, Assistant Engineer Rore, Councilman Plumer, Assistant Engineer March, Assistant Engineer Hopkins, embarked on Schooner Island Home, which was towed to the fishing grounds by the tug Joe Call; lines and bait were speedily brought into requisition. Mayor Kimball being high line. At 12.30 they were landed at Niles Beach, where one of Urquhart's famous fish and clam chowders was partaken of, Councilman Plumer and Engineer Hopkins superintending this part of the program; a visit to the Light house and examination of the working of the fog bell following. Games of foot ball, base ball, and other pastimes were indulged in. At 5 p. m. the schooner was again boarded, and the homeward journey taken. Arriving at the wharf they were invited to march to the Vendome Club Rooms on Main street, where they were hospitably received and entertained for an hour or so. During their stay at the club, Pres. Higgins received a dispatch from Chief Bixby, stating his inability to be present during the evening on account of a fire which had taken place since they left home. Three fishing clavers were given for Chief Bixby's intentions of being present, and thirteen groans for the fire which kept him away. Once more in line, and with music by the band, they were marched to the Pavilion Beach Hotel, where music, song and sentiment made the time pass pleasantly.

BANQUET.

At 7.30 the firemen and their guests sat down to the well spread tables at the Pavilion Beach Hotel; they were called to order by H. F. Ingersoll, President of the Gloucester Steam Fire Association, who cordially invited them to partake of the good things before them. Landlord Davis, as usual, did himself great credit as will be observed by the following:

MENU.

Larded Fillet of Beef with Mustard Sauce. Lamb's Fries, Tomato Sauce. Frog's Legs, English Style. Mallard Ducks with Olives. Grouse with Game Jelly. Wild Pigeon Pie. Mashed Boiled Potatoes. Grapes. Apples. Melons. Mixed Nuts and Raisins. Coffee. Cigars.

POST PRANDIAL EXERCISES.

The band played a fine selection, after which Wm. Frank Parsons was introduced as master of ceremonies, and made a neat and telling speech in his usual happy manner, introducing Mayor Kimball as a man who stood upon a platform large enough to include all humanity.

Mayor Kimball arose amid shouts of applause, and said substantially as follows: If it were not for limitation of time, I should say that the time the band has just played so beautifully was very opportune because we would like to stay till morning. I was unable to visit Gloucester on Mayor's Day, and the pleasures that I understand the mayors received from the Vendome Club and other attentions, I must regret losing (applause). They certainly had a very pleasant time and it was a very beautiful ending of a very wet day. (Laughter.) I was sorry not to be able to come on that occasion because I wanted to visit your ancient and beautiful city, as well as to see her various departments.

On this occasion I have been accompanied by my friend Alderman Homans, who has compared the similarity of Newton and Gloucester, and suggested that they were twin sisters, having been born and ushered into the sisterhood of cities in the commonwealth the same year.

One reason we should claim friendship is because we have in Newton a very excellent department that is largely owing to Gloucester, because one of our best men, President Higgins, was born in your city. (Great applause.) He alluded to the beautiful gold headed cane which had been presented to him and said it was hung over the mantle in his parlor and valued as a token of friendship and esteem, and expressed his profound gratitude for the gift. He had been royally entertained. We thank you for this elegant and magnificent reception and the grand entertainment we have enjoyed. (Great applause.)

thanks for the courtesies extended. Thus concluded a very pleasant gathering.

The time having arrived for the line of march to be taken to the depot, all had to hurry thither, encouraged on by the music of the band. Arriving at the depot, and having a few moments to wait, President Higgins in a few well chosen remarks, took the opportunity to thank the association, and hoped the time was not far distant when the Newtonville boys would ask for retaliation; he was followed by a short speech by E. H. Pierce, Esq. The train being in the depot, and all ready to start, three cheers on three cheers were offered pro and con.

Amid the cheers and music by the band, the Newtonville Fire Association started on their homeward trip, having enjoyed the best time that ever they went on or anticipated. A complete surprise to all, and the feeling that was shown them by all the firemen of Gloucester, Engineers and City Government, was fully appreciated by them, and they live in hopes that the time may arrive when they will be able to return the compliment. H. S. W.

The Journal of Health.

The Boston Journal of Health, of which "Dr. Frank" is so well known to readers of the Boston Herald, is the editor, is a periodical that will much more than pay for itself in the benefit that it gives to its subscribers. Dr. Frank has carried into the columns of his own Journal the happy, descriptive style that made his articles in the Herald so enjoyable to tens of thousands of readers. What the great mass of men and women, particularly fathers and mothers, want, are answers to perplexing questions concerning their own health or the health of their children that are coming up from day to day, and in many instances, perhaps, to have unnecessary fears allayed. Now, this is something that is not always found in books upon health, but it is a form of counsel that Dr. Frank proved himself to be exceedingly clever in giving. We doubt not that his work in the Boston Journal of Health will prove quite as attractive as his work in the Boston Herald, while the price of the periodical, $1 a year, will bring it within the compass of the most moderate purse.

VIGOR, youth, and beauty, in the appearance of the hair, may be preserved for an indefinite period by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. **A disease of the scalp caused my hair to become harsh and dry, and to fall out freely. A resume of current events will be given by one of the members of the Circle. The course of study for the year promises to be a very interesting and instructive one and every one is cordially invited to join.

A very appreciative audience nearly filled the Methodist church Friday evening and listened to music of a high order in dedication of the new organ. The service opened with a "Processional," consisting of impressive singing of the hymn of Bernard of Cluny, "Jerusalem the Golden," by the older scholars of the Sunday School, marching with the choir, the chorister, and the pastor of the church, from the vestry and side aisle, and then through the centre to the chancel and platform, where they were seated. Responsive reading of the ninety-sixth psalm by the pastor, Rev. Dr. Clark, and the chorus was followed by the Antiphonal chant of the choir and chorus, the pastor's invocation, and the Magnificat by the choir. An organ solo, by Miss Merikau, instructor in organ music at Wellesley College, was a happy change from the preceding exercises, bringing out new tones and changes with truly artistic effect, great fidelity of interpretation, and fine feeling. An adaptation of the Te Deum for voices of boys and girls singing in alternation, and with baritone and bass solos was a marked success, reflecting great credit on all participating in the chorus and upon the accomplished organist, Mrs. A. K. Dyer. The boys, mostly from other churches, who kindly gave their services, were Watson Armstrong, Bert Deagan, Clinton Hunter, Willie Peck, Sumner Clement, Alfred Armstrong, Gair Tourtelot. Next in order was the organ solo by Mr. Cobb, organist of the Eliot church. Under his masterly touch, the organ, like a living being, seemed to "break forth into thanksgiving," uniting to "magnify the Ever-living" all its powers—its high and subtle harmonies and tidal waves of melody with "dissonances just," and quaint tonal blending. Next in order was Mrs. Lewis Speare's exquisite "Ave Maria" by Gounod, with organ, piano and violin accompaniment. The graceful violin obligato, by Miss Lucy Davis, was a fine accessory. Mrs. Speare's singing excelled as always, in the sympathetic quality and in delicacy and appreciative interpretation of the composer. Mr. Cobb's vocal solo, "The Kingdom of Home," was very effective and impressive. The anthem, "Hosanna," by the choir and chorus was followed by the closing "Recessional," the chorus slowly marching with organ accompaniment and singing down through the audience in the same order as at the opening. Prominent among the singers, in addition to those already named, were Mr. Avery L. Rand, the chorister, Dean Huntington, Mr. Lewis Speare, Miss Speare, Miss Degen and Mrs. George Pierce. One noticeable peculiarity of the occasion was the absence of all applause, owing to the unsecularity of the mood throughout of all present. Notwithstanding the enthusiastic appreciation there was no outward demonstration, till after the close, when some friends of Mr. Cobb, were delectably entertained by him with selections from "Bastille."

CHESTNUT HILL.

—The plank walk on Hammond street is an assured fact at last, the order for appropriating $700 for the construction having passed both branches of the city government last Monday night. What this section needs now is a high water service.

NEWTON HIGHLANDS.

—Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Ayer have been away visiting friends for the past ten days.

—Frank C. Hyde, from Phillips Academy, Andover, spent Sunday at the Highlands.

—Mr. E. Monlon of Walnut street, who has been very ill for two or three weeks, is out again.

—The Monday Club met this week with Mrs. F. A. O'Connor. There was a good attendance.

—Mr. G. R. Fisher and family, who have been visiting at Hartford, Conn., are now at home again.

—Miss Gertrude Nelson is boarding with Mr. L. K. Brigham, during the absence of her father and mother.

—Rev. Mr. Harlow of Medway, occupied the pulpit at the Congregational church last Sunday morning and evening.

—Mrs. Pottle has returned from her visit to relatives in Maine, and will make her home with her daughter, Mrs. A. R. Cook.

—The numbering of the houses of the city will soon be commenced. This must be done before the free delivery of letters can be availed of.

—There was a meeting of the board of registrars of voters held at the post office on Tuesday evening. Fifteen names were added to the voting list.

—A party of young ladies and gentlemen from this village took a midnight ride on tricycles last Friday evening. A run of 12 miles was accomplished in two hours.

—Joshua B. Emerson, who died here Tuesday morning, was a native of South Boston, where he was born sixty-one years ago. For fifteen years he was a member of the fire department, and for twenty years he was janitor of the Lincoln school. He leaves a widow and three children.

—Mr. Charles P. Clark, Jr., and family, are at home again from their sojourn of several weeks at Buzzards Bay. Mr. Clark, as freight agent for the Union Line, has been attending to the shipment of the cranberry crop to many parts of the country.

—The funeral of Mr. J. B. Emerson, whose death occurred on Tuesday morning, took place at his late residence on Bowdoin street, on Thursday. The cause of his long and tedious illness of consumption, he attributed to the inhaling of dust, while acting in the capacity of janitor of a school house at South Boston, where he formerly resided.

—The Suffolk West Conference of Congregational churches was held at the Congregational church at Newtonville, on Wednesday afternoon and evening. There was a large attendance, and the exercises were of much interest. Addresses were made by many of the prominent clergymen and laymen of the conference. There was a large delegation from the Highlands present.

—It is an interesting fact that the plans for the house now being built for Mrs. S. C. Cobb were drawn by that lady herself. She made drawings of the four elevations, showing the house in its finished state, the mechanical part of the work being left to the builder. As women are the most interested in the home, there is no reason why they should not plan the house, and do it much better than male architects, and consequently there is much interest felt in Mrs. Cobb's success.

—The Newton Congregational Club held their first fall meeting on Monday evening, at Rev. Mr. Patrick's church parlors. After the sociable and collation, Rev. Mr. Clark of South Boston, president of the societies of Christian Endeavor, made a very interesting address. Members of the club present from the Highlands were Hon. J. F. C. Hyde, president; W. B. Wood, secretary; Rev. G. C. Phipps, W. C. Strong, N. L. Whiting, George May, A. F. Hayward, E. H. Greenwood.

NEWTON UPPER FALLS.

—Mr. W. F. Eder has moved to Newton.

—Miss Mary Maynard has been visiting friends in the village during the week.

—The Quinebequin Association expect to occupy their new quarters about the first of next month.

—Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Sherman, after an absence of several months past in travelling through Europe, arrived home the last of last week, receiving a hearty welcome from their old neighbors and friends.

—Saturday a team belonging to Mrs. E. V. Barney of this village was stolen from Green street, Hyde Park. The team was found near Blue Hill, Milton, and returned to the owner. A small boy of about 7 years old was the thief.

—The pastor, Rev. J. Peterson, will preach at the Methodist church, next Sunday, at the usual hour, 10.30 a. m., Sunday School at 12 m. In the evening at 6.30, a special revival service will be held, when the presiding elder of Boston District, J. W. Lindsay, D. D., will preach. The new furnace of the church has been set up this week, and will be in operation next Sunday, if needed.

—The agitation in reference to checker playing, which has shaken the village for the past few weeks, resulted in a game on Tuesday evening of this week at the old Prospect Hall, between Messrs. Lowe and Linton for the championship of Newton Upper Falls. There were quite a number of spectators to witness the contest. The friends of Mr. Linton were sorely grieved at the result, as their favorite made such an extremely poor showing. Of the six games played, one resulted in a draw, four were won by Mr. Lowe, and only one game was credited to Mr. Linton. The contest was conducted with the utmost fairness, and by the result it must be conceded that Mr. Lowe is by far the better player. We understand that Mr. Linton, not being satisfied with the result, has again challenged Mr. Lowe to another contest.

NEWTON LOWER FALLS.

—Officer Harrison is away on his vacation, and his place is being filled by special Officer Burke.

—Conductor Vickery has been suffering from an attack of malarial fever, but is now getting better.

—Mr. L. E. Leland was elected president of the newly formed schoolmaster's club of Middlesex County.

—On Sunday, Oct. 23rd, Rev. S. H. Hilliard of Boston, secretary of the Mass. Branch of the Church Temperance Society, will be present at the morning service at St. Mary's, and speak of the work of the society. All interested in temperance are cordially invited to be present.

—A disgraceful disturbance was caused here on last Sunday evening by one James Pendergast, who was deeply under the influence of liquor. A large crowd was attracted to the scene, and the regular officer failing either to make his appearance or to be found when searched for, Special Officer Early was sent for. The man was taken to the police station, and peace was finally restored. That so flagrant a disturbance of the peace, occurring as it did on Sunday evening, should have met with so light a sentence as one dollar and costs, had certainly invited much criticism from all who know the facts of the case.

"Give us this day our daily bread,"—but let it be bread as nature and God intended it. It should be. Wheat is in itself capable of sustaining the human body, as it contains all the life-giving elements needed. Man has invented the modern flour, by taking out of ground wheat nearly all the phosphates, which are the nourishing ingredients, and so has impoverished our principal article of diet by giving us starch bread. The celebrated Arlington Wheat Meal is the whole grain of the choicest selected white wheat, thoroughly cleaned and well ground, and it ought to be a part of every person's daily consumption.

—Miss Pitts of the Chauncy church choir was one of the vocalists at the Press Club benefit in the Boston Theatre, Thursday afternoon.

—Alderman Harwood and wife attended the golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Warren, at Hotel Bristol, Boston, on Monday evening.

—Mr. J. M. Blake and family have left Mrs. Frankland's, where they have been for the past year, and taken the house on Hollis street in the rear of Dr. Hitchcock's.

—Messrs. I. T. Burr and Chas. B. Lancaster attended the dinner which the Merchants Club of Boston gave to Gen. Paine and Edward Burgess, Wednesday evening.

—The Prohibitionists asked Hon. R. R. Bishop to engage in a joint discussion in Eliot hall with Rev. A. A. Miner but Mr. Bishop declined the invitation. The subject was to be "The necessity of a third party."

—Mr. and Mrs. J. Edwin Warner left on Wednesday for Ipswich, where they will spend a couple of weeks. It is hoped that the change will hasten Mr. Warner's complete recovery.

—A subscriber, who wrote to renew his subscription the other day, said, "as a local paper I consider the GRAPHIC the best of its class." This perhaps accounts for its rapid and continued growth in circulation.

—The Misses Parker of the Newton Bazar have a fine display of Christmas and fancy cards and artistic novelties at the Mechanics Fair. It is near the entrance of the Art Gallery and attracts much attention from visitors.

—Conductor Frank Wise left this week for a trip through the west, and Mrs. Whiting and Miss Whiting of Church street accompanied him as far as St. Paul, Minn., where they go to visit friends. Mr. Wise will be absent about three weeks.

—Members of the 8 o'clock club and other friends made an unexpected visit upon Mr. Howard B. Allen, at his residence on Park street, Monday evening, and had a very enjoyable time.

—Mr. Charles A. Nutter of the Insurance firm of Wetherbee & Nutter, died at his home in Brighton on the 17th inst. Mr. Nutter was a man of unquestioned integrity and much respected by all who knew him.

—The Methodist pastors of Newton, South Framingham, Milford, West Medway, Holliston, Hopkinton, Natick, Marlboro, Westboro, Ashland, Cohasset and Saxtonville, have organized themselves into a ministers' association, which will meet monthly at South Framingham.

—H. H. Cutler rode up the Centre street hill, Thursday, on his Eliot wooden tricycle, with his hands in his pockets, and he is willing to put up a wager that he can make better time in hill climbing on this machine, than can be done with any other tricycle.

—The subject of Rev. F. Nichols' sermon at the Methodist church next Sunday morning will be, "The Touch of Faith." Rev. Wm. R. Newhall of Auburndale will deliver the second of the series in the evening. Subject, "What has the church done?"

—A brass tablet is to be erected in the eastern transept of Channing church, in memory of the late Deacon Claffin, who was for many years one of the leading members of the church. The parish voted last Sunday to grant the request of his family for permission to erect the tablet, which is to be made by the Gorham company.

—Rev. Wm. R. Clark of Newton Centre gave the first of the series of sermons on the "Christian church," at the Methodist church last Sunday evening. His subject was, "What is the church?" It was a very able and exceedingly interesting discourse. His views were broad, and his positions well taken. Those hearing him felt glad for what the church is, and hopeful for the future.

—Newton men are largely represented in the new Home Market Club of Boston, composed of manufacturers and business men who believe in confining the home market to home products. At the dinner at the Vendome, Wednesday night, were present A. K. Tolman, E. W. Converse, A. S. March, A. D. S. Bell, J. R. Leeson, E. L. Pickard, C. B. Filiebrown, D. W. Farquhar, W. J. Follett, John Q. Henry, Edward Sawyer, and other prominent residents of Newton.

—The announcement that the Forter prize at Amherst has again been given to graduates of the Newton High School, it being divided between Messrs. Cooley and Woodworth, shows what kind of work was done at the High School under Mr. Cutler. The new teachers have a difficult task before them to keep up the high record of the school. The fact that the school board hired three male teachers to take the place of Mr. Cutler, shows what was their real opinion of him.

—An adjourned meeting of the stockholders of the Nonantum Athenaeum will be held at Mr. Rand's office next Thursday evening. Nothing could be accomplished at a meeting held last night as a quorum was not present. It is hoped that the attendance at the next meeting will be a large one, as important business is to be transacted. Those who cannot attend are urged to send proxies.

—The classes, four in number, in vocal music at the Baptist church, have begun under the instruction of the musical pastor, Mr. George C. Gow. The requirements of all classes are met from elementary to the most advanced, and the instruction is free to all members of the church. The church is fortunate in having secured the services of so accomplished a musician as Mr. Gow.

—At the Y. M. C. A. meeting in Eliot Lower Hall last Sunday, Rev. M. Swoffield preached a very earnest and effective sermon, which was much appreciated by his hearers. This is Mr. Swoffield's first visit here, but he won the hearts of his hearers, and will always be listened to with interest. Next Sunday H. J. Woods will lead a gospel meeting. Praise service at 3.45, conducted by L. E. Chase. All are cordially invited.

—Rev. H. G. Spaulding is appointed one of a committee of five to visit the schools belonging to the Unitarian Sunday School Union the coming year, and examine into their methods and work. Sunday School teachers will be interested in the announcement of 24 lecture talks, to be held at Channing Hall, Boston, on Thursday afternoons, beginning Oct. 27, with a talk by Rev. Dr. A. P. Peabody, on the subject, "How to teach the Old Testament."

—The Boston Terra Cotta Company has a fine exhibit of samples of its standard building material at the Mechanics' Fair, which has become famous for outside ornamentation. A conspicuous part of its display, which is in Machinery Hall, is a section of the ninth story cornice of the Land Title and Trust Company of Philadelphia. Terra cotta is coming into use more and more every year, and the Boston company stands among the highest of its class in America.

—Francis Murdock & Co's store was broken into on Tuesday night, and a quantity of jewelry taken. The money drawer contained six or eight dollars and was not disturbed, and although the other goods in the store were tossed about, it is not thought that much of value was taken. Entrance was made by breaking a pane of glass, and unfastening one of the side windows. The firm are selling everything so low that it is hardly worth while to steal the goods. It is supposed to have been the work of boys, and the police are on the track of a gang who are suspected of the theft.

—At the vesper service at the Channing church last Sunday evening Rev. Mr. Hornbrook spoke, in his usual interesting manner, of the life of St. Paul; his aims, his earnestness and his sincerity both before and after his conversion. The greater part of the selections were from Mendelssohn's Oratorio of St. Paul, and the whole program was successfully carried out. Miss Pitts sang finely and Miss Celley's rendering of "The Lord is mindful of his own" was especially good. Mr. Hornbrook said that, as there had seemed to be misunderstanding in regard to the collections on these occasions, he wished to state that the proceeds were always given to the poor.

Steam Heat for Railway Cars.

In conversation with a gentleman connected with the Allston shops of the B. & A. R. R., he said that there were at present some eighty cars fitted with the Martin Anti-Fire Heater. All the new dome-roof cars, which have attracted so much attention, are fitted with this heating apparatus. The steam is taken from the engine and carried through the cars in pipes so arranged that as soon as the coupling in the pipe between the cars is loosened, any water that may have accumulated is immediately drained off, thus preventing the possibility of freezing the pipes when not in use. The pipes of the Baker heater, now in many of the cars, can not be used because they are not automatically drained. Cars are being fitted with the new system at the rate of four or five a day, and travelers on the B. & A. may hope to be delivered soon from the deadly car stove.

When asked if the taking of the steam from the engine did not diminish the efficiency, the gentleman said he had been told by engineers that in heating six or seven cars there was no appreciable loss of steam or increase of heat necessary. The fear of being scalded in case of accident was entirely unfounded. The pressure was not sufficient to burn one's foot away from a fracture in a pipe. The pipes would probably break between the cars where they are unprotected and not in the interior.

The advantages possessed by the system are four fold—the greatly increased safety for the public, a gain of three or four seats in each car, meaning a greater carrying capacity, a diminution of cost in heating, it being practically nothing, and the saving of labor heretofore entailed in the care of the stoves. The loss of steam and heating power in passing from car to car is very slight.

If you want to enjoy a fine smoke go to Shaw's New Pharmacy, French's Block, and ask for an L. B. 5-cent or a Brayton 10-cent CIGAR. They are bound to please.

House Lots

SLOCUM FOR REPRESENTATIVE.

ENDORSED AS THE BEST MAN FOR THE OFFICE.

Editor of the GRAPHIC:

Among the many names suggested as candidates for nomination by the republican representative convention, there seems to be no one with claims and qualifications superior to those of Winfield S. Slocum, Esq., our present City Solicitor. He has always been a Republican and his political convictions are founded upon a thorough and comprehensive knowledge of the principles of enlightened government, free from partisanship and untainted with desire for office. He would represent the views of our best citizens on anti-saloon questions, and would be found on the right side of all temperance legislation. He is, too, a firm believer in the principles of civil service, and in putting the same into practical operation in city, county, state and union, recognizing, however, that the nation owes to its defenders a debt, which ought to be considered, and that they should be preferred under all proper circumstances.

By reason of the claims of the ward in which he lives, and especially his long and intimate acquaintance with the needs and wants of our city, its relation to adjacent cities and towns in the matter of a system of sewerage, and his high attainments as a lawyer, he is preeminently qualified to render valuable service as a representative of our city.

Above all these things, however, he possesses the requisites essential to constitute an efficient legislator. He is a man of the highest moral standard, sterling integrity, unblemished character and rugged independence; in brief if sent to the legislature he would stand for not only the representative of Newton, but for manhood and exemplary Christian life.

Mr. Tiffany's Lectures.

To the Editor of THE GRAPHIC:

Permit me to give unsolicited my testimony to the value of the lectures on Venice by Rev. Francis Tiffany.

1. These lectures are full of valuable information. Mr. Tiffany has an accurate knowledge of the facts of the history of Venice, but he also knows how to arrange and dispose these facts in such fashion that they cease to be dry annals and become parts of an unfolding drama.

2. Besides having a profound and extensive knowledge of his subject, Mr. Tiffany possesses a rare historic imagination. He gives perspective and atmosphere to his pictures of the past. Under his handling the facts of history become the true romance of history. You leave Venice at the close of one of his lectures remembering the "beautiful sad city," as one thinks "of mountain ranges overcast in purple distance dim."

3. The lecturer still further gives you the local color of Venetian life and manners. He has lived long enough in the "City of the Sea" to be able to put upon his word-pictures the finishing touch of reality. The Venice that was is seen through the Venice that is; and the hearer walks with its Doges, its artists and its artisans, as Shakespeare's readers go with Shylock to the Rialto or sit in the Ducal council chamber. In a word, Mr. Tiffany's lectures are more accurate than a guide book or a volume of travels, livelier and more eloquent than common history, and, in their style, as fascinating as a page of Ruskin or a poem of Byron.

Killed at Newtonville.

A dreadful accident happened at the depot on Thursday, on the 9.15 train from Boston. It was just starting up, when Peter McCluskey attempted to get off, but fell between the cars and the wheels severed his left leg just below the knee and took off a portion of his right foot. He was taken to the Cottage Hospital by Officers Henthorne, Ryan and Bosworth, and Drs. Hunt and Utley attended him. A number of people saw the accident but could not prevent it. The injured man lives at West Newton, where he has a wife and child, and has been employed at Beal's market. It was found necessary to amputate the left leg above the knee, and the right leg at the ankle, but the injuries were so severe that the wounded man died at half past two. The railroad officials were not to blame for the accident, save in allowing intoxicated men to ride in their cars without a guard to watch over them. If they permit the men to ride they should take care of them.

A Successful Burglary.

The residence of Mr. George West on Vernon street was entered on Friday night, October 7th, and a large number of valuable articles taken. The affair has been kept very quiet in hopes that the thieves might be detected, but so far no trace of them or the goods has been found. On the night in question, one of the neighbors heard a team drive up to the house, but thought nothing of it, and supposed that the family, who are in Boston for the winter, had come out. Among the articles stolen, are two mantle clocks, a quantity of silverware, a large silver vase, pictures, and bric-a-brac of various kinds. The thieves were evidently connoisseurs, as they only took the most artistic and valuable articles. On the same night several families in the neighborhood were disturbed by men trying to enter their houses, but the occupants were aroused and the men frightened away.

Lectures on Marriages.

Commencing next Sunday evening a course of four lectures will be delivered in Grace church on the following topics:

Oct. 23—"Marriages as viewed by the novelists."

Oct. 30—"Some impediments to Marriage."

Nov. 7—"Why some marriages turn out badly."

Nov. 13—"Broken vows and vows that are kept."

The seats in the church are free to all. The music will be by the double quartet choir.

CITY GOVERNMENT.

THE STREET RAILWAY FINALLY GRANTED ITS LOCATION.

The meeting of the board of Aldermen Monday night attracted a number of visitors from Newton Centre, and also the officers of the street railway company. For the first time since he has held the office, Mayor Kimball was absent, having been called to Westboro by a telegram announcing the dangerous illness of his mother. Alderman Puttee presided and all the other members were present. The latter part of the meeting was rendered quite exciting by the final struggle over the street railway location, and it was finally granted, just as asked for by the company.

REGULAR BUSINESS.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Business from the Common Council was disposed of in concurrence.

S. F. Smith petitioned to have the street lamp in front of his residence on Centre street restored. Alderman Hollis said this was only one of a number of cases where a street lamp had been so placed as to illuminate a driveway or a front door, and he had visited the place after dark and found that the street was sufficiently lighted by the electric lights; that was what the street lights were for and he was in favor of giving the petitioner leave to withdraw. He permitted, however, the petition to follow the regular order and be referred to the street lamp committee.

Constable Laffie presented his report of the dog business during the summer. He had killed 57 dogs unlicensed and without owners, and had caused to be licensed a large number of dogs.

The residents on the west side of Waverley Avenue and Sargent street asked to be relieved from surface water which flowed over their grounds from the street, doing great damage, and which the city ought to take care of.

A street lamp was asked for on Emerson street, half way between Pearl and Boyd streets.

Licenses were granted to Chas. Lawrence for stable on Newtonville Avenue, and I. N. Peabody, for shed on Pearl street.

Thos. Haffrey gave notice of intention to enlarge his house on Faxon street.

John F. Payne applied for a sixth class liquor license, for his new drug store in the new brick block in Newtonville and the application was ordered published in the NEWTON GRAPHIC.

An order for the payment of $18,96 for taxes on land purchased by the city of Michael Lesse was laid on the table, the miscellaneous appropriation being exhausted.

CITY BONDS.

Alderman Grant moved that the two orders, one for the issuing of $100,000 in certificates of indebtedness, at 3 1/2 per cent interest, and the other for the sale of $65,000 of these certificates, be rescinded, it having been found that in the present state of the money market 3 1/2 per cent bonds could not be sold for more than 92 or 93 cents. The finance committee thought it would be well to make the bonds bear four per cent, in which case it was thought they could be disposed of at more than par.

The orders were rescinded and other orders were passed, for the preparation of $100,000 in 1,000 4 per cent bonds, the city treasurer being authorized to dispose of them to the amount of $65,000, the proceeds to be credited to the water construction account.

George W. Lamont, proprietor of the Central House, asked for a license to set up a pool table, stating that he had been a resident of the city for 30 years, had kept a hotel for 10 years or more and had never violated the law in any respect; referred to the license committee.

A license was granted to John W. White to form a drum corps in Newton Highlands, provided that the practice should not disturb the public.

An order was presented authorizing the city treasurer to advance to the city solicitor $200, on account of suits to be brought against the city and for other legal expenses; laid on the table as the miscellaneous appropriation was exhausted. Alderman Grant reported with the approved of the finance committee the petition of the Clafin Guards that they be allowed the entire receipts of the Armory for the year 1887, and the petition was granted.

An order was passed appropriating $50,050, for the expenses of the city during November.

THE STREET RAILWAY LOCATION.

Alderman Ward brought up the street railway location by presenting a petition from the property owners of Homer street, with but one or two exceptions, praying that the street railway be located on their street, as it would accommodate more people than the Beacon street route, and it was a direct and feasible route from the cemetery to the Centre. It was endorsed by Ex-Alderman Mason, who has recently bought property on Centre near Homer street, and by others.

A remonstrance from the residents of Beacon street was also presented, praying that no location should be granted on Beacon street, as it would be an injury to their property and a damage to the street.

Alderman Grant said that this matter brought up the whole question of a location, and he moved to take the order in regard to it from the table, which was done. He then presented an amendment to the agreement adopted at the last meeting, that the turn outs on Walnut street opposite the Clafin School be omitted, also the one on Beacon street, near the Mason School building, and that the one at Lower Falls be moved east of Wales street. The agreement was amended passed.

The granting of the location then came up, and the board took a recess of 20 minutes, to talk the matter over. Alderman Puttee having read from the public statutes to show that the board could only grant in whole or in part the location, and that as Homer street was not mentioned in this petition, he did not think the board had any right to do anything about that street.

There was some lively interviewing done during the recess, each alderman being surrounded by one or more eager talkers.

After recess, Alderman Nickerson moved that the location be granted. The motion was seconded by Alderman Grant.

Alderman Johnson amended by moving that it be granted on Walnut street only as far as Beacon street. This was seconded by Alderman Hollis for the sake of discussion.

Alderman Ward said that he did not think it was any use to discuss the matter. The question had been talked over so much that he did not see why it should not be decided to night, as the Railway Company wanted to go to work at once. If the amendment was passed they not only would not begin, but the company said that they would not build the road. It would have no terminus, and would not accommodate the High School children. Of the two routes proposed at Newton Centre, the board should decide which would be of the greatest accommodation to the public, and not where it would most benefit the landholders. There were a number of reasons why Beacon street would accommodate the public better than Homer street. The latter had a number of curves, and the sudden appearance of a car would be likely to frighten horses, and also be dangerous to travel. The Beacon street route would only have one curve. In a short time he thought the road would be extended down Beacon street to the Reservoir and the West End road, and also up Beacon street to Waban station, even if it were not extended to the Highlands. He did not think the road would be any particular damage to a street, and he wished the road was going to pass his house. The location ought to be granted at once.

Alderman Hollis said that he had been in favor of the street railway from the start. The meeting at Newton Centre last week, called especially to protest against the Beacon street route, failed to pass resolutions against it, and the sentiment at Newton Centre seemed to be about equally divided. He favored Beacon street and should vote against the amendment.

Alderman Johnson said he had no doubt that Beacon street was best for the railway company, but the abutters had some rights which the board ought to respect. The Beacon street residents do not want the road there, and the Homer street people do want it. It was not right to locate the railway on a street where the sentiment of the property owners was unanimous against it. They should be considered by the board.

Alderman Grant said he did not expect that any additional information could be gained by the board, for the matter had been before it for a year or more. Personally he was opposed to having a street railway in the streets of Newton, but the streets were built for the public, and private interests were not to be put above public interests. Whatever was for the public good ought to be done, and the street railway was for the benefit of the public. The road would pass by his house, which was not exactly pleasant, but he should vote for it nevertheless. He had examined the Beacon street route, and from all the information he could gather the public would be better served by that route than by the Homer street route.

Alderman Nickerson said that he was at first opposed to a street railway in Newton, but there was such a demand for it that he did not feel justified in opposing it now. He hoped it would be an electric and not a horse railway. The route by Homer street would probably raise the value of the taxable property there, while on Beacon street, the road might have just the opposite effect, as most of the land there was built upon. Still as the officers of the road said they would not construct the road unless they were given permission to go over Beacon street, he was in favor of granting it to them.

The amendment failed to pass and the location was granted, according to the request of the company, Alderman Johnson only voting no.

The board then adjourned, and the long-drawn out struggle has ended in a victory for the railway company.

"WHAT is meant by 'free alkali,' Doctor? I see it mentioned in the advertisements of IVORY SOAP."

"'Free Alkali,' Madam, is the alkali which is not combined with the fats or oils of which the soap is made, due to the ignorance or carelessness of the soap maker. Soaps in which 'free alkali' is present are decidedly injurious to both the clothing and the skin when habitually used. I have seen reports of analysis made of the IVORY SOAP by men eminent in our profession, and all pronounce it to contain no 'free alkali,' to be made with great care and of materials of the best quality, carefully selected, so I unhesitatingly recommend it for every purpose about the house for which good soap is required."

A WORD OF WARNING.

Newton's Possibilities.

[From The Saturday Evening Gazette.]

Our delightful suburb Newton, known as the "Garden City," is exercised in regard to horse-railroad facilities within its limits. There is something beyond this. A project is being entertained of extending the Cambridge Railroad from Watertown through the main street to Waltham, there to connect with the Waltham & Newton Horse Railroad to West Newton. This, if carried out, will be a section of a circuit road. The Newton people are agitating the question of a horse-railroad from Newton Centre to Newtonville, thence either way to West Newton and Auburndale and to Newton. So far so good; but the circuit drops at both ends. It has been said that the West End Company will extend from the Chestnut Hill Reservoir to Newton Centre, and that the terminus at Newton will give them a close connection with the Cambridge portion of the future West End system. So it would, but it would be via Watertown, Mount Auburn, and Cambridge.

There is another alternative, and that is to extend the Newton road from Newton along the bank of the Charles River on the Newton and Brighton side, up North Beacon street, to connect with the West End system on Market street. From this point it would be a short distance through Chestnut Hill avenue to the terminus of the West End Railroad proper.

This would give a horse railroad or a street railroad circuit worth having. More than this—say, from Nonantum street in Newton to Faneuil in the Brighton district—there would be a river view for a mile or more which no street railroad in the state now has.

Once utilize the river marsh land from Newton to Faneuil for a horse railroad or a street railroad, and there will be enterprise enough and capital enough to build a boulevard for common travel that will equal in beauty what is proposed by the Beacon street widening.

Would such an enterprise pay? Let one look at the position of Newton, and the question is easily answered. The City of Newton is by far the largest local passenger feeder of the Boston & Albany Railroad, and the citizens of Newton have not been slow in expressing their complaints of the treatment of the management of this corporation.

Once let the West End system take hold of this important connection, and the citizens of Newton will be amply provided with all the facilities they need to reach any part of Boston proper. FRANKLIN.

—Young lady (at church festival)—Really, Mr. Featherly, I must ask you to excuse me; I have eaten so very heartily, and there is a limit to one's endurance, you know, even in so good a cause as this.

Mr. Featherly—Quite true, Miss Smith, but still I think you might oblige—

Young lady—Oh, well, since you seem so earnest about it, Mr. Featherly, I believe I will take just one more lobster— [Harper's Bazar.]

TO OUR ADVERTISERS.

In preparing for the enlargement of the GRAPHIC next week, it has been found necessary to change advertisements from their proper places, and to make a number of unavoidable changes, but the matter will be remedied next week, and with a new press and new type, we think our readers will be pleasantly surprised at the improved appearance of the paper.

THE CAUCUSES.

The Republican caucuses are called for to-morrow night, and the convention will be held in City Hall, next Wednesday evening. The Democrats will hold a mass caucus at the same time. The question of candidates has been quite thoroughly discussed; there is no opposition to the nomination of Mr. Walworth, and the general feeling seems to be in favor of sending Mr. Slocum as the second representative. His name meets with favor in all the other wards, and the probability is that he will have a majority of the delegates on the first ballot.

He is very highly endorsed by Republicans of all grades, and an Independent voter sets forth in another column the sentiments of that large class of Newton voters towards him. Very little, if any, "missionary" work has been done in his favor, and it does not seem to be needed, as his fitness is generally recognized. Indeed it cannot be said that there has been any great amount of wire pulling in favor of any candidate in this campaign, as all parties seem to favor the policy of letting "the best man win."

The caucuses to-morrow night are of importance enough to call out a large number of voters, and it is hoped that there will be a full attendance in every ward. The few faithful ones will be on hand, of course, but the rank and file should come out and show their interest in the campaign. We hear a good deal about reform, but reformers who do not attend the primaries are not true to their principles.

SCHOOL BOARD CAUCUSES.

The suggestion made in the GRAPHIC last week, that separate caucuses be held for members of the school board, met with great favor, and has attracted much attention.

The old method of electing one set of delegates, who should make all the nominations for city officers, including the members of the school board, gave the women who wished to have some part in the nominations absolutely no voice. They could not vote for delegates or attend the caucuses with any propriety, as the nomination of members of the school board was held to be the smallest and least important of the delegate's duties. His views in regard to Mayor and Aldermen were held to be much more important than his views in regard to the school committee, and that only came in as an after thought, when the important work of the convention was over.

With a separate caucus, however, all this is changed. Women who are entitled to vote can attend, take part in the election of delegates, and have a voice in the nomination of candidates. This would also have an important effect in raising the standard of the school committee, and a nomination would then mean much more than under the old system.

It is a gratifying fact that the matter of candidates is already receiving attention, and in each ward a committee of three ladies have been appointed to see that all who are entitled to vote are registered. The matter should be attended to as soon as possible, for there is always danger in delay.

THE MORSE FIELD DRAINAGE.

The Watertown residents of Morse Field are to have some relief, at last, as at a town meeting on Monday night, it was voted to expend not exceeding $6,000 in the work and a committee was appointed to take charge of the matter. This will be welcome news for those on both sides of the line, as it was manifestly out of the question for Newton to do anything, unless Watertown should cooperate.

The GRAPHIC is entitled to some credit in the matter as its article commenting on the failure of a former town meeting to vote the money was widely read and one of the selectmen admitted that the town could not afford to let such an argument for an annexation pass. Hence a second meeting was called and the order was passed.

The district has suffered so much that it will welcome relief, from whatever cause it comes, but action was postponed so long that it is feared that the residents will have to pass another winter, before they will be free from having their furnace fires drowned out at every thaw.

It was fortunate that the Morse fielders have such a threat as annexation to hold over Watertown, as without it they would never have obtained relief, as the result of the first meeting proved. The $6,000 represents but a fraction of what the residents pay to the town every year in taxes, but they are nevertheless very grateful to see even so small a portion returned to them.

PROF. LINCOLN'S DEATH.

In the death of Prof. Heman Lincoln, Newton loses one of its best known and most honored citizens, and the Theological Institution a cultured and popular teacher. Death came so suddenly that his friends had no preparation for the sad news, which caused general sorrow among all who knew him. Prof. Lincoln was a man of decided convictions, an enthusiastic and sincere Republican, and a preacher whom all heard gladly. He was a very clear and forcible writer, and his keen and incisive articles in the Boston Journal were widely read. He was an occasional contributor to the GRAPHIC, and had promised an article for the enlarged paper next week, on some of the issues of the present campaign. Few citizens of Newton had a wider circle of friends, and there are few who took a more active part in life. His death leaves a vacancy which it will be hard to fill.

THE STREET RAILWAY.

The location for the Newton Street Railway has finally been granted, and the long struggle is ended. Several arguments were brought forward on Monday night to force immediate action, such as the wish of the company to begin work at once, and their determination not to begin unless the exact location asked for was granted them. The majority of the board evidently thought, also, that it was only a question of time before the company would get just what it wanted, and they might as well yield as gracefully as possible.

Alderman Ward's prediction that the Newton road will in a short time be practically only a part of the West End Circuit represents the sentiment of many citizens. The West End road will extend to the Chestnut Hill reservoir, and it would only need a short link through Beacon street to connect with the Newton road at Newton Centre. Then by way of Walnut and Washington street, the Newton road would connect with the Cambridge road, and the circuit is complete.

"Franklin" in the Saturday Evening Gazette, has something to say on this subject, which is reprinted in another column, and also of the great advantage such a scheme would be to the people of Newton.

The building of the Newton road evidently opens up a whole series of more or less delightful possibilities, though it will probably be several years before many of them are carried out. In any event the road will take an important part in helping to build up our city, making all parts accessible, and bringing in a desirable class of residents. It may lessen the value of property on Beacon street and some other narrow streets through which the road will pass, and the city may be compelled to go to the expense of widening those streets, but the general public will be the gainer in the end, and the average value of adjacent property will be greatly increased.

The tax-payers of Boston have held meeting to express their indignation at excessive over-valuation of property, but the reports of the meeting were lamentably deficient in facts. The speakers did not present instances of sales, for comparison with the valuation put upon the property by the assessors. In Newton the excess of valuation put upon property by the assessors, over what the property can be sold for, is becoming a painful fact. More economy in city expenditures will relieve the assessors from the necessity of increasing the valuation every year, in order to keep down the tax rate. Judging from the talk heard on the street and in the cars, this matter will be one of the issues in the city election this fall.

It is announced that a Newton Democrat will vote the whole prohibitory ticket this year. His first presidential vote was cast for James K. Polk, and his last for McClellan and Pendleton; he was an officer in the army and travelled 3000 miles to vote. Where he has been since that election is not stated.

SENATOR FLETCHER was given the compliment of a renomination for a second term, at the Republican Senatorial convention at Waltham on Wednesday. There was no opposition and the renomination was by acclamation.

THE friends of Representative E. W. Wood are talking of renominating him for another term.

GRAND CONCERT!

In TREMONT TEMPLE, BOSTON,

Wednesday Evening, Nov. 16, 1887, at

"EMMANUEL,"

will be produced (first time in Boston.)

PICKED CHORUS 200 VOICES.

Soloists—Mrs. E. HUMPHREY-ALLEN, Miss GER-

TRUDE EDMANDS, Mr. GEORGE J. PAR-

KER, Mr. CLARENCE E. HAY.

ORGAN.

Organist—S. B. WHITNEY.

Tickets—25c. and $1.00. All seats reserved; to be obtained at ticket office, Tremont Temple, on and after Thursday, Oct. 13.

The Congregationist, July 28, '87, says: "The oratorio 'Emmanuel' is refined and dignified, and not too classical for the average chorus and audience. The author merits the gratitude of lovers of sacred song."

Prof. W. F. Sherwin, Conductor of Music at the late New England Assembly, So. Framingham, writes as follows: Boston, Sept. 21, 1887.

My DEAR MR. TROWBRIDGE:

"Having, during the late session of the New England Assembly, tested the merits of your new oratorio 'Emmanuel,' I desire to assure you that the work proved a thoroughly interesting in every way to singers, orchestra and the public; receiving enthusiastic and unqualified commendation from all. The general excellence is so uniform throughout that it is difficult to say which parts are most interesting. It is worthy of special mention that the text adheres very closely to the original New Testament Scriptures, almost literally reproducing them in their full strength and beauty, rather than adapting them to the music. The solo parts are full of beauty and skillfully written to be relaxed by highly cultivated singers, while the choruses are inspiring in a marked degree, never failing to kindle and hold the interest of singers.

All the music, while not so difficult of execution as to put it out of the reach of the average musical organization, breathes the spirit of true dignity and Christian earnestness, expressed in a musically manner which reflects great credit upon the composer, and it seems thoroughly original. I submit to the public a work so admirable in all respects, and so happily adapted to meet the needs of han-nam sure that an unprejudiced examination will show such that 'Emmanuel' is just what we have longed for, and I am sure it will speedily attain to the popularity it so well deserves. I am

Sincerely yours,

W. F. SHERWIN."

—The Harvest concert of the Congregational Sunday school, which took place last Sunday evening, was especially enjoyable. The decorations were bright and in most excellent taste. The program was not too long, and was of interest to all. A large and attentive congregation was in attendance.

—Mayor Kimball received a telegram Monday afternoon, stating that his mother was suddenly and dangerously ill. He took the next train for Westboro and remained there until Wednesday, when she was somewhat better, so that he returned to Newton for a few hours. Mrs. Kimball is 74 years of age, but it is hoped that she will recover.

—Chautauque Circle met at Rev. G. S. Butters on Monday evening last, about 20 members being present. Program—essay on Christopher Columbus by Miss Fanny Page, reading from J. R. Roll call was answered by quotations from favorite authors. The next meeting will be held at the residence of the secretary, Mrs. L. M. Soden.

—After one hundred and twenty-five hungry people were served at the Universalist supper last week, and a very enjoyable evening was spent. The program was broken at intervals by social intercourse, thereby taking away a certain stiffness and formality, which is inevitable usually. The Park sisters of Boston gave a very enjoyable number of musical performances. The mandolin duets and zither solos were especially good and the "Scena and Miserere" from Il Trovatore, were given effectively by cornet and trombone, with piano accompaniment. The entertainment was novel and enjoyable, and a larger number than usual were present.

—The regular meeting of the Goddard Literary Union took place in the vestry, Tuesday evening of this week. There was but little business to be transacted. Resolutions had been drawn up on the death of Mrs. Fillebrown, by a committee of three, of which Mr. White was the chairman, submitted and placed upon record, a copy being sent to the family. A very interesting program occupied the remainder of the evening until 9.30. Mrs. Dearborn gave an original paper in the form of a letter, describing the meeting of the Goddard, which was irresistibly funny. Mr. White read in brief from Mr. Gladstone, on "Progress." The musical members were especially good. Piano duets, by Mr. Ed Metcalf and sister of West Newton were very brilliantly played, also piano solos by Mrs. Cora Prime. The songs by Mrs. Atwood and Mrs. Sherwood were enjoyable.

—At West Fitchburg, Saturday, Oct. 15, Mr. and Mrs. Burnapp were burned out. Mrs. Burnapp was formerly Miss Nellie Dix of this city. They lost both barn and house as well as part of their live stock. However, fortune favored them in one respect. They had time to remove everything from the house, even things in the cellar, and took off doors and windows, but the house could not be saved. The loss to them is considerable. They have the sincere sympathy of all their friends here.

—The concert at City Hall, Monday evening, in aid of St. Bernard's church fair, attracted a large audience, and was a very enjoyable affair. The choir of St. Bernard's church was assisted by singers from Brookline and other places, and encores were hearty and frequent. Following was the program:

—Some interesting facts in the annual summary of the American Board are furnished by Rev. E. E. Strong, of Auburndale, editor of the Missionary Herald. The number of missionaries and native helpers has been increased during the year by 96, no. of churches by 15, no. of pupils in schools and seminaries by 1271.

—Miss Elizabeth P. Gordon, the popular State secretary of the W. C. T. Union, is the daughter of Mr. James M. Gordon, and sister of Mrs. Gulick, missionary of the American Board in Spain, and of Miss Anna Gordon, a young lady of modest bearing, with a great deal of latent force which sooner or later will find expression on the platform.

—The Porter admission prize of $60.00 at Amherst college has been divided between Arthur S. Cooley, of Auburndale, and Robert S. Woodworth of Newton Centre, who graduated from Newton High School in 1887. The same prize was taken last year by Edward P. Kelly of Auburndale, who graduated in 1886. It is indeed gratifying to the friends of Mr. Cutler, to hear such excellent reports from his former pupils as they enter the different colleges.

—A harvest home festival was enjoyed Saturday evening, at Lasell seminary. The gymnastic was the scene of the festivities and was artistically decorated with autumn leaves, corn and wheat sheaves, pumpkins and other fall fruits. A short program consisting of piano, violin, vocal selections and a reading occupied a portion of the time. A band from Boston was present and thereby made dancing a feature of the evening. An old fashioned lunch of fruit, milk and doughnuts was indulged in. Altogether the evening was a great success and greatly enjoyed.

—Guests registered at Woodland, Park Hotel, during the past week: Alvah K. Lawrie of Boston, A. D. Lawrie of Boston, Edwin Howland of Boston, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Whiting of Weston, Miss Annie Lawrie of Boston, Geo. N. Kennedy of Syracuse, N. Y., Mr. and Mrs. James Schouler of Boston, Miss Train of Boston, Franklin M. Train of Newton Upper Falls, Mrs. H. M. Clarke, and Miss K. H. Clarke of Boston, U. H. Lewis of Philadelphia, A. L. Murdock and wife of Boston, Captain and Mrs. McNutt of U. S. Arsenal, Watertown, Wm. Cuzier of Washington, Charles Hayden Kip of Buffalo, and Geo. B. Beale of Boston, Iowa.

—On the 18th of August there was a quiet celebration at Professor Willner's house on Auburn street, of the nineteenth birthday of Miss Davis, a member of the family for fifty-seven years. She was then in good health, and there was good reason to hope that her noble and useful life might be prolonged to a century. But on Oct. 14th, after a brief illness of pneumonia, she entered the rest she well deserved. Her character was a rare one in these days. Living only for others, anxious only to be useful to the last, she "kept the even tenor of her way." Her loss cannot be repaired, but the sacred memory of her noble life remains with those whose kind ministrations have made her later years full of comfort and peace. The funeral service in Auburndale was conducted by Rev. Calvin Cutler, assisted by Rev. H. A. Metcalf. The interment was in the family lot in Claremont, N. H. The church burial service was read by the Rev. Mr. Goodrich.

SEVENTEEN.

That old walled-in garden was a pleasant place in summer afternoons. The grass grew high beneath the apple-trees; the trees spread out their wide arms and made great patches of welcome shade; clove-pinks and tall white lilies and sweet-smelling mint and thyme grew close together amongst the currant bushes near the wall, and all the air was sweet with perfume.

I loved that garden. It was the one spot where I could breathe freely and be happy. Aunt Maria never came there. Uncle Richard, if he strolled up and down sometimes, with pipe and Times, did not frighten me. He smiled at me in a kindly way. Once he patted my head and asked if the girls were good to me; and on one memorable day he had taken my chin between his hands and looked long at me, with dim eyes with a look of sorrowful remembrance in them, and then said, "You are like your mother, Nell. God bless you, child."

Sometimes Rose and Letty, my cousins, would bring their book or needlework and sit beneath the trees reading or chatting, but that was not often. Aunt Maria kept Letty practising scales in the morning and Italian songs in the afternoon; and poor Rose got into trouble for every fresh freckle or graze's bite, and seldom dared venture out. And sometimes, at rare intervals, Will Donaldson would stroll up and down the weedy paths beneath the wall, and view the peaches and talk politics with Uncle Richard; and then, letting Uncle Richard pass on, would come and talk to me instead. But Will's presence never spoiled the garden for me.

Will was not my cousin. He was Aunt Maria's nephew. I was only Uncle Richard's niece. He was a well-connected, prosperous, altogether satisfactory relation, as all Aunt Maria's relations were. I was the poorest of all Uncle Richard's nieces, and that is saying much.

Will often stayed with us. Aunt Maria intended that he and Rose should marry by-and-by; and, when Will was not present, she talked of this plan quite openly.

"I do not see that you could do better, Rose, she would say with a judicial air. "Now I, if I had not thrown myself away upon your papa when I was too young to know any better, might have married whom I pleased. But you—you have no 'go' about you, Rose—and men do object so much to a skin with freckles. I was a very pretty girl—the prettiest complexion in the world; but at seventeen I married your papa, as you know, and there was an end of everything. But in your case it is different; you may be satisfied with Will, I think. The property is entailed, you know, and it must come to Will, though that other boy is the favorite son."

Rose would protest as much as she dared. But Aunt Maria overruled her objections peremptorily. "Not want to marry! Nonsense! Every girl wants to marry. Not want to marry Will? I should be glad to know whom you mean to marry then! Will does not wish to marry you? Stuff and nonsense! What does he come here for?"

No one could answer the last question satisfactorily. Perhaps he came for the fishing and shooting; perhaps he found it dull at home. But he did not come for the sake of Rose, and Rose knew that. Once I heard them talking together about Aunt Maria's scheme, and they were laughing gently, without a touch of self-consciousness or embarrassment. And once I heard him deliver a message from his brother, "that other," the favorite, but not the older son. It was a very unimportant message. Aunt Maria herself might have heard it; but Will smiled and Rose blushed as he delivered it, and I understood then how hopeless my aunt's plans were.

It was my seventeenth birthday. I had brought my needlework into the orchard, and was sitting on the grass, where the boughs of the apple-trees made a pleasant shade, and was sewing now and then, by fits and starts, but thinking all the time. By-and-by the garden door opened and shut, and a slow, sauntering step came down the path. I began to sew steadily then. I did not turn my head. It was only when Will stood just before me that I looked up. He threw away his cigar, put his hands into his pocket, and smiled down at me in a half-lazy, half-tender way. I went on sewing again, but those stitches were wrong, and I had, I remember, to pick them out next day.

"Like white gowns, you know," he said musingly, after a minute, still looking down at me.

"Do you?" said I, with an involuntary glance at my own white gown, with the sunshine gleeking it.

"Why don't other girls have their things made like that—all sort, you know, without any seams and edges?"

"Like this?" said I, looking up with a smile into the approving gray eyes bent down upon me. "There's no making in it. I made it myself. It's just a full body and a straight skirt; there's no trimming at all."

"It's white," said Will, a little vaguely. "Girls ought to wear white gowns; why don't they?"

"I don't know," said I. "I wear them because they wash."

Will looked up at the sky between the trees, and whistled softly to himself. Then his glance travelled downwards towards me again.

"It is your birthday to-day?" he said, in a lazy, questioning way.

"Yes."

"Do you like birthdays?"

"On the whole, I think not," I said, working more quickly, and making some pitifully irregular stitches to unpick.

"Why not?"

"I had birthdays when I was a child, you see," I said, foolishly, "and I always remember them."

"What have people been giving you for presents, Nell?"

I told him: "Letty made a pin cushion for me. Rose gave me that song I sang last night."

There was a pause. "Girls wear lockets and trinkets and things sometimes," said Will, irrelevantly.

"I suppose, now," said Will, "that you have plenty of things of that sort?"

I looked up wonderingly. His questions were so purposeless, unless— But that thought was absurd! Was it likely that Will should be thinking of buying a present for me? What could he be more unlikely! I was mad as myself for blushing.

"I have the ornaments mamma had when she was a girl," I said. "She gave them to me."

"Are there necklaces amongst them?" said Will. "I like necklaces you know. But I daresay you have everything of that sort. Have you a pearl necklace, Nell?"

The question made me laugh. "No, nothing half so fine," I said.

Before Will had time to speak again, a clear, bell-like voice came from the other end of the garden: "Will! Will!"

"Here," shouted Will. "All right, Rose. Rose was coming towards us, her sweet little fair face almost hidden by the garden hat she wore. "I have been looking everywhere for you," she said, addressing Will, who went to meet her. "Papa is wanting your advice about that coat Jackson wants to sell. Young Jackson has brought the coat up; and papa is in the yard, Will, and he wants you to go at once. Oh, Nell, you here!"

Will went slowly away, his hands in his pockets. Rose remained, seating herself on the grass and watching her cousin disappear.

"What do you and Will find to talk about?" she said pleasantly, when the garden door had closed.

"We have been talking about my frocks," I said lightly, with a little laugh. "When you came, Will was asking how many pearl necklaces I possessed."

Rose's clear blue eyes were regarding me a little anxiously. "Will talks great nonsense sometimes," she said. "You must not lay too much importance on what he says, Nell. He has been very kind to you lately—I have noticed it; but that is his way—he is kind to everyone."

"Yes, of course," I said promptly; and then I hurriedly changed the subject. But Rose was very quiet. She sat watching me as I sewed, giving only half her attention, I think, to my impersonal talk.

"You are looking very happy now-a-days, Nell," she said wistfully, after a while.

"Am I?" said I—"that's because it's summer."

Rose did not look wistful after that explanation. My contentment evidently worried her. We sat chatting for a little while longer, then she rose and went back to the house, leaving me alone. I said I should follow in a minute, but the minute passed and I did not go.

Half an hour passed; I was still there. I forgot the sewing. It dropped on the grass beside me. I clasped my hands behind my head, and leaned back against the apple-tree and looked up, as Will had done, absently, at the patches of blue between the boughs. Rose was right—I was happy—very happy! Why should I not be happy? It was summer time, and no one scolded me if I freckled.

Suddenly I started. Someone was speaking not far away.

"Of course, I know you do not mean anything, Will. But Nell, you fancy you do. I think, for her sake, you ought to be careful."

The clear, ringing little voice came from the garden, just beyond the orchard wall. It was Rose who spoke.

The lazy voice that answered was Will's. "Why for her sake?" he said. "You don't think Nell is falling in love with me?"

"That's not very likely, you know," said Rose. "But indeed, it is likely. Nell quite changes when you are here. She brightens—she changes altogether; I have noticed it."

"Does she? That is very sweet of her," said Will, seriously.

"I am serious—profoundly so. What do you want me to do, Rose?"

"I want you to be more careful."

"Careful? Of what, Rose? I am careful! Careful? Why, I think of every word I say to her; I carefully reflect upon every sentence; I never was so careful with anyone as I am in my intercourse with Nell. I plan out every atom of meaning from my voice and my words and my very looks. I should like you to tell me how I am to be more careful than I am."

The voices were growing fainter in the distance. But I caught what Rose said. "Then you, too, have seen the danger?"

"What danger?"

"Of Nell's mistaking—Then the voices passed, and I heard no more.

My hands were still clasping one another, in careless, happy fashion behind my head. I clasped them. I sought about for my needlework. The needle had slipped out and was lost in the long grass. I remember that I searched for it as though its loss was an important matter. At last I found it. Then I went away slowly, humming a tune.

The sky was blue as ever. The sunshine was warm on the lawn, the birds were singing loudly; in the house, every window was open, and the curtains waved lightly in the gentle breeze. It was still summer. My heart was as cheerless as December.

Dinner was over. Aunt Maria was laying down the law on some point of social etiquette to Rose and Uncle Richard, who were listening deferentially. Letty was singing her last Italian song. Will was leaning against the chimney-piece close to my chair, and kindly trying to talk to me.

At last I succeeded in escaping from the drawing-room. I went slowly upstairs in the dim light, and into the little shabby school-room, where Letty and I had written endless letters and dictated six months ago. I stood by the open window looking out.

I had been standing two minutes, perhaps, when a step came along the corridor and stopped in the doorway.

"May I come in, Nell?" said Will, in a shamefaced, awkward sort of way; and he did so without waiting for permission.

"I've brought you a little birthday present," he continued, carelessly, holding out an untidy little paper package; it's not much of a thing, you know—but I wanted to find out whether you had one already. And if you don't like it, I'll get you something else."

I took the parcel and opened it in order to gain time. The untidy brown paper rolled off and revealed a little flat morocco case, and, lying on the soft lining of the case, was a little pearl necklace, pure and white. My heart was beating fast, my cheeks were burning, and I held out his present to give it back to him.

"I cannot have it," I said, rebelliously, ungraciously, because no suitable words would come. "I do not want it."

"Nell!"

"Please take it back," I said; and he took it humbly.

"I asked Uncle Richard about it, Nell," he said awkwardly. "He thought there was no harm in my giving it. We are as good as cousins, you know, and I give Rose and Letty birthday presents."

I said nothing. I looked out of the window again, down on the lawn and the lengthening shadows. My heart was swelling with indignation. "We are as good as cousins!" He had thought it needful to remind me that the gift was a consoling gift, more! Was I so likely to mistake? "Do accept it, Nell."

I shook my head. I think I was afraid to speak. Tears were very near, and I would not for the world have wept.

"Why will you not accept it? Tell me."

I was forced to speak then. I answered almost fiercely. "I should hate it!" I said passionately; and then I fled from the room, and upstairs to my bedroom, where I locked my door and cast myself down on the floor and cried as I had never cried in my life before.

Will went away next day. Aunt Maria wondered why he went so soon; but I could not wonder, for I heard Rose explain the reason lucidly to Letty.

"It's Nell," she said; "poor little Nell is half in love with him, and I think he sees it. He will not come down again for some time, he says, and I cannot help thinking he is wise."

"He shouldn't have flirted with her," said Letty tersely.

"He wanted to be kind," retorted Rose, exasperatedly.

"Nonsense!" said Letty, who had something of Aunt Maria's decision of speech; "he flirted! If any one had asked my opinion I should have said he was in love with her. No wonder she thought so, too."

Rose sighed a little at Letty's hardness. "At all events he means to be careful now," she said; "he says he plans out every atom of meaning from his tone and words when he addresses her."

Three months passed before Will came again to see us. He came one Saturday and went away again on Monday, and he seemed to have come from some sort of duty rather than for pleasure, for he had little to say to any one. He had nothing at all to say to me, though once or twice, looking up, I caught his glance fixed upon me anxiously. He had not needed on this visit to plan all meaning from his words, for he had scarcely addressed me once.

He did not come again till winter. Aunt Maria had taken the girls to town for a day or two. Uncle Richard was, according to the old saying, "in the village," and it was late in the afternoon when I returned home. This drawing-room was in darkness; the candles had not been lighted yet, and the fire was dull. I crossed the room and sat down on the rug, stirring the fire into a blaze, and a little I sighed once or twice, for it was a little dull with the girls away. Then I became conscious that I was not alone. Some one came slowly across the room into the firelight and held out his hand to me.

"Nell," he said.

"What! Will?" I cried; and I am afraid that he knew I was glad—too glad—to see him.

"You did not expect me," he said. "I did not write. It was only this morning that I made up my mind to come."

"It is unfortunate," I returned, "for every one is away. Aunt Maria and the girls are in London."

"I did not come to see Aunt Maria and the girls; I came to see you, Nell. You—your and Uncle Richard, you know," he added, in an explanatory way.

"Uncle Richard will be here presently," I said, hastily.

There was a pause. I wished I could look and speak naturally and be at ease. I gazed steadily away from him into the fire, conscious all the while that he was reading my face and interpreting my misery.

"Nell," he said gently, after a while, "I have offended you in some way. I wish you would tell me what I have done. I made you angry about that necklace. I'm awfully sorry. I thought you might like it, you know, and I wanted to give you something to wear—because, you see, it was your birthday, and we're cousins."

I was saved from the necessity of answering. At that moment the door opened and Uncle Richard entered. I went away to change my dress, leaving uncle and nephew together.

The dinner that night was a very silent meal. Will and my uncle seemed to have quarrelled; Uncle Richard looked irate, Will sulky. They stayed behind when I left the dining-room, and when they came into the drawing-room, nearly an hour later, Will looked more gloomy and my gentle uncle more irate than ever.

"I'm going again to-morrow, Nell," Will said, as he stood on the landing and gave my candle to me, when I was shaking hands and saying good-night to him.

"To-morrow?" I repeated.

"Yes, Uncle Richard is sending me away. And perhaps he is right, you know. Good-bye, Nell. I shall be gone before you are up to-morrow."

"Good-bye," I answered. And I was pleased to think that my tone was as careless and matter-of-fact as his own. "It is a little cold for travelling, but I hope you will have a pleasant journey; it is quite fine to-night—starlight, see. Good-night—good-bye." And then I went lightly, smilingly upstairs, and tried to sing to the brush of my hair, and looked out of the window at the cold, gray, starlit sky, and tried to sing again, and finally cried myself to sleep.

The days and weeks and months passed very slowly after that. February went by; Will did not come again. I remembered every day why he did not come—he needed to be "careful" lest I should fall in love with him—such a thing, the remembrance was always enough to make my cheeks burn with shame and indignation. March, April, May passed. June came; and to-morrow would be the twenty-eighth of June, my birthday.

I had taken my sewing into the orchard again, for Aunt Maria was scolding every one indoors. It was a pleasant day. The sunshine was hot on the grass, but a gentle breeze was touching the tree-tops and making a cheerful flutter and rustle in the air. I remembered all that now; at the time I do not think I noticed anything cheerful about the day. The seam I was sewing was long and a little dull—and what was there to do when the seam was done?

The garden-gate opened, and swung slowly to again. I looked round quickly. There was Will. He was coming towards me, winding his way between the trees. I let my work fall and rose to meet him. He took the hand I held out to him, and for a moment or two he stood looking down, saying nothing. It was almost as though he had been hungering and thirsting for a sight of me. If I had not known better, I might have thought then that Will loved me.

"I wish you could say you are glad to see me, Nell," he said.

"I can say so," I replied, careful not to speak too warmly.

"But not so very glad—not as glad as I am to see you," he cried; and I let him have it so. I knew how glad I was, but it was as well that he should not know.

"I have come to wish you many happy returns of the day," he continued.

I looked up at him wonderingly. But I remembered that he was "always kind to every one."

"You have come a day too soon, then," I said, quietly.

"Yes, I know. I grow impatient as the end of my time drew near. Uncle Richard forbade me to speak to you until you were eighteen, Nell, but these last twelve months have been a fierce trial to my patience and endurance. Yesterday I felt I could stand it no longer, and I have come. Nell, say anything to me—tell me to wait—make me wait fifty years if you will, only give me some hope that at the end of the fifty years you will listen to me. Do not send me away altogether."

"Send you away, Will? I do not understand," I said.

"Nell, I love you. I want you for my wife."

I looked up at him steadily, searchingly. The conversation I had heard between him and Rose came back to me. "Come back to me? Had it ever been absent from my thoughts? 'Thank you, Will,' I replied; 'I am very sorry, but I must send you away.'"

"Then send me away with a little hope. Nell, I have waited patiently all this year—I have obeyed Uncle Richard—I have not spoken to you—you do not know what it has been to wait and say nothing. You were too young, he declared, to know whether you loved or were indifferent. He had married my aunt when she was seventeen, and she had reproached him ever since. He made me promise to say nothing until your eighteenth birthday. I have been slavishly obedient to him—I put a guard on my tongue, on my very tones; and when that became too hard I stayed away. Nell, it is six months since I have even caught a glimpse of you. Give me a little hope to carry away with me now."

"I do not know what I said. Somehow Will understood. When, an hour later, we went back to the house, I had promised that I would marry him."

"Aunt Maria will prophesy repentance for you, Nell," he whispered, as we entered the house.

"I think she will prophesy repentance for you," I said.

I think she prophesied repentance for us both. But that was ten years ago and we have not repented yet.—(The Argosy.)

—Rev. S. R. Dennen, D. D., of West Newton terminated a stated supply of over a year for the South Congregational church of Concord, N. H. one of the largest and most influential in the denomination in that state, on Sunday evening last. On going to the society he found it divided and with quite a number of its members worshipping elsewhere. He left it united and with larger congregations than ever before. During the year not only were the current expenses promptly met, but $3,500 were raised and expended in improving the house of worship. At the close of his last service the church, society and congregation unanimously passed resolutions highly complimentary to their retiring pastor, after which an informal reception was held and many persons shook hands with Dr. Dennen and wished him success and happiness wherever he might hereafter be.

—The first sociable of the season by the Congregational society of Newton Centre, was held on Wednesday evening in the parlor of the church. They voted to dispense with the supper and have a lengthy entertainment in its place. The two fine vocal selections by Misses Hunter and Holmes, and the interesting readings by Edward K. Fry, impersonator and elocutionist, were enjoyed by all. This was followed by a social in which many strangers were introduced into the society.

—Lee & Shepard have just issued "Miss West's Class in Geography," by Miss Frances C. Sparhawk. It is designed as supplementary reading for classes in geography, and in cases of quite young children, as preparatory to the definitions and terse statements of text-books, which are to the children mere "sound," and "signifying nothing." It is a very entertaining little book, containing much information in clear and simple language, and its purpose is perhaps best explained by one of the children at the end of the book, who defines geography as "a way of travelling in our minds."

Death of Prof. Heman Lincoln.

Rev. Dr. Heman Lincoln died at his home on Warren street Tuesday evening, after a very short illness with pneumonia. He was in his usual health until Friday of last week, when he and Professor Brown went to Fall River on that day to assist at the ordination of a minister, a former student of the Newton Theological Institution, and Dr. Brown noticed that while he was delivering the charge Dr. Lincoln labored a little harder than was his custom. The real cause is believed to have been a cold taken at Bellingham about ten days ago. After his return from Fall River he rapidly grew worse, pneumonia setting in. He was confined to the house from that time and sank rapidly until death came at about nine o'clock Tuesday evening.

Dr. Lincoln was born in Boston April 14, 1821, and was therefore 65 years of age. He was graduated from the Latin School in the class of 1841, which included also Dr. Charles E. Buckingham, Rev. Dr. Edward Everett Hale and Mr. Samuel F. McCleary. In the class of 1840, with which he was graduated from Brown University, he had as a classmate Hon. William Gaston, and in his graduation from the Newton Theological Institution in 1845 his classmates included President Brooks, formerly of Kalamazoo College; Dr. S. L. Caldwell, recently President of Vassar, and President Dodge of Madison University, all eminent men. He was ordained in Boston in September, 1845, at what is now the Clarendon street Baptist Church. He was pastor at New Britain, Penn., from 1845 to 1850; Philadelphia, 1850 to 1853; Jamaica Plain, 1853 to 1859; Central Church at Providence, 1859 to 1868, since which time he had been a Professor at the Newton Theological Institution, occupying the chair of Ecclesiastical History. He was also an editor of the Christian Chronicle, published in Philadelphia, from 1848 to 1853, and of the Watchman and Reflector from 1854 to 1867. For many years he has been a regular correspondent of the Examiner, New York, a contributor of articles in several periodicals and a regular correspondent of the Boston Journal, mainly on political topics. He was eminent as a preacher in the variety of his themes and the magnetism of his address; was an enthusiastic and inspiring teacher, and in all respects a sincere and true man. He is a great loss to the theological seminary with which he had been connected for so many years. He leaves a widow and one daughter, Mrs. A. G. Langley of Newport, R. I. He has a brother, Prof. John Lincoln, who is an eminent writer and preacher, and is a Professor at Boston University. Another brother is Joshua Lincoln, formerly of the firm of Gould & Lincoln, Boston, bookellers.

Death of Herbert A. Speare.

The news of the death of Mr. Herbert A. Speare, oldest son of Hon. Alden Speare, which took place last Friday evening, was received with sorrow by many friends and relatives. Quite an extended notice of his life and character appeared in Zion's Herald, from which the following is taken:

He was thirty-five years of age, had been for a number of years a partner in business with his father, was happily married, with three little children brightening his pleasant home. He was converted in his early youth, and has been a faithful and an active member of the M. E. Church, as far as his health has permitted. For a number of years he has been afflicted with a very painful chronic trouble, which he has borne with marvelous fortitude and patience; struggling with the heroism of a martyr against its progress; submitting repeatedly to the most severe operations, and taking two trips to Europe to avail himself of the best surgical treatment. A few days since, in a condition of great exhaustion, with all the possibilities of the gravest results before him, the advice of his physician, he submitted himself to a still more delicate operation. This proved eminently successful, and a good hope was awakened that the sufferer would rally and recover his strength once more; but nature was unable to bear the heavy shock, and after a day or two of great weakness, perfectly conscious, and amply prepared for the event, in the presence of those he loved best on the earth, his ransomed spirit passed into the heavens. Never was this passage of Scripture more fully realized—"the weary is at rest." The bereaved family received the tenderest sympathy from the whole community. The funeral was held at the Methodist church on Monday at 1.30 p. m., which was filled with the many friends of the deceased. Services opened with music by the Ruggles Street Quartet, reading of the Scripture by President Wm. F. Warren, L. L. D., of Boston University, singing by the quartet, Mrs. A. R. Dyer presiding at the organ. Then followed the eloquent and appreciative addresses by Rev. Bradford K. Peirce, D. D., and Rev. Joel M. Leonard, a former pastor, and prayer by Rev. Dr. Wm. R. Clark. Representatives of the highest order of Masons, of which the deceased was a member, were present, and at the close of the services, formed out of the church in two lines, through which passed the funeral procession. Among the floral offerings were a large cross of white roses from the Merchant's Oil Association, a closed book of white pinks and violets surmounted with arch and crown of myrtle from office employees, and the cross and crown symbolic of the highest order of Masonry, from Dr. Wilson of South Boston, his beloved physician, travelling companion and Masonic brother. The cross and crown were of dark pinks and white roses. The following memorial was prepared by the committee on resolutions, and appointed by the Methodist Social Union in Boston.

Whereas, on the fourteenth inst. our beloved brother, Herbert A. Speare, was called through incredible suffering borne by him with marvellous patience and fortitude to exchange his earthly for his heavenly home, therefore,

Resolved, that by this Providence we have been bereft of one of our most genuine and esteemed members. His unassailable life from childhood up to mature manhood, his artistic simplicity, his transparent integrity, his high sense of honor, his warm and generous sympathies, his gentle submission and buoyant courage, which bore him through the long ordeal of physical torture, and the triumphant faith with which he welcomed death—all have made a profound impression upon our hearts, and will, we trust, long remain engraven there, to elevate and encourage us to bear with greater equanimity the ills of life.

Resolved, that we extend to the family of the deceased, his parents and brothers and sisters our heartfelt sympathy, and assure them of our ardent prayers that the God of all grace and consolation may sustain them under the burden of their bereavement, and in his good time bring them to rejoice in their glorified husband and father and son and brother, where all tears will be wiped away.

(Signed) Wm. R. Clark, A. S. Weed, W. I. Haven, Committee.

—Miss Lizzie J. L. Downing, graduate of Boston University in June last, and a classmate of Miss Ida Davis and Miss Mary Kingsbury, died of quick consumption at her home in East Boston, Sunday, Oct. 16. A young lady of rare qualities of mind and heart, she was greatly endeared to all, who knew her and the future was opening brightly before her. Maintaining to the last her idea of death being something very pleasant, any expression of grief from friends seemed like an affront which she could not endure, and she passed away without one lapse from her habitual serenity and joyousness; Dean Huntington for the University and Rev. Wm. R. Clark, D. D., her former pastor, paid affecting and impressive tributes to her memory at the funeral on Wednesday, which was attended by President Warren and other members of the Faculty, her classmates and many other friends—a large gathering which filled the Saratoga street church.

NEWTON HIGHLANDS.

—Rev. G. G. Phipps is absent this week on a visit to his mother.

—The Chaplin family have leased a house at Somerville, and will soon be reunited.

—Odd fellows hall has had the floor covered this week with a nice carpet. The hall will soon be ready for occupancy.

—The Monday Club met this week with Mrs. Nash, and was well attended, and the Chautauqua club was held with Mrs. Richards.

—Mrs. Wm. Hyde, who was taken seriously ill, while attending the lecture of Mrs. Potts, at Newton Centre, on Tuesday evening, is much better.

—Now that the state and municipal elections are soon to take place, a voting precinct at the Highlands would be very convenient, especially to those who have to walk.

—Hose 3 was called out at 10 a. m. on Sunday for a colored chimney, at the corner of Centre and Boylston streets. It is needless to remark that the damage was not extensive.

—Mr. Adams, the owner of the land where the proposed Eliot station was to be located, has made an amicable settlement with the B. & A. R. R. Co. and we hear that a station will be erected at once.

—Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Goodyear have vacated the house occupied by them for the past ten years, belonging to Rev. L. H. Dana, the first pastor of the Congregational society. They have taken apartments in Boston for the winter.

—The new street to the railroad station will soon be completed. The surplus gravel is being used for the grading of a street being built by Hon. J. F. C. Hyde, through his land from Hyde street, to Cushing street, so called.

—Mrs. Steele, who has established an orphan's home for colored children at Chautauqua, gave a very interesting account of her labors there in the Congregational church, last Sunday evening. There was a large attendance. Without solicitation on her part, a voluntary offering of about sixty dollars was collected to aid her in her chosen work.

—The time has expired in which women may apply to be assessed a tax, in order to be registered to vote for school committee, but those who have been assessed can have their names registered in November, and will then be eligible to vote for school committee at the next municipal election in December. Only one woman has ever registered in Ward five, but at the present time there is not a woman voter in the Ward. We think about sixty have registered in the city, and we hear there will be much interest in the large addition this year, as much interest has been manifested in the action of the school committee.

—Prof. M. J. Blank, the celebrated chemist and play writer, has just completed his fourth play which will be brought out in New York by one of the leading actresses. The title of the play is "Briefing of the Countess of Kent." The plot is all laid in England, Italy, and Paris. It is a story of high life with a fair sprinkling of romance. Prof. Blank has also now in construction, and almost completed his fifth play, the title of which is "Bubbles in High Life." The scenes are laid in Newport, Long Branch, and several of the watering places in Massachusetts. It is a drama in five acts. This play is engaged by one of the leading actresses, and may also be brought out this season. Prof. Blank is the author of "Sir Mungford," "Vivianou," and "Adriana de Cavalier."

NEWTON UPPER FALLS.

—Presiding Elder Lindsay preached at the Methodist church last Sunday evening.

—Mr. H. D. King is making a decided improvement on the Wheeler estate on Chestnut street.

—The Quinobegun Association contemplate having a fair soon, for the benefit of their treasury.

—The Good Templars are to give an entertainment, and old folk's supper at their hall, next Thursday evening.

—Mr. C. E. Hussey has been out of school all the week, having a very severe cold and being threatened with pneumonia.

—Mr. S. G. Curry, our fellow townsman, delivered a temperance address before the Norfolk County Temperance Union, at the Dover Town Hall on Saturday last.

—Cards are out for the marriage of Miss Alice L. Howe, and Mr. F. B. Spear. The ceremony will occur on Wednesday evening, at the residence of the bride's parents on High street. They are to reside in Lowell the coming winter.

—Through the efforts of Postmaster Billings, we have greater mail facilities, in having an extra mail to and from Boston each day. The mail from Boston arrives at 11.30 a. m., and the one returning closes at 1.30 p. m. An extra mail service will be a great accommodation to our business men and will be thoroughly appreciated.

The Hospital Needs Help.

It may not be known to our citizens how steadily the demands upon the Hospital exhaust the funds for current expenses. It was thought at one time that an annual outlay of $3000 would be sufficient. This was upon a basis of 40 to 50 patients per year, but the number runs up to double that, and so nearly $6000 will be required. In a city of such wealth as this we should not permit the trustees of this excellent institution to have any anxiety as to where the support is coming from. It will be very easy for some of our citizens to send their checks to the treasurer, Mr. George S. Bullens, Newton, and they who give quickly do double good with their gifts.

Artistic Advertising.

It will not be the fault of the manufacturers if Ivory soap is not popular. They have prepared a very attractive series of pictures, each expressive of the virtues of the soap, and one will appear each week in their space on the second page of this paper. In the words of our contemporary, "The fact that the space has been taken by the GRAPHIC by such discriminating advertisers as Procter & Gamble is an endorsement of what we have always claimed:—no better advertising medium exists [in Newton] than the GRAPHIC. The words in brackets are inserted, as the GRAPHIC has some respect for the truth."

Margains in China.

Messrs. Geo. B. Jones & Geo. R. McFarlin of Newton may be found at Clark, Adams & Clark's, 65 and 67 Franklin street, Boston. This firm is closing out their very extensive stock of china and glass ware, and Messrs. Jones & McFarlin will be glad to see their Newton friends and give them the advantages of the great bargains offered by the firm. Next week the special attraction will be in the tea set line, as per advertisement.

Police Court of Newton.

Friday, Oct. 14.—Naturalizations. Peter Nugent, residence Watertown street—John P. Hurley, residence Nonantum street—One drunk tried, fined $3 and costs.

Saturday, Oct. 15.—One case of assault and battery, fined $30 and costs—One case of profanity, fined $5 and costs.

Monday, Oct. 17.—Three drunks, each fined $3 and costs—Four cases of disturbing the peace. All four residents of Needham, each fined $3 and costs—Two cases of disturbing the peace by a fight in Nonantum on Sunday at 10 p. m., each fined $5 and costs.

Tuesday, Oct. 18.—Civil suit tried, Richard Archibald vs. George K. Ward, for $60.00, with a credit of $45, balance claimed $21.00. Plaintiff, being not yet eighteen years old, but looking older, having worked on a farm, but never in a market gardener's employment, made a contract with the defendant to work for him until Nov. 15, at $20 a month with board and washing. The defendant did not know that the plaintiff was under age. The plaintiff worked three months and part of a fourth, when he left without notice, claiming that being a minor, he had a right so to do, repudiating his contract, and bringing this suit for a "quantum meruit," or to "receive what he merited." He knew nothing about a hot bed, or of thinning out vegetable beds, or of any of the minutiae of such a farm as the defendant's, who had carried on such business prosperously for many years. In all these things the plaintiff was fully instructed by the defendant. The court believing that while the plaintiff had the right to repudiate his contract and leave, that he had received instruction of value to reduce his claim to $15, and gave judgment for that sum; Ivy for plaintiff Barton for defendant.

Wednesday, Oct. 19.—Three drunks, one fined $2 and costs, two fined $3 and costs.

Thursday, Oct. 20.—One drunk, fined $3 and costs—One drunk, fined $2 and costs—One stubborn child turned over to the state board—One stubborn child sent to the Reformatory School at Lawrence.

High School Chorus.

The High School chorus has had two very successful rehearsals under direction of Mr. J. P. Cobb, who has been elected director. The attendance has been much larger than that of last year, sixty-five having taken part in the last rehearsal on Tuesday evening, and there is every reason to expect that the musical results will be even more successful than during the first season.

The Newton High School eleven defeated the Hopkinton eleven on the Magnolia grounds Wednesday afternoon, the score being 17 to 0. To-morrow the Newton High School eleven play the Harvard freshmen.

The meeting of the High School Lyceum, which was to have been Saturday evening, will not occur until Oct. 29. The subjects for debate introduced at a business meeting on Wednesday are: "The respective merits as Generals of Caesar and Hannibal" and the question of "Pardoning Criminals by the President of the United States."

Rubber Eraser.

Mr. Charles J. Bailey of this city is the inventor of a pure rubber brush, which is proving a boon to invalids and a luxury to all who enjoy a good bath. It is a very powerful inducer of a free circulation of the blood and is giving great relief to sufferers from rheumatism. It is not necessary to go away from Newton for testimonials, for numbers of our own citizens, Mr. Moses King among them, have borne witness to its virtues. The brushes are manufactured by C. J. Bailey & Co., 132 Pearl street, Boston, and are for sale by Hubbard & Proctor of this city.

"We Point With Pride"

To the "Good name at home," won by Hood's Sarsaparilla. In Lowell, Mass., where it is prepared, there is more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold than of all other medicines, and it has given the best satisfaction since its introduction ten years ago. This could not be if the medicine did not possess merit. If you suffer from impure blood, try Hood's Sarsaparilla and realize its peculiar curative power.

This Powder never varies. A marvel of purity strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kind, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans.

MIDDLESEX, ss.

PROBATE COURT.

To the legatees, devisees, and all other persons interested under the last will of Chapin H. Carpenter, late of Newton in said County deceased.

GREETING:

Whereas, George R. Hovey, the executor of said will, has presented to said Court, his petition praying that he may be authorized to sell, at private sale, for not less than sixty-seven dollars per share, one hundred and five shares of the capital stock of the Springfield Paper Co., of Springfield, Mass., said stock being a part of the estate of said deceased.

This is a responsible position and it is a great honor for one so young to receive the appointment. Dr. Bothfield received the degree of C. —The Y. M. C. A. meeting Sunday afternoon was opened by Mr. H. J. —The Highway committee went to Watertown, Tuesday evening, to meet the drainage committee of that town. The Watertown men at first proposed to build a trunk drain on Morse, Boyd, Galen and Water streets, and they next offered to join Newton in building the same drain, extending it on Galen street to the city line. They are anxious to spend as little money as possible.

—President Angell of the Mass. Society for the prevention of cruelty to animals, addressed the children of the Bigelow school, on Thursday morning. Mr. Angell has made the humane work of his life's business and has devoted time and money to it, receiving for it no money in return. Five years ago this society founded the first Band of Mercy. Now there are 5,700 branches and about 400,000 members, indicating a remarkable growth of the movement. The philanthropic should take a greater interest and to which more aid should be given. It prevents much suffering among the dumb animals and inculcates in a child a kindly spirit. Mr. Angell has a pleasant manner and the children enjoyed his talk. He spoke of the use and abuse of the check rein; of kindly consideration for dogs, cats and birds; of the advantages of killing fish and frogs when first caught; and of the influence each one can exercise for the good of the dumb creation.

—Rev. Mr. Nichols sermon last Sunday morning at the Methodist church, on "The Christian Church," his theme being "What has the church done?" Taking his stand with the Christian church when first established he traced its progress through the ages, showing how, though sometimes repulsed it was never defeated till now it stands everywhere acknowledged by friend and foe alike as the exponent of all that is good and grand in our present civilization.

Next Sunday morning Mr. Nichols will preach from, "Take ye away the stone" and in the evening Rev. G. S. Butters of Newtonville will preach the third sermon in the course on, "What have I done for the church."

Fatality at Auburndale.

Thursday morning, Clarence B. Crawford, a young man about 20 years of age attempted to board a moving train at the steps from the Auburn street bridge. He was thrown between the steps and the cars where he lay until the step of the next car struck him on the head and rolled his body over and over until past the steps, when he rolled to one side. He got up without assistance and was taken by Mr. Kallack's residence where he had been visiting and where he was attended by a physician. At first the physician said that his injuries were not serious but it was found that he was suffering from internal hemorrhage of which he died about noon. The remains were viewed by the medical examiner the same day. The parents of the deceased live in Ottawa, Kansas, and the young man was sent East to obtain a business education, and was about to go into business.

House Lots at Auction.

Tomorrow, Chas. F. Rand will sell at auction ten house lots on Thornton, Wapan and Pearl streets, especially adapted for houses of moderate cost, on very easy terms. The homestead of the late Joshua Jennison will also be sold at the same time.

Rev. Pleasant Hunter at Eliot Church.
Rev. Pleasant Hunter occupied the Eliot pulpit last Sunday morning and delivered a forcible sermon. The speaker chose for his text James 5:16.

There is, he said, a striking similarity in the opening chapters of the new and old Testaments; one tells of a spiritual wonder, and the other of a physical wonder. But the wonderful thing about the word is not that it tells of an all-powerful Divinity but that it tells of men and women, weak yet strong. Man has a greater power than that which comes from genius, learning or wealth—the power of prayer. Let us consider why so many do not make use of this power. Skeptics say that either God is not perfect, unchangeable being we believe him to be, or prayer has no power to change him.

God is not deterred from blessing us because He does not know our wants or does not desire to satisfy them but because there are obstacles in the way which prayer alone can remove and render the granting consistent. For example let us suppose we ride from Springfield to Boston on a newly scheduled train; it stops at Worcester and South Framingham. Next week we ride on the same train and the President makes an extra stop; we ask the conductor if the schedule has not been changed and he replies that the extra stop was at a flag station where the President's son has a summer residence. There has been no change in the table but simply a further showing of the plan. So in the spiritual world—the President's sons and prayer is our flag station.

If I have an inflamed eye and go into the sun light the first impulse is to shield my eye; the next day when the inflammation has disappeared, my eye is not pained by the light of day—no change has taken place in the sun but in the eye. The change does not occur in the Infinite but in us. Hatred to sin is as much an attribute of God as omnipotence and as such existed before the world and man were created.

But it may be said—"I believe in the power of prayer to benefit the human soul but how can my prayers bring blessings to another's soul?" When the answering of our prayers for the conversion of another becomes essential to our spiritual upbuilding God can consistently send the Holy Spirit when he could not have done so otherwise.

The immobility of law is urged as a reason against the power of prayer. But those who do so forget that there may be a higher law which over-comes the visible law and not a change in this law.

For instance, the over-coming of the force of gravitation by the power of magnet or the evaporation of water by respiration. If this effect of a higher law is true in two cases why not in a thousand? Why may not the general plan or law of creation overcome the subordinate laws made to carry it out?

The "goodness of God" is a favorite weapon of those who do not believe in prayer. But this argument may be carried to absurdity and we all say that there is no want and sin because God is good.

In addition to these negative arguments are positive ones, among them, the universal impulse to pray which exists in all men. Because men do not pray is no reason to believe that the natural impulse does not exist; for example, men who never pray and do not know how to pray, have in times of great danger fallen on their knees and called on God for help. In the physical world where there is a want, God has given a corresponding satisfaction and the former is reason for the existing of the latter, not vice versa. Man was not given the desire to drink water because the water exists but the water was created because when man came there would exist a want for it to satisfy. God does not deceive the young raven or the lamb which has an instinct when in trouble or want to cry out; why should he deceive an immortal soul? Why he implants in a soul the impulse to make known its wants. He will satisfy that soul.

If there is a power in prayer man is much more a free agent than if this power was lacking. Prayer enables him not only to do as he chooses with what he has, but to have a voice in the choice of what he shall have given him. Prayer is the means of our spiritual upbuilding and when after a life of honest industry we can stand and point to the world saying, "part of the wealth and beauty of the world exists because I existed and worked there," shall we not also say, "part of what I am" "my spiritual life is because of my own efforts and my prayers?"

Rev. Mr. Tiffany's Lectures.

By request of those in charge of the course of lectures on "Venice," to be given by Rev. Francis Tiffany of West Newton in the vestry of Channing Church on Wednesday evenings in November, we reprint the following description of the lectures, which appeared in last week's issue:

To the Editor of THE GRAPHIC:
Permit me to give unsolicited my testimony to the value of the lectures on "Venice," by Rev. Francis Tiffany.

1. These lectures are full of valuable information. Mr. Tiffany has an accurate knowledge of the facts of the history of Venice, but he also knows how to arrange and dispose these facts in such fashion that they cease to be dry annals and become parts of an unfolding drama. 2. Besides having a profound and extensive knowledge of his subject, Mr. Tiffany possesses a rare historic imagination. He gives perspective and atmosphere to his pictures of the past. Under his handling, the facts of history assume the true romance of history. You leave Venice at the close of one of his lectures remembering the "beautiful sad city," as one thinks "of mountain ranges overcast in purple distance dim." 3. The lecturer still further gives you the local color of Venetian life and manners. He has lived enough in the "City of the Sea" to be able to put upon his word pictures the finishing touch of reality. The Venice that is; and the hearer walks with its Doges, its artists and its artisans, as Shakespeare's readers go with Shylock to the Rialto or sit in the Ducal council chamber. In a word, Mr. Tiffany's lectures are more accurate than a guide book or a volume of travels, livelier and more eloquent than common history, and in their style, as fascinating as a page of Ruskin or a poem of Byron.

DR. LINCOLN'S FUNERAL.

IMPRESSIVE CEREMONIES AND A LARGE ATTENDANCE OF MORNING FRIENDS.

As the hour set for the last sad rites approached, the rain which for some hours had been falling, ceased, and the clouds still hung heavily over the city. Nature seemed to sympathize with the people in their sorrow. The village of Newton Centre wore a Sabbath calm, as by groups the citizens collected in the First church. Every denomination and party, every section of the city and many a distant place was represented in the assembly which filled the Congregational church.

About half past three, ex-Alderman Chester advanced up the centre aisle, followed by Pres. Hovey and Rev. Theodore Holmes, the professors of the institution, the remains borne by the hands of six loving friends, and followed by the mourners and students of the Theological Institution, who occupied seats in the centre of the house. As he advanced, Dr. Hovey impressively read the selection beginning, "I am the Resurrection and the Life." The floral decorations were simple and beautiful, consisting of flowers upon the casket and a magnificent cross which stood before the pulpit, signifying the faith in which the deceased had lived, had died, and in which he lives forever. Dr. Hovey, Prof. Stearns, Rev. Dr. Gordon of the Clarendon street church in Boston, Rev. Theodore Holmes and Mr. Dwight Chester, occupied seats upon the platform.

Amid profound silence Dr. Gordon implored the Divine mercy and love in this hour of sorrow, and the blessing of the Holy Spirit promised to those who mourn. Rev. Mr. Holmes read selections from the Scriptures following whom Prof. Stearns feelingly spoke of the life of the beloved dead.

PROFESSOR STEARNS' ADDRESS.

Probably no words of Scripture have been more frequently in our minds the last few days than the language of Jeremiah over a fallen hero: "Alas that are about around him, because him, and all ye that know his name, say, 'How is the strong staff broken—the beautiful rod.' No common grief has brought us here; no ordinary sorrow. It is not merely the loss of a personal friend, it is the loss of a public servant. Were it the loss of a personal friend alone, we could mingle our tears with the grief-stricken family, drop our flowers at the silent grave, and then pass on with life unshaken in our memory, kept sacred as in our 'holy of holies.' But he was not only the loving, devoted husband, the wise, care-taking father, the reliable and affectionate brother, he was a man of the people, a man for the people, a man for the people, and widely known and highly esteemed by the people. So that as representatives of the people with whom he was associated and with whom his life had been so long identified, it is fitting that we in this public manner should express our sympathy with those who are painfully bereaved and give expression to the public loss.

The suddenness of his departure is probably the most pervasive thought in our minds. We did not think that Dr. Lincoln could die. A frame of muscular fibre, a body which scarcely ever knew sickness, a nerve which never knew weariness, a step so bounding and buoyant, a mind so healthy and elastic; who ever dreamed that a few hours of pain would bring the fast pulse-beat and compel us to say, "He is gone?" And he left us suddenly by some accident during his journey, we should have deemed his departure a common one; but to die "in full strength," the news of one hour that he is slightly ill, and the news of a few hours later that his spirit has ascended, startles us. "Can it be?" "Yes it is!" "Can it be?" "Yes it is!"

And flowers have their time to fall, And flowers to wither at the north-wind's breath, And stars to set—but all—

Then hasten on, for time own, O Death, It falls to me to speak of Dr. Lincoln as a preacher and teacher. Let me first sketch in few words the main facts of his life. He was born in Boston, April 14, 1821. He graduated from the Latin School with the class of '36, from Brown University with the class of '40, and from the Newton Theological Institution with the class of '45. He was ordained in Boston by what is now known as the Clarendon Street Baptist church, Sept. 21, 1845, and was subsequently pastor in New Britain, Penn., Philadelphia, Jamaica Plain, Mass., and Central Providence, R. I. He came to Newton in 1850, where he was professor of Ecclesiastical History and for five years professor of Homiletics and Pastoral Duties, he continued in the service of the institution until God called him up higher. His public life spans a period of 42 years, and is quite evenly divided between the work of a preacher and teacher, but he was before the public chiefly as a preacher, and his years of teaching were years of preaching. He loved to preach; it was a great sacrifice to him not to preach. He never wearied in preaching or by preaching. However severe the toils of the Sunday morning often found him hundreds of miles away as fresh and bright for the call of the pulpit, as if he were leaving the quietness and rest of home. He seemed always ready, always prepared. In the history of the institution no teacher was ever called so frequently to supply the pulpits of churches, far and near, and no one so often preached at the ordination of young men for the ministry. To preach was as natural and as necessary for him as to breathe. And there is nothing surprising, perhaps, that his love for preaching was responded to by the demands for his services, for he was eminently an attractive preacher. His manner was attractive. Rejecting the manuscript, his gifted and well-trained memory enabled him to say what he had previously carefully and elaborately prepared with such perfect freedom and spontaneity with such perfect abandon, he seemed to be uttering his thoughts with the spontaneity of the moment. There was memorizing, and yet little appearance of a slavish memorizing, so accurately and almost unconsciously to him self did he reproduce what he had prepared. I have heard him preach the same sermon on several occasions, and was unable to detect a change in a single sentence or in the wording of a single sentence. His trained memory seldom if ever failed him, and his freedom of manner won and retained the attention of his hearers.

His manner was animated. The sermon was in him and must out. The sermon for the time being was himself—the whole of himself. Its thoughts controlled him, not he them. The quietness of his early preaching became vehemence in his later preaching, and his hearers knew and felt that his soul was on fire with the thoughts he was uttering. Sometimes they would say with Festus, "Paul, thou art mad; thy much learning doth turn thee to madness." But he would say with Paul, "I am not mad, most excellent Festus, but speak forth words of truth and soberness."

His style in preaching, his thoughts were likewise attractive. It was smooth, clear, flowing, variable and eminently pure. Not a long sentence, not an obscure sentence. It was drawn from the "well of English undefiled." It lacked ruggedness, perhaps, it was not crisp, it was too evenly balanced to keep attention the sluggish ear; but in his later preaching he overcame the measured and attractive form of his other literary work, which had naturally characterized his sermons, and became more terse and sententious.

His method of sermonizing was also attractive. With a brief explanation of his text he announced his theme, and by a natural, orderly and climactic arrangement, the course of his thought was easily followed by one and all, from the beginning to the close. Without announcing the heads of his discourse numerically, there were always three or four, and phrases to which the mind's fingers could easily cling, and by which the leading thoughts were easily remembered. Every point made was made the clearer by the affluence of his illustrations, his broad reading enabling him to draw from all possible sources "things in heaven and things on earth, and things under the earth." History, biography, poetry, science, the secular and the Christian alike were ready to his call and were skillfully used to adorn or emphasize the thought he would enforce. The less educated may have been somewhat dazzled at the abundance of his learning, but the best educated were charmed with the aptness of his explanations, and both alike were profited by the clearness with which the truth was unfolded.

In the specialty of his themes, he was also an attractive preacher. While tenaciously walking in the "old paths" and earnestly defending the truth in Jesus, from his position as a teacher his preaching at least in his later years took most generally the form of the defensive. He felt called upon to defend Christianity from its current attacks of its enemies. Always as the pastor, seeking variety and fullness in his themes, so that he might feed each one of his flock, these later efforts attracted the people by what might be properly termed novelty. They knew that he would have something new and fresh to say, something aside from the usual topics of the pulpit, something that might help them in their own mental difficulties and which might aid them in removing the difficulties of others. I need not say that their expectations were gratified.

But Dr. Lincoln as a preacher was not attractive simply because of his manner, his style, or his methods, but for the central thought of all—Christ and Him crucified. He was the centre of his hopes and the centre of his thoughts. To magnify the cross, to exalt the cross, to glorify the cross, to proclaim salvation as a gift through the cross, was his one and sole aim from his new birth in Christ Jesus to his ascension into the presence of Christ Jesus. No hymn was so choice to him, in the singing of which his face would become so radiant, as the familiar one of Bowring.

"In the cross of Christ I glory, Towering o'er the wrecks of time, All the light of sacred story Gathers round its base as sun."

It is difficult for one teacher to speak of another teacher's methods and power, for we never see each other in the classroom, and know little of each other's plans and results. What we know is from familiar intercourse and from remarks made by the students. Dr. Lincoln has been connected with the institution nearly twenty years. His chair has been the chair of Church History, though for some five years he occupied the chair of Homiletics and Pastoral Duties. He brought to his work the rich experience of several successful pastorates, and he has wrought out his work with the special needs of pastors constantly in view. He has not sought so much to make scholars as to make men; men who were soon to experience the bustle and battle of practical life; men who would be called upon to defend themselves as to what they preached and as to how they preached. He took pains to cultivate a mind which gripped the salient points of his topics, and fluently illustrated them with great wealth of learning, the student ranged with him over the history of the church, gathering up the most important facts and principles, and making himself familiar with the bearing of those facts upon the life of the church of the present day. That he did this work incisively, comprehensively and interestingly is the testimony of one and all. Any man who could make Hagenbach's "History of Doctrines" endurable and enjoyable is worthy of a crown. Dr. Lincoln did it. In all his teaching, though while using a textbook, the work of the students was laborious and his demands exacting, those who wrought with him felt the magnetism of his example and the inspiration of his instructions. In later years he gave his own outlines and gave freer scope to the range of his teachings. To teach as to preach was to put his own personality, his thoughts and their ground-work into men, and there are scores of his disciples scattered all over the world who will say at the news of his death, "How is the strong staff broken, the beautiful rod?"

But I must not linger longer on these characteristics. He was preacher and he was teacher, but he was more, he was a Christian, the highest type of man. Genial, hearty, considerate, hopeful, though an historicist, as free from pessimism as light from darkness, the step, the voice, the animated bearing—all we remember him by, was permeated with the Christian element, love to God and love to man. It was for this element his students loved him and confided in him, his colleagues enjoyed him and appreciated him, and the churches he served esteemed him and honored him.

"The rainbow comes and goes, And lovely is the rose; The moon doth with delight Look round her when the heavens are bare; Waters on a starry night Are beautiful and fair; The sunbeats in a glorious birth, But yet I know, where'er I go, That there hath passed away a glory from the earth."

Brother, Farewell.

President Hovey, following that beautiful hymn, beautifully rendered by a selected quartet, addressed the congregation as follows:

PRESIDENT HOVEY'S ADDRESS.

One week ago Dr. Lincoln went to Fall River and took part in the ordination of a young man to the Christian ministry. That was his last public act in a form of service which he loved. Four days later his busy life came to an end. Many of his neighbors did not know that he had been sick until they heard of his death. So quickly did the strong angel pull down his earthly tabernacle. But we humbly trust that the emancipated spirit of our brother was through this absorbing grace of God conveyed at once to the land of rest. Of what he has there learned without effort, in the light of a clearer day than ours, we have no distinct conception, but we are permitted to look back over his course among men and consider the work he accomplished.

Reference has been made in fitting words to his career as a preacher and as a teacher. But he was distinguished for versatility and diligence. His energy poured itself into the world through many channels. His pen was that of a ready writer. None of his associates could compete with him in rapidity of composition. And though he did not give himself to authorship in the stricter sense, his contributions to important reviews and to the weekly religious press were, if brought together in the form of books, fit the shelves of a small library. His solicitude about current events, whether religious, moral, or civil, was also deep, and therefore he sometimes resorted to the daily papers for the expression of his views respecting them. Some of his writing on multifarious topics, and in the nature of the case ephemeral, was meant for the passing hour. But it was not produced without toil, nor was it the expression of a momentary impulse. In it were the convictions of one who had read and remembered much, who had diligently considered the nature of the human mind in manifold relations, who had sought to penetrate the meaning of its conflicts and changes, and who felt a keen desire for the progress of mankind in everything true and good. Decided and outspoken, he doubtless sometimes offended those whose opinions differed from his own, but I have no reason to believe that he was ever moved by personal animosity to his occasionally pungent criticism of the course pursued by public men. The tremendous crisis through which our nation passed more than twenty-five years ago burned into the souls of Christian ministers a conviction of their duty to the State which many of them had not felt before, and since that epoch they have given more attention to the practical working of our free government. Without doubt the agony of that crisis, as well as the nature of the elements involved, may help to explain the profound interest which Dr. Lincoln manifested in political movements.

But, after all, these engaged his attention but a small part of the time, and it is only just to say that his concern about civil law and political integrity was due to a great measure to his regard for Christian truth and freedom. Nine tenths of all that he wrote for the press was distinctly religious, and no one emphasized more constantly than he the sole efficacy of Christian principles to save a people from ruin. Few men with so broad an outlook are so hopeful as was he. Rightly or wrongly he believed in the power of a divine power destined to bring far greater results in the future than it has done in the past. Perhaps he chose to look on the bright side of events; perhaps he thought of the power and grace of God moving them to the weakness and perversity of man; but it is a fact, I think, that his language was generally full of hope and confidence.

In speaking of Dr. Lincoln's life I may be permitted to refer to his connection with Brown University, first in the board of Trustees and then in the board of Fellows. At no small cost of time and money he was uniformly in his place at the meetings of the corporation, and his interest in good learning was sincere and practical; but he valued learning not so much for the pleasure it gives to its possessor, as for the ability it gives to render service to men.

As I look back over the nineteen years of Dr. Lincoln's life in Newton Centre, nothing impresses me more than his industry and courage. From early dawn till late at night, from the garden to the lecture room, from the pulpit to the chapel, from the examination of manuscripts to the criticism of books, from the study of the natural sciences to the study of Christian life, from ordaining councils to meetings of the board of Fellows, from a political caucus to the preparation of a sermon, he hastened with resolute purpose and rapid step, afraid of no toil, disconcerted by no emergency, assisted by no sorrow. His motto seems to have been, "Work while it is day, for night cometh when no man shall work."

I will not say that night has come, but rather that his work on earth is finished. Henceforth action will be restful and life sweet. Blessed are the dead who rest in the Lord, for they shall not be troubled any more. From their labors and their works follow them. I have said that we have at best only a dim conception of the life to come. The gates are not "wide open," as an imaginative writer has said; in many respects they are not even ajar. The gates are not yet open, and we are not yet able to see through them. But we know that our brother's action and his work, with evil, that we must wrestle, not only with flesh and blood, but also with principalities and powers and spirits of wickedness in high places, and we are taught that beyond the veil there remaineth a Sabbath rest for the people of God; a rest from all our labors, from all our imperfect achievement, from all our wearying living wearisome or tomorrow a doubtful good. Into that rest, which is not literally sleep, without consciousness, or disturbed by dreams, but rather the activity of inexhaustible strength and peace, our brother and companion has entered, as we trust, and is now forever with the Lord. Yesterday here; today there!

He will be missed in his family, but not there alone; he will also be missed in the school, in the village, in the churches, in the periodicals, in the world which has few such diligent workers. But we cannot ask the Master to return him to us; we can only pray that his example may be an incentive to worthy action in those whom he knew, and that the blessing of God may rest upon the heads of those who were dear to his heart, and at home and in school. May these be able to defy under the influence of that blessing: "Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me."

"Life's race well run, Life's work well done, Life's crown well won."

Dr. Gordon offered prayer, the quartet sang "Abide With Me," and the face of the departed friend and neighbor was looked upon for the last time. The many moist eyes and sad countenances during the service bespoke the love and esteem in which Rev. Heman Lincoln

JOHN ANDERSON, MY JO.

John Anderson, my Jo John,
When first I was your wife,
On every washing day, John,
I wearied of my life.
It made you cross to see, John,
Your shirts not white as snow,
I washed them with our home-made soap,
John Anderson, my Jo.

Alas! many a quarrel then, John,
I had you and I together,
But now all that is changed, John,
We'll never have another;
For washed with IVORY SOAP, John,
Your shirts ARE white as snow,
And now I smile on washing day,
John Anderson, my Jo.

EAT PERFECT BREAD!

Nature's Great Vital Energy Recupercator.

Wheat, a natural food, contains all the fifteen elements found in the human body, and chemical analysis shows these same fifteen elements and nearly in the same proportion as the human body. Deficiency of vitalizing elements is the trouble with fine flour.

ARLINGTON WHEAT MEAL.

(AN UNEQUALLED FOOD FOR ALL.)

This differs from the Graham flour of commerce in being ground from the WHOLE GRAIN of the choicest selected White Wheat. In the coverings of the wheat are the Phosphates which go to constitute bone and muscle, and materially assist digestion by causing the rapid decomposition of the food. It is in this way the Phosphates in ARLINGTON WHEAT MEAL act, giving new power and strength to the system.

Reasons Why it is Preferable to Flour.

REGIMEN AND DIET.

Effort of the mind or movement of a muscle involves the expenditure or waste of nervous energy and vitality, in proportion to the magnitude of the effort; these wasted products pass off with effete substances from the body, while recuperation is effected by nutrition. The loss of physical force by using Common Flour is immense, which analysis proves. See Facts.

ANALYSIS—WHEAT VS. FLOUR.

Flour is the only impoverished food used by man—impoverished by the withdrawal of the tegumentary portion of the wheat, leaving the internal or starchy portion. See the facts in chemistry we find that in 100 parts of substance—

Wheat has an ash of 17.7 parts;
Flour has an ash of 4.1 parts—an impoverishment of over three-quarters.
Wheat has 82 parts of Phosphoric Acid.
Flour 21 parts of Phosphoric Acid—an impoverishment of about three-quarters.
Wheat has 0.8 Lime, and 0.6 Soda.
Flour has 0.1 Lime and 0.1 Soda—an impoverishment of five-sixths. Lime and Soda each.
Wheat has sulphur 1.5; flour has no Sulphur.
Wheat has Sulphuric Acid 0.5; flour has no Sulphuric Acid. Wheat has Silica 0.3; Flour has no Silica.

Pure Wheat Meal Contains More Life Sustaining Properties Than any Other Food.

The history of the Roman Empire in the time of Julius Caesar shows that wheat, as an article of food, combined with fresh outdoor air life, is capable of producing and sustaining the highest type of physical manhood the world ever saw. The empire was built up and maintained by soldiers whose main article of food was wheat.

Dogs fed by Magendie (vide Kirks & Page's Physiology on flour, died in forty days; other dogs fed on wheat meal bread flourished and thrived. The three-fourths impoverishment of the mineral ingredients present in flour to the first. Why should mankind suffer from living on impoverished food as they do?

People who live on mostly pure flour will, if they use the Arlington Wheat Meal, find their expenses in this department diminished three-fourths. The Wheat Meal will go further and give four times as much nutriment as an equal amount of flour.

Laboring men can do their work with less exhaustion, because it contains more sustaining forces than any other food.

It is a natural food for every Brain Worker, containing the necessary Elements to strengthen the brain.

Children who feed on this need never be troubled with Cholera Infantum which destroys so many children.

Many Cases of Dyspepsia of long duration have been cured by eating Wheat Meal, and it is THE BEST CURE FOR THE STOMACH AND BOWELS.

The Arlington Wheat Meal has been on the market for the past 12 years, bearing the highest reputation. Being ground from the best pure wheat, it furnishes to the public the means of supplying a perfect food. Its quality as it leaves the Arlington Mills is guaranteed to be of a superlative excellence and purity. Beware of imitations. Ask your grocer for it, and take no other. Trade supplied by Whole Grocers. Write for Circulars, etc., to was held by his fellow-citizens, and with which he will be remembered in the community of which he was a useful, honored member.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

PARK THEATRE.—Miss Clara Morris occupies the stage at the Park Theatre this week. The first three evenings were devoted to "L'Article 47," a morbid, unhealthy piece, but one full of opportunities for the display of that style of acting in which Miss Morris is successful. Last night "Alice" was substituted, and will be presented tonight and tomorrow afternoon and evening. Next week, "A Hole in the Ground" will be presented.

GLOBE THEATRE.—Imie Kivaly has revived the "Duke's Motto," so well known twenty years ago when Mr. Fletcher took the role of "Lagadere," which name Mr. Kivaly uses to designate his version. The play is well mounted, the scenery and costumes being often elegant, and the scenery is treated to a series of beautiful pictures.

BOSTON MUSEUM.—"Sophia," Mr. Buchanan's dramatization of Fielding's "Tom Jones," finishes its second week at the Boston Museum tomorrow night. It is a bright, interesting piece, with the spirit and good points of the romance retained and the objectionable features removed. The performance runs smoothly, and is presented by the Museum company in their best manner, which is saying a good deal.

BOSTON THEATRE.—Wednesday was the fiftieth performance of "A Run of Luck" at the Boston Theatre. The ladies in the audience were presented with a pretty souvenir of the occasion, consisting of a card adorned with a pin cushion, fashioned after a jockey cap with a riding whip and a silver horse shoe pin.

HOLLIS STREET.—"Phyene," the new play given at the Hollis Street Theatre by Mr. Boucicault, gave place Thursday evening to a revival of the ever popular "The Shaughraun," with Mr. Boucicault as "Conn." This will be the attraction this, and tomorrow evening and Sunday matinee. Mr. Boucicault is deservedly popular with Boston audiences, and "The Shaughraun," "The Colleen Bawn" (in preparation), will be witnessed by large and delighted audiences.

The City Government.
The Common Council met Monday evening, President Coffin in the chair and every member present. The proceedings were very brief and concerned mostly concurrent business. When the matter of naming the "Cliff" guards all the returns from the Army since Jan. 1, 1887, came up, Councilman Barr rose for information, and said that there had been two commanders since the establishment, and he wished to know if both were charged with neglect of duty in making the returns.

Councilman Kennedy said that at the subject was a very painful one to him and he did not wish to say anything, unless it was absolutely necessary. It was the duty of the commanding officer to make returns every three months to the City Treasurer, but since Jan. 1, 1887, no one had done so. When his immediate predecessor was elected there was no money in the treasury, as the funds had not been collected for two or three years. He was chosen treasurer and an effort was made to straighten out the accounts, but since early in the summer the Army had not been paid, and there had been no returns to make.

Councilman Barr said he hoped that the councilman would not think him over exacting, as he had been a neglect of duty, he wished to know whether it was the fault of the immediate predecessor or of Councilman Kennedy, or a form error.

Councilman Kennedy said that his immediate predecessor, (Capt. Byron) had not neglected his duty, as only his occupancy of the office had been neglected. He had not neglected his duty, as only his occupancy of the office had been neglected. He had not neglected his duty, as only his occupancy of the office had been neglected.

There being no other business the hour adjourned.

The True Story of a Hat.

Mrs. Frank went to Nantasket a few weeks ago. She took her hat; the black one with the three feathers, royal in number.

She was too well pleased with her hat and herself for wearing it, to be together let alone in her happiness, for she presented such an appearance of contentment, which some people seem to find so perfectly maddening.

When on her return to Boston shore, while sitting at table in the Boston and Albany station at supper, two young ladies came in and took chairs opposite. No. 2 made a remark to No. 1, but in so low a tone of voice as to be entirely inaudible to Mrs. Frank, but No. 1 replied more boldly. "No," she said with an air of decision, "I do not like it."

Being a sensitive, shrinking soul, Mrs. Frank immediately felt, rather than knew, that "it" referred to her hat.

Summoning all her fortitude, she raised her eyes and viewed her antagonists coolly.

No. 2 had on a hat the same size as Mrs. Frank's but of finer "pedigree," and, ye gods! her five feet dropped in the same direction as did Mrs. Frank's three, yet with an air more debonaire.

"Ah," sighed Mrs. Frank, "how could No. 1 speak so huskily for she condemned your hat in the same breath."

With added courage, Mrs. F. turned to contemplate No. 1.

Evidently every hair had its particular line of duty laid out for it to perform, and every symptom of rebellion from curl to ribbon had been promptly quelled at the first indication of a revolt. She even cut her head with a precision heretofore unknown. Mrs. Frank instantly made up her mind that No. 1 considered feathers flighty and immoral.

A feeling of great despondency stole over Mrs. Frank. She arose, and was replacing her chair, when the same voice evidently intending to annihilate her and her hat forever, repeated its first refrain, but even with her unification then before, "No, I do not like it."

Mrs. Frank was completely crushed. "Is life worth living?" she asked herself as she dove beneath the table for her wraps. "Shall I rise again, or perish thus ignominiously at her feet?" She turned and gazed after the two ladies that still bound her to this earth, now nearing the cashier's desk.

"To die thus never," she shouted, "I will yet live for them, and the hat," and incontinently died.

A Visit to the Hospital.

Editor of the Graphic:
One day last week I had occasion to visit this institution of which many of us really know so little. I reached there just after a poor man who had met with an accident on the railroad had been brought in for treatment. It was too late to save his life, although everything was done for him that kindness and skill could devise. Surgeons had been hastily summoned, amputations had been performed, but he never rallied from the awful shock of a train passing over him. When I saw the emergency to help him, I admired the devotion of the surgeons and the wonderful coolness of the nurses in charge.

There were five men in the men's ward, and every one of the six beds in the women's ward was occupied. "Are there any sick children here?" I asked. "No," was the reply, "but see what we have to do," and they showed me a patient in the women's ward, a sick woman of full stature, who had to cramp herself into a child's bed because there was no room for her elsewhere.

"But why do you not get more room?" was the very natural question. "Oh, we cannot run into debt. We are waiting for some of the rich people in Newton to give us $5000 to build another ward." Surely the good people in this wealthy city do not know the condition of things or they would supply this needed sum before many days.

What a splendid opportunity to do good, and how eagerly some one should seize it!

How can $5000 be better spent? I came away wishing that I could draw a check for this amount, but my bank account is too small.

While these delightful autumn days last I hope that some of our citizens who scarcely know where the Hospital is, will drive out Washington street in search of it. Miss Palmer will show them around any Wednesday or Saturday afternoon, and they will feel all the better for seeing the good work is going on so steadily but so quietly in our midst.

Yours truly,
A. TITZEN.

The Lief Erickson Statue.

The statue of Lief Erickson, which is just completed by the distinguished sculptor, Miss Anne Whitney, and will be unveiled on Saturday, is a bronze figure of heroic size, grand and picturesque in its conception. Here is the typical Norseman. The pose is easy and spirited; the right foot slightly advanced, the hair breezy-blown and tumbling, and one hand shading the eyes that gaze joyfully and intently into the distance. The drapery is a suit of mail with tuckless, legless and strong shoes. The pedestal of Longmeadow stone is designed as a ship of the Vikings. The price is a monster, the four corners rest on dolphins' heads, and the stern represents the tail. The inscription which is given on one side in ancient Runic characters is thus translated on the other side, where it appears in English:

Lief
The Discoverer,
Son of Erik
Who sailed from Iceland
And landed on this continent
A. D. 1000.

On the other two sides are panels, on one which is carved the scene representing the landing of Lief and his followers, and on the other the discoverer relating the story. The work will add materially to the monumental art of Boston.—Traveler.

THE GRAPHIC'S NEW PRESS.

The GRAPHIC is printed this week on a new Babcock press, which has all the modern improvements, and is capable of doing as fast and as good work as any machine of the kind. During the past year we have spent hours in listening to agents of the leading printing press manufacturers, and have acquired a great deal of more or less practical information. The result was that the Babcock seemed to be the most desirable machine, and the hearty endorsement this make of presses have received from all who have used them for any length of time is a sufficient guarantee that they will wear well. The better they are known the more they are liked, seems to be the general verdict.

The GRAPHIC's press is the largest one in this city or vicinity, and in spite of the increased size of the paper, there is yet room for further enlargement as the business increases.

The old press which has been discarded and is now on its way west to grow up with the country, has served the GRAPHIC since its foundation, and was one of the oldest machines in this part of the country. It was so old that it had become something of a curiosity. It sufficed when the circulation of the paper was small, but when it increased so that a half day was necessary to print off the edition, it was apparent that a faster press was a necessity, and one that could print at least 1,500 papers an hour.

We have already received many congratulations from the other occupants of Post Office block, who are no longer frightened by the shaking of the building when the paper is being printed, and the improved appearance of the paper will probably be appreciated by our readers.

DRUNKENNESS ON LATE TRAINS.

The frequency of disturbance on the late trains by intoxicated persons, especially on Saturday evenings, has grown to be a serious annoyance to all decent people, who have occasion to use those trains, and it is time an effort were made by the railroad companies to stop it.
The company has ample legal authority and power to exclude from the trains all persons whose condition is such as to render it probable that they will create a disturbance or be an annoyance to other passengers, whether they have a ticket or not, and a careful watch should be kept at the gates to see that no such person passes through them. This precaution would be better for the company and less of an interruption to its business than to stop the train to eject a drunken nuisance, as is often done, and it is the right of respectable passengers to insist that they shall not be subjected to such scenes. We think that if the matter is pressed by the citizens of Newton the Boston & Albany Railroad company would be willing to take the necessary measures to keep intoxicated persons out of the cars, and this would put a stop to the practice of regular visits to the city for the purpose of getting intoxicated, by people who know that if they are able to get aboard of the cars the company will carry them out and dump them on their station platforms.
Let us insist on an end to this nuisance.

THE COTTAGE HOSPITAL'S NEEDS.

The result of a visit to the Cottage Hospital is told in another column, and the pressing need of a new ward shown.
One of the patients, a woman of full stature, has to lie in a child's bed, for lack of better accommodations. As the new ward would cost only $5,000, it would seem, as though that sum might be easily raised in such a city as Newton, where thousands are given away, to outside charities.

Charity should begin at home and our first duty is to the poor and the sick of our own city. With the continued growth of the work done at the Cottage Hospital, the day is not far distant when patients cannot be accommodated. With $5,000, the women's ward could be built, and it would not be necessary to put grown people into the children's beds.
The matter should be carefully considered by charitable people, and steps taken at once to provide this sum.

There is no question but that the Hospital is urgently needed here, and that it is doing a necessary and important work. The care of the sick and the suffering is a duty, which in this age of the world can not be neglected by any community, and if the attention of Newton people is once properly called to the matter there would be a prompt response.

A fund might be started and subscriptions invited by some bank or individual, who would acknowledge the gifts as they were received.

MR. HASKELL RETIRES.

In Thursday's Boston Herald Mr. E. B.
Haskell announced his retirement from that paper, after 28 years of experience, and hereafter Messrs. R. M. Pulsifer and
C. H. Andrews will be sole proprietors.
Mr. Haskell retires for the sake of having leisure for study and travel, and it is pleasant to note that the hearty good feeling which has always existed between the proprietors of the Herald is not disturbed in the least, and that the friendship cemented by such a long association is not broken. The public will learn of Mr. Haskell's retirement with regret, as he has aided to give the Herald its individuality and to make it what it is today, one of the leading newspapers in the world. Mr. Haskell has seen the paper grow from small beginnings to its present prosperity and influence, and it has reached that point where the presence or absence of any particular editor will hardly be noticed by the general public, although careful readers will miss
Mr. Haskell's strong and suggestive editorials. Since the present proprietors took charge the Herald has grown in public esteem even more than it has in a material way, until now there are few business men who feel that they can afford to do without it, and it is also a necessity to the general reader. Mr.
Haskell's friends in this city will wish him many years of good health to enjoy his well-earned leisure.

THE REPRESENTATIVES.

The Republicans of Newton were unanimous in their choice of representatives, and next year the city will be represented by Messrs. Walworth and Slocum.

There was no kind of a contest in the convention, and the speech of ex-Alderman Powers in seconding Mr. Slocum's nomination, was a very graceful and effective one.

The Democrats nominated Frank Fanning and Col. Francis J. Parker at their caucus, but as one of the attendants said, they had not the slightest hope of electing them.

The campaign has so far been unusually quiet in Newton, but next Monday evening an effort will be made to arouse some enthusiasm by a rally in City Hall, with Lt. Gov. Brackett, and Rev. E. H.
Cape, D. D., of Tufts College as the speakers.

Another rally will be held on Friday evening at the same place, when Hon.
Henry B. Metcalf of Rhode Island, and others will be the speakers.

The GRAPHIC celebrates the beginning of its sixteenth year by appearing in an enlarged form, some ten columns having been added, and it is printed on a new Babcock press.

It is hoped that the change will be appreciated by our readers, and by another week we expect to have everything in perfect order, and to improve greatly upon the appearance of the paper.

To-morrow is the last day for registration, and City Hall will be open from 9
a. m. to 12 m., and from 3 to 5 and 7 to 10 p. m., for voters whose names are not on the list, to appear before the registrators.

Economy Needed in City Affairs.

The steady increase both in the rate of taxation and of assessors' valuations in the Newtons call for earnest consideration, as it is certain that unless a halt is called a good many who now live here will be compelled to seek homes elsewhere, for whether a person owns or hires a home he must, directly or indirectly pay the taxes on it, and if out of a limited, or fixed, income, as is the case in most instances, any increase in taxation must be followed by retrenchment in other ways, as there is generally no surplus or savings to take it out of.

Those who are responsible for the present high rate of taxation say there are exceptional reasons for it, floods, addition to library, new school-houses, etc.

Opening up new streets and roads, and the care of them, necessarily eats up a good share of the expenditures, but it would seem as if the steadily increasing number of houses, and consequent increased total value of real estate should afford revenue enough to take care of most matters and others. Anyway, I think it inevitable that unless a way is found of keeping down the rate of taxation below what it is today, people with moderate means must migrate; I mean the class who cannot afford to live in homes valued at over $7,000, who must leave the Newtons in the possession of the few with long purses who can pay an extra hundred dollars or so for rent or taxes without feeling it in such a way as compels a retrenchment in living expenses or in other unpleasant ways.

At 1 o'clock on Monday the department was called upon to suppress a slight fire in a house occupied by George Sanders on Lucas Court; the damage was slight, amounting, perhaps, to $15.00. Wednesday morning a slight fire occurred in Mr. B. & A. R. H. freight depot, which was supposed to be incendiary. The damage was slight.

—The improvements upon the Unitarian church being completed, it is to be thrown open to the congregation, this (Friday) evening, the first sociable of the season, and a large number is expected. There is little but unqualified praise and satisfaction expressed at the increased commodiousness of the rooms and the good taste of the decorations, reflecting great credit upon the efficiency and faithfulness with which the arduous duties had been performed by the committee.

—The society of St. Bernard church realized from their fair nearly the sum of $5,500, which will extinguish the debt on their parsonage. The sales were nearly all made by shares. The wheel of fortune turned very impartially, donating a fine Jersey cow valued at $100 to a gentleman in Boston, and an elegant easy chair, which would have finely decorated the parsonage, to a friend in Auburndale, and other valuable articles were similarly distributed.

—The old friends and school companions of Miss Lena Barnes, grand-daughter of C. C. Cook of this place, will be interested to learn of her marriage last week to Mr. Arthur Felch of Natick, which is to be her future residence. The wedding was at her home in Sherborn. The bridesmaid and bridesmaid were Mr. Fred C. Cook and sister of the groom. Rev. Mr. Douce officiating. The bride was plainly but elegantly attired in white silk and ornaments. The remembrances from friends were very numerous and valuable. A large party drove from this place in barges.

—The chiefs of police of some twenty cities, met at Youngs, Boston, last Saturday, to form a prominent organization.

Mr. Lothrop J. Cloyes of Cambridge presided. A committee on constitution and by-laws was appointed to report at the next meeting. A committee on nomination reported the following list of officers, which was unanimously elected: President, Lothrop J. Cloyes of Cambridge; vice-president, R. B. Hillard of Fall River; secretary and treasurer, D. M. Hammond of Newton. The name "Massachusetts Chiefs of Police Union" was adopted. The association will meet again in two weeks at the same place.

—The vestry of the Baptist church was prettily decorated with bunting and green boughs, on the occasion of the fair and festival held Wednesday and Thursday.

DO, MI, SOL.

A festive note in love, content,
Took his guitar with air intent,
And called forth in his best array,
And at a d. or his light footsteps staid.
He'd not desired to serenade
Her, whom he thought he loved the best,
And to this end great effort made,
And gave himself no moment's rest.
He played and sang full many an hour,
Now with pathos—then with power,
Much in earnest was this gifted youth,
There was no gainsaying this, forsooth.
In the glimmer of the morning, dim,
He thought her fair face appeared to him
As opened forth in this gifted youth,
Till the woe with its added echoes rang.
His heart beat fast, he never drew
To see her love he deemed so true,
"Gee Scott!" he yelled; then sang no more,
"This House to Let" was on the door,

AN AWKWARD SECRET.

CHAPTER I.

In a poor lodging house in Glasgow, close by the fire, sat a big, stout woman, who was reading a scrap of a newspaper, which had evidently been used as a wrapper, so crushed and dirty it looked. Her face was roughened by constant exposure to the weather, and the evident signs of intemperance habits were not wanting—although she was not prepossessing. At the opposite side of the fireplace sat an old man black with dirt.

"Is there any news, mistress?" he said.

"News! It's an old scrap; there's no news in it," replied the apple-woman, for such she was.

"What," said he, "nobody drowned, hanged, born or married in?"

"Na, oh, ay! here's the death column," she replied.

"Why, you do seem to have found news, after all," he remarked, as he saw her start from her seat after giving a glance down the column.

"Yes," said he, in an agitated voice; "I see an old friend of mine has died lately."

Her voice had still the hoarse, broken sound, the result of her calling, and drunken habits; but the Glasgow accent had vanished, and she now spoke in tones and with a purity seldom heard in such dens.

"Your friend was not likely to leave you anything," said the man, scornfully, as if he resented the change in her manner of speech.

"Can you tell me where Ravenscraig Hall is?" she said, leaving his remark unnoticed.

"Am I to intimate terms with the Prince of Wales?" he answered derisively. The drink's been over much for ye the night, my woman."

She looked scornfully at him, then, lifting her empty basket, went out into the night.

"It will be somewhere at the West End," she muttered to herself while going in that direction.

Every policeman she encountered was asked if he could direct her to Ravenscraig Hall, and neither the suspicious questions of some, nor the rude answers of others, deterred her from continuing her inquiries. She was at length rewarded. One policeman knew such a place on the Great Western Road.

"Mr. Cran Battersey's house?"

"Yes; that's it," said the woman, gratefully.

The policeman looked curiously after her, and seemed half inclined to take a note of her appearance, but she was allowed to go on unmolested. She was thoroughly tired when at last she reached Ravenscraig, it was a large, square house, standing back from the road, with a nice avenue up to it, and an open railing in front. A servant girl was standing by the gate, glancing furtively up and down the road.

"It's a fine night," said the apple-woman.

"Yes, it is," replied the girl.

"Is this Mr. Cran Battersey's house?"

"Yes. What were you wanting at such a time of night?"

"Oh, I was just passing. I heard that he had died lately. I knew the family in England."

"That must have been a long time ago," replied the girl.

"A long time ago," said the woman with a sigh. "A long, long time ago. He had a daughter then—quite a baby. I suppose she'd be a woman now?"

"Quite grown up, I should think," said the girl, with a smile.

"And she was married, and her father so recently dead?"

"His death was very sudden. The day for the marriage had been fixed long before, and he asked that it might not be put off as his daughter had no relations to say with."

"And so she married. It must have been a melancholy marriage, I should think."

"Oh, it was very quiet, of course," said the servant, who seemed disposed to be very communicative. They went to church and got married, and started off for Calender."

"And what is her new name?"

"Mrs. Fred Oswald she is now. He is a C. A."

"Well, good night my dear. Thanks for your information. If I see your young man down the road, I'll tell him to hurry up and not keep you waiting."

"You are an impudent old thing," said the girl with a giggle; "I'm not waiting on any young man!"

"And so she married!" muttered the apple-woman, as she turned her face towards the town again, "and away at Calender; that's a good way off. I might tramp it, and do a little trade one way or another by the road; but that would take a long time. I'll have to be a teetotal for a week or so, and save up. I think I can manage that," and having made up her mind, she quickened her pace and walked steadily into the town without further adventure.

CHAPTER II.

Fred Oswald was very anxious about his young wife. Her father's death was his first great sorrow. Brought up in luxury, her every wish gratified as soon as it was formed, that event had come like a thunderbolt upon her, and the world was strangely changed in her eyes. Her marriage so soon after, though in obedience to her father's expressed wishes, seemed little short of sacrilege, and what happiness she felt in her husband's company appeared to her to be a luxury of selfishness and violence. Fred had settled on Calender as a convenient place to spend their honeymoon, since they could be "from the world away," or if they wished to see humanity, every train and every coach brought its load of tourists to their hotel door. This was a quiet but pleasant place, and when Fred proposed going round the Trossachs with a tourist coach, "I'm afraid you'll tire of me if you never see any one else," he remarked on making the proposal.

"Are you fishing for a compliment, Fred?" said his wife, with more of her old spirit than she had exhibited of late.

"Oh, no, my dear," said he mockingly.

"What a goose you are, Fred," she said, coming close to him.

"And what a darling little wife you are," he said, taking her round the waist.

Netta Oswald was indeed a very charming little wife. She was a pretty blonde, with a sweet, clinging nature, and frank, winning ways. Fred, on the other hand, had no beauty to recommend him, but his face was pleasant, though ordinarily he looked rather serious and sedate for his years. He was of the middle height and strongly made. Their places were taken on the coach, and soon they were bowling along the base of Ben Ledi, and by the side of Loch Venchoir. Fred thought he had never seen his wife in better spirits, and he was very glad that he had made the proposal. The company was mainly composed of Americans and English, a few, however, being from Edinburgh and Glasgow. Netta chatted to nearly the whole of them, and was able from her fortnight's experience of the country to point out several of the sights to her less enlightened companions.

"Fred, look," she cried at a turn of the road, "at the coach coming to meet us."

"What about it, my dear?" said Fred.

"Don't you observe the stout old woman on the box-seat? She looks like an apple-woman or something of the kind; she's tipsy, too."

"She must not get a good price for her apples to afford herself a ride on the coach," said Fred, laughing.

"My, how she stared at me!" said Netta, as the coaches passed each other.

"Yes; she certainly looked very eager to get to the coach."

"Yes," said Fred, bursting into a laugh, in which he was joined by his fellow-passengers.

"This is the place where twines the path, is it not?" said Netta to the coachman, anxious to divert attention from herself.

"Yes, this is it," he answered; and then all the passengers began to try how much they could remember of Scott's description of the scene in the "Lady of the Lake."

"What are you so thoughtful for, Fred?" said his wife.

"I'm still wondering what that tipsy woman stared at you for."

"Why, Fred, may no one stare at me but you?"

"But it was not a common stare, my dear; she seemed startled."

"She was tipsy," said Netta.

"Perhaps that was it," he said, gazing thoughtfully at his wife; and then, as if he had hit it, "Perhaps it was your being a bride and in mourning."

"O Fred!" she replied with a sob, "I forgot. Poor papa!"

Netta Oswald was a very kind, but her recent bereavement was recalled to Netta, and would not again be banished, and so the rest of the day was sad and uncomfortable. When they got to the hotel again they found that a tipsy woman like her they saw on the coach had been inquiring for them.

"The water," said Fred, "and would hardly go away."

"Who can she be, Fred?"

"I can't tell, Netta," he lightly answered.

But he felt very anxious nevertheless, for the memory of the old, kindly, but hard with her father came clearly back to him and made him ill at ease.

CHAPTER III.

"Here's that woman back again, sir," said the waiter, as he brought in breakfast.

"Wants to see you, sir, and won't go away."

"Is she sober?"

"Yes, sir."

"I'll suppose I had better see what she wants."

"Why need you go, Fred?" said his wife, who could not know her? "Some impudent beggar, likely."

"I'll make short work of her, if that's the way of it," said he, as he left the room. He had spoken lightly, still Netta did not like his look. The woman was waiting patiently at the door.

"What do you want with me?" said Oswald.

"Are you Mr. Oswald?"

"Yes."

"I can't tell you here," she replied, glancing at the waiter.

"Is there any one in the coffee-room?" said Oswald to the waiter.

"Quite good, sir, if you please."

"To come to the point at once," said the woman when the waiter had retired, "I am your wife's mother, and I have called to see what kind of a son-in-law I've got."

Fred felt as if he would choke. His words were confirmed. He instinctively knew she was speaking the truth, and that it was Netta's mother.

"I am glad to see that you believe me," she said, noticing his confusion; "it will save trouble, you know."

"I shall require proof," said Fred, making an effort.

"You, at any rate knew of my existence," said the woman.

"I knew that Mr. Battersey's wife had run away from him while Netta was a child," he answered.

"Yes, I did run away; more fool!"

"And what do you want now?" he asked.

"Want? I want money! I want to regain something of what I have lost! I know my rights, and I'll have them," she said fiercely.

"What rights have you? You run away from your rights as well as from your duty."

"What! don't you know that poor Battersey, instead of suing for a divorce, to which he was entitled, simply ran away and hid himself in Glasgow? Had I known where he was, he would have made up his mind long ago. Now I am his widow, entitled to a fair share of what he left; and I'll have it, too!"

"I would not give much for your chance of success," said Fred; "but I prefer to arrange with you quietly if I can. Consider your daughter; she is in infancy, and round her memory she has twined all her purest thoughts and aspirations. Would you like to go before her now and say, 'Here am I, your mother, and this is my history?'"

"I don't see that I need consider her at all at once. I would consider her later. What had she but an infant when I saw her last?"

"Have you not enough feeling left to hope that she will never know that you are her mother?" said Fred indignantly.

"And your husband, did you not wrong him enough?"

"Did he not wrong me?" she replied. "I might have married again, had he done as others do; but I was cast off, and I took to the bottle, and when I got a chance to get away, I did not keep it."

"And now I sell apples for my living—I, who was born and bred a better lady than any of your Glasgow dames whose carriage wheels have so often cast up the mud in my face."

Fred saw that he must endeavor to come to terms with this woman. "I shall be quite willing to give enough to keep you in comfort," he said, "but to talk of your rights is ridiculous. It is many years since you left your husband, and most of that time you have been apparently an outcast. How will you prove your case?"

"That is my business," she said.

"Well," said Fred, "I can give you fifteen pounds just now, and I will see you when I come to Glasgow. Perhaps we may manage to come to terms. But, remember, the least hint to my wife, or to any one else, and you may try your worst."

"I suppose Battersey made you promise not to tell her about her mother," said she with a demonic sneer.

"Yes, I promised to try and keep the disgraceful truth from her, but I rather glad to tell her now than admit your claim to more than I shall see fit to give you."

"I'll take the fifteen pounds just now, said Mrs. Battersey, and do nothing till I see you again," for she seemed pleased to know that her daughter thought well of her.

"I shall be in Glasgow next week," said Fred, "and will arrange with you then."

"You had better not forget," she said as she took the money.

"I'll not forget," replied Fred as he opened the door, "and I hope that you will keep your disgraceful secret to yourself."

Netta was passing upstairs just at this moment, and her heart seemed to stop beating when she heard her husband's words. What could they mean?

Fred waited at the door till Mrs. Battersey was out of sight, then, seizing his hat, he set out to find the woman who had told him that he could not face his wife yet, he was so upset.

Mr. Battersey had told him his sad story, and made him promise to keep from Netta her mother's history.

Mr. Battersey having no real relations, he set out to find the woman who had told him that he could not face his wife yet, he was so upset.

Netta watched her husband from the door, and saw him go, and then she sat down to think what it all could mean. Fred had been in the city ever since they saw that woman on the coach, and there was a disgraceful secret. Surely he would explain all to her when he came in. If not, should she ask him?

No, Fred ought to tell her. He had no business to keep a secret from his wife. He was a disgraceful secret; what could it be?

When Fred came in he did not say anything about his strange visitor. Netta, however, did not let it go, and there the matter ended.

In the evening, the waiter, as usual, brought up the bill, which they settled weekly.

"Here's the bill, Fred," said Netta.

"I'll need to write for money, my dear; tell him to let it run another week."

"He gave that woman money," thought Netta; "he changed a twenty-pound note this morning."

CHAPTER IV.

Fred Oswald was strangely preoccupied during the rest of their stay at Calender. Netta correctly attributed it to the visit of the apple-woman, and resented it. The idea of her husband having a secret with such a person was very bitter to her, and so a coyness sprang up between them. He did not, however, notice it, so busy was he with his own thoughts, and devising a way for providing an allowance for Mrs. Battersey without his wife knowing anything of it. He was a comparatively poor man, though his wife was rich, and he could not readily hit on any way out of his difficulty.

After they went home to Ravenscraig Hall he had another interview with the apple-woman, which took place at his office, the result being that he felt quite satisfied that she was Netta's mother.

"Well, what kind of an allowance are you going to make me?" said Fred.

"An allowance," said Fred, "though Netta is, but I'll try and let you have twenty pounds a month."

"Twenty pounds a month!" she exclaimed, scornfully.

"I can't see my way to make it any more in the meantime," he said.

"Well, I won't take it; I'll rather take a chance of justice."

"Remember, I was nearly twenty years ago," he said, "a court of justice would not be so easily swayed as I have been as to your identity. No one would recognize you now; there are no old servants who could remember you."

"Never you mind my case," she said; "I'll look after that."

"I shall require proof," said Fred, making an effort.

"You, at any rate knew of my existence," said the woman.

"I knew that Mr. Battersey's wife had run away from him while Netta was a child," he answered.

"Yes, I did run away; more fool!"

"And what do you want now?" he asked.

"Want? I want money! I want to regain something of what I have lost! I know my rights, and I'll have them," she said fiercely.

"What rights have you? You run away from your rights as well as from your duty."

"What! don't you know that poor Battersey, instead of suing for a divorce, to which he was entitled, simply ran away and hid himself in Glasgow? Had I known where he was, he would have made up his mind long ago. Now I am his widow, entitled to a fair share of what he left; and I'll have it, too!"

"I would not give much for your chance of success," said Fred; "but I prefer to arrange with you quietly if I can. Consider your daughter; she is in infancy, and round her memory she has twined all her purest thoughts and aspirations. Would you like to go before her now and say, 'Here am I, your mother, and this is my history?'"

"I don't see that I need consider her at all at once. I would consider her later. What had she but an infant when I saw her last?"

she longed to throw her arms around her husband, and ask him what it all meant, but pride forbade. He ought not to treat her so. There should be no secrets between man and wife; and in her distress and perplexity she sobbed herself to sleep on the sofa.

After he had paid two or three instalments, Mr. Oswald found it absolutely impossible to continue the payments without appealing to his wife for funds. Netta wondered at his request, because he always spoke of his business as doing well and increasing. She would have had him take all her money and have up his profession, for she had more than enough for both. But he could not bear the idea of living idly on his wife's money, so he kept strictly to her father's settlement.

The end of the sixth month drew near, and he had no money for Mrs. Battersey. It was after dinner, for she had more than enough for both. But he could not bear the idea of living idly on his wife's money, so he kept strictly to her father's settlement.

"I'm much in need of £40, Netta," he said, when she stopped playing.

"Very well, Fred; where's my cheque-book?"

"I'll bring it, my dear."

"Surely your business is not getting on very well," she said, as she signed the cheque.

"Oh, yes, it's doing very well; I got a new client yesterday," he said.

Netta had been so unkind of late that she had made up her mind to give him a chance to expiate.

"How are you always so hard up?" she continued, as she came to the desk.

"I'll tell you, Fred, is it that apple-woman who gets all your money?"

"What apple-woman?" he said, his face flushing.

"O Fred!" she said, bursting into tears, "you know well enough. Tell me what is between you and that woman."

"I think it is very unkind of you to ask me to tell you that," he said, "I am sufficiently unpleasant for a man to have to ask money from his wife, without a scene like this being thrown into the bargain."

Netta rose at once, angry her eyes, and left the room. Fred, angry with himself and the whole concern, felt tempted to let his promise go and tell her all. It was only for a moment, however; he lighted a cigar instead and went out for a walk. The next day was Sunday. Netta was very distant in her manner to him. She was the day after next, and it was with a sense of relief that next morning he set out for the office. Here he found he had forgotten the cheque. "It won't matter," he thought, "I can send it on by the evening post."

He addressed to him, she had filled all the forms in his favor, signed them, and left the amounts blank.

Fred stood some moments speechless, then rang the bell furiously and ordered out the carriage.

"O Fred!" said Mrs. Oswald, "I asked her maid."

"About half-past ten, and has not since returned."

Fred was too late for the bank. He tried all the railway stations, but could find no trace of his wife. Bitterly he cursed his blindness, and finally, as for his mother-in-law, he resolved to have nothing more to do with her in any way whatever. What could happen compared to this? And all night long he paced the floor in sorrow.

CHAPTER V.

Mrs. Oswald had left no trace of her whereabouts; all efforts to track her were unavailing. The number of the notes she drew was known. One of them, a fifty, was paid in the same afternoon at a large retail firm. Mrs. Oswald was in the habit of dealing with. She had bought some trifles, and had got change. She had got ten pounds in gold from the bank besides. Fred, in his despair, tried the detective force and the agony column of all the newspapers without success.

Mrs. Oswald, as he received her news, was again. She wrote and wrote again, but Fred never opened her letters. He threw them into the fire and pressed them down among the hot coal with his foot.

Toward the end of the month Mrs. Battersey died in person.

"I wish you and your bargain at the devil," replied Oswald savagely.

"Oh, sir, well, well, to-day, sir. At the devil, indeed! I'll see about that, sir."

She was dressed as a lady, and looked like one; very pale and changed with age, but her eyes were bright and her manner was once more that of an angry street hawk.

"Stop a minute," said Fred as she opened the door. She paused. "Perhaps you had better know that my wife has run away," he continued.

"Run away! Who with?"

"With no one."

"What the deuce has she run away for, then?"

"Because I kept your secret from her. I had been told about the late matter since you came to Calender, and I, great idiot, had not the least suspicion of it."

"Oh, that was it, was it?" said Mrs. Battersey, and winked knowingly. "Very deep you are, no doubt," and opening the door she walked out.

"Yes, yes, Mr. Oswald," she muttered as she went down stairs, "so you have sent your wife away, and wish to cheat me, have you? But I'll keep an eye on you!"

Another month dragged slowly by, and Fred was beginning to despair slowly of ever finding his wife. No notice was taken of his appeals in the newspapers, but the detectives kept him busy hunting up false clues. Grief and anxiety had worn him to a shadow. He was so often disappointed that he almost decided to rest awhile and trust to time or chance. Mrs. Battersey, impressed with the idea that it was part of some deep design to cheat her out of her allowance, followed him everywhere. Apparently she had not much confidence in law or in her ability to make good her claims, for she made no sign of taking any action.

One day a detective announced that he believed he had got the right clue at last, and that the young lady was at Conishead Priory Hydropathic.

Fred, despite his resolutions to go no more wild goose chasing, felt bound to satisfy himself, and took the evening train for Carlisle, while Mrs. Battersey, unseen, took her place in a first-class train behind him, and as the train steamed out of the station congratulated herself on being at last on the right track.

There was a terrible collision that night. The Southern express was completely wrecked. Fred was badly injured about the head and shoulders. When clear of the wreck he managed to stagger along the line for a few paces, and when he beheld Mrs. Battersey lying among the dead he swooned away.

CHAPTER VI.

When Netta Oswald left home she simply went to the east end of Glasgow, and took a quiet but respectable lodging. She felt very frightened and miserable at the decision she had taken. Twice she turned to go back, but always came back, for Fred really loved her, she thought, "if Fred really loved me as I love him he would not keep a secret from me which he shared with such a woman."

After a few weeks she felt her time hang so heavy that she looked about for something to do, and seeing an advertisement for a day nurse and companion for an old lady, she applied for and got the situation. The old lady was infirm, and required constant attention. But though the work was hard and she did not require the salary, Netta felt that it was better for her than sitting all day brooding over her troubles. Part of her work, and not the least tiresome, was to read the newspapers to the old dame, and listen to her comments. It was while thus engaged that she read of the accident and saw her husband's name on the list of the severely wounded. The words seemed to swim before her eyes, and she felt fainting on the floor. The lady in terror nearly broke the bell-rope.

BOOKS AND MAGAZINES.

POEMS OF HENRY C. HAYDEN.

Mr. Henry C. Hayden has brought together in a beautifully printed and bound volume a score or more of lyrics, songs, and domestic pieces, which have been floating through the newspapers for the past half dozen years, and presents them to the public, under the modest title of "Poems." Many of them are charming bits of verse, dealing with the home and domestic affections. Some of them are peculiarly tender and pathetic, as the one entitled

THREE INSTEAD OF FOUR.

I lay the table as I did last year,
And place the chairs around as before;
Oh! if I only could hold back the year,
And they not see it—three instead of four!

They now are coming in their youthful glee;
I'll sit in my face a little by the door;
They may not notice any change in me
When they are passing—three instead of four.

I look around, but do not see them all
As on Thanksgiving Day a year ago;
One loving, struggling, tear, I let it fall,
When a sweet spirit voice comes whispering low.

I listen, heedless of the others near,
Thanking my Father for all mercies given.
I wonder if my darling saw that year?
It is not very far from earth to heaven.

I would not call him from the other shore
To sit beside me at the feast tonight;
It only seemed but three instead of four,
When for a moment God had hid the light.

Another entitled "Unforgotten," will appeal directly to many hasty but kind-hearted readers, and from it we quote the following:

I sat in my unkind word. My boy looked up Into my face, half-angry, half-afraid;
His hand upon my arm he quickly laid
But did not speak; it was a bitter cup.

His look, so strange and wild, I'll never forget—
I struggled hard to say a kindly word;
But my proud will forlornly and soon I heard
His hurried footsteps—ah! I hear them yet!

I've borne the burden of that word for years;
I'd give the world if it were mine to give;
If my dead boy could hear me now, I'd say "Forgive,"
Oh, pity me, ye mothers, in my tears!

The charm of Mr. Hayden's verse lies in its naturalness and simplicity, the lines seem to sing themselves without any striving after effect or attempt at display. The book will be heartily appreciated by the author's friends, who will be glad to have the poems in such handsome shape. The volume is dedicated to the author's wife, and contains handsome steel portrait by F. T. Stuart of Newton. The book has this charming introduction:

"Along the pathway of a busy life
I've gathered here and there a modest flower;
Together tied them in a leisure hour,
If bloom or beauty in the gathering hour
Have sufficed from my touch, perchance
You'll find me here—
He should have left them blooming by the way."

TWO FINE HOLIDAY BOOKS.

Ticknor & Co. have issued for the holidays two of the popular old songs with beautiful illustrations. One is "My Old Kentucky Home," and the other "The Swane River." Mr. Chas. Copeland has illustrated them with full page pictures, to which Mrs. Mary Hallcock Foote contributes one touching, sorrowful figure of a negro girl sitting by an old well. The illustrations are charming, every detail has been carefully studied; the flowers are southern flowers, the trees are southern trees and every touch is southern. The books will have a genuine historic value, as they represent scenes of a life that has now gone by, and they picture them with such a sympathetic spirit and so artistically that they will appeal to all who have heard the songs of Stephen C. Foster, and those who have not are very few. Ticknor & Co. Publishers. Price $1.50.

THE ATLANTIC.

"A Lady of the Old School" is the opening paper in the November number of the Atlantic Monthly. It is a most charming resume of Mrs. Susan Lesley's "Recollections" of her mother, Mrs. Lyman, of Northampton, and of the society which she gathered around her. Miss Jewett has a delightful sketch of a New England by-way called "The Landscape Chamber," a curious story, full of suggestions. Percival Lowell continues his series of articles, "The Soul of the Far East," by a paper on "Oriental Art," and John Fiske has another of his clear and readable studies in American History, this time devoted to an account of the adoption of the Constitution—a very timely topic. Mr. Philip Gilbert Hamerton, in the sixth paper of his "French and English" series, considers "Variety in the Indulgence of Sense as a result of individuality," and shows the fallacy of attributing certain defects often met with in a foreign country to all its inhabitants. A careful description of the "Red Cross" society and its works is given by Helen H. S. Thompson, and Bradford Torrey has a pleasant paper on "An Old Bird's Nest." "History Points at Fort George Island" are depicted by S. G. W. Benjamin. A paper on "Girl Novelists of the Time," three poems of merit, and the serials by Mrs. Oliphant and Mr. Aldrich, and by Mr. Crawford, close a number of more than usual worth. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston.

THE WIDE-AWAKE.

The November Wide-Awake (Boston, D. Lothrop & Co.) is one of those brilliant, comprehensive numbers that has something for everybody. A delightful graphic paper by Jessie Benton Fremont relates several visits to Hans Christian Andersen in Copenhagen, and it is full of incident and anecdote. "The Luck of Edenhall," an interesting paper by Amanda B. Harris, filled with all manner of legend concerning the fairy drinking glass of the Musgraves. Margaret Sidney's beautiful series of illustrated papers on "Concord; Her Highways and By-ways" closes in this number, and it is hoped it may soon be published in book form. The very spirit of quaint, historic Concord is caught and reflected in these papers. Other delightful stories and poems are by Edward Payne, Mrs. Davis, Mrs. A. D. Whitney, Miss Gurney, Willis Boyd Allen and others. Serial stories, "My Uncle Florimond," by Sidney Lusk, and "Those Cousins," by Mrs. John Sherwood, open in the next (December) number.

THE CURIO.

The Curio, (New York, R. W. Wright, No. 6 Astor place), the new illustrated magazine devoted to genealogy and biography, heraldry and book-plates, coins and autographs, rare books and works of art, "Old Furniture and Plate," and other relics, appears with its second number, which has a frontispiece from Benvenuto Cellini, with a sonnet by Cellini translated by J. N. Robert Feary; the second part of Edgar Faucher's story of "The Dominick Diamonds," and other papers on "Curiosities of Criticism," "The Foster Pedigree," "American Book-Plates and Engravers," and many others of interest.

ST. NICHOLAS.

In the St. Nicholas magazine for November is one of Miss Alcott's ever-popular stories, "Pansies," and additional proof of the writer's popularity is given in a sketch called "How Marie Obtained Miss Alcott's Autograph," which tells how an ingenious boy got the longed-for name without any help from the owner. Mrs. Frechette contributes a story, and among more solid articles is one of great interest on Lepage, the French peasant and painter. The "Joan of Arc" is not reproduced in the cuts, but an exceedingly interesting portrait of Lepage himself is given. There is, of course, the usual attractive variety of story, sketch and jingle.

OVERLAND MONTHLY.

The Overland Monthly (San Francisco, Cal., the Overland Monthly Company) opens its October number with a paper on "Japanese Homes and Temples," by H. H. Berger, followed by one on "Japanese Ghost Myths," by F. Warrington Eastlake. These myths are eerie and thrilling in the extreme and are strangely like the old German and Aryan folklore. The number is strong in fiction, including two good short stories, "The Demon of the Pine Hills" and "A Shadow of Gold." The poetry and other features are of the best literary quality.

LITERARY NOTES.

The two latest volumes in Ticknor's paper series are Miss Blanche Willis Howard's "Aunt Serena," a book which, though below the very high level of the same author's "Guenin," has yet the charm which is characteristic of all her work, and that much talked of spiritualistic novel, "Miss Ludington's Sister," by Mr. Edward Bellamy.

An announcement of more than ordinary interest is that of Mr. Henry James's forthcoming serial novel in the Atlantic Monthly. Another continued story in the magazine next year will be Mr. Edward H. House's "Yone Santo, a Child of Japan." Mr. House spent many years in Japan and has already contrived one charming Japanese story, "The Sacred Flame of Torii Ji," to Scribner's Magazine.

The article on Physical Training, which Dr. Sargent contributes to Scribner's for November is very fully illustrated from instantaneous photographs of experts in the various branches of athletics, including the portraits of sprinters, lacrosse players, long distance runners, wrestlers, foot-ball, and base-ball players who have won enviable records at Harvard and Yale in recent years.

Dr. Henry M. Field describes in Scribner's Magazine for November a recent visit which he made to the strange tribe in Northern Algeria, known as the "Kabyles," a warlike race inhabiting a very mountainous region, and preserving peculiar traits and institutions.

Ex-Governor John D. Long of Massachusetts will have an article in the Forum for November on "The Use and Abuse of the Veto Power," referring especially to President Cleveland's vetoes.

"A Tough Old Macaw."

The London correspondent of the Philadelphia Press relates an amusing story of that still brilliant old lady, Mrs. Proctor, widow of "Barry Cornwall," the author. Oliver Wendell Holmes visited her during his recent stay in London and afterward described her truthfully, yet unflatteringly, as being "tough as an old macaw." Says the correspondent:

With fire in her eye, the grand old lady, when she had finished the article, drove at once to the residence of our Minister to the court of St. James. It happened to be Mrs. Phelps' day for receiving, but that lady had scarcely time to greet her visitor before the latter exclaimed: "Well, madam, and what do you think of your Wendell Holmes now? He put me down as a tough old macaw! The impudence of it! Pray, do you have no old ladies in your country, that he makes such a to-do over one?"

"Oh yes," said Mrs. Phelps, naturally taking back at this sudden onslaught; "we have a good many."

"And what do they do, please, that they are never heard of?" demanded the octogenarian Londoness, with some asperity.

"Why, they generally stay at home and look after the cooking," (?) was the dreadful rejoinder.

And no one knows to this day whether Mrs. Phelps meant to be dreadful or only literal.

Miscellaneous.

We may thank Ah Sin for one slang phrase which has fastened itself in the current speech of the country. "All the same" makes a very fair substitute for "notwithstanding." It seems to take three words, or a combination of three words, to convey the meaning intended.

—Philadelphia Record.

"I say, pa, listen: 'When freedom from her mountain height unfurled her banner to the air.' What do you call freedom 'her' for?" queried the innocent little boy, who was learning the piece to speak at school. "You are too young to understand. Wait till you get married, my son."—Scranton Truth.

A friend in need: First undertaker—"Come around to my house tonight." Second undertaker—"I would, but I have an engagement." "Business?" "No. I promised a lady friend of mine to call this evening and try to cheer up her husband." "Sick?" "No, he's a funny man on a newspaper."—Omaha World.

—But if the water of Quebec is peculiar, says W. H. H. Murray, the soup of the country—not the hotel soup, but the real, genuine "habitant" soup is delicious. Why can't Americans make soup? Our soups are thin, a dash of flavor in a spray of water, or else they are heavy, sluggish, stagnant. But here, the farmers' wives, and market women even, make soups that are as fresh as clover and as buoyant as champagne. The flavoring of some of these country made soups is marvelous. There will often be several different flavors in your dish, and all well blended, a harmony of taste to the tongue. It makes an American wiser and better to eat such a soup. It tones up his moral nature. It is what makes our high-living cashiers prefer Canada to suicide.

List of New Books.

- Biagatti, Gitta. The Lord's Lay. 93.351
Muhini M. Chatterji, 1887.
This is a selection from the Brahmanical Scripures, gathered and translated by the interesting scholar from India, who has been spending some time in Boston, and intended by him to show the harmony between their instructions and those of the Christian Scriptures and the unity of all truth.
- Craig, D. M. M. Unknown Country. 36.232
A charming, illustrated description of portions of Northern Ireland, by one whose late death has been widely lamented.
- Cox, S. S. Isles of the Princes, or Pleasures of Prinkipo. 33.378
Our late Minister to Constantinople describes in a very lively manner the scenery and population of a small archipelago in the sea of Marmora, about twenty miles south of Constantinople, sometimes called "The Isles of Greece," and still peopled with a Greek population. A writer in "The American" says, "the chief impression gathered from his entertaining volume is that of the curious vitality of Greek thought, religion and manners after revolutions, which have shaken the earth."
- Hancock, W. S. By his wife. Reminiscences of an Uncle. 95.350
This volume is rather an affectionate tribute to the memory of her noble husband, then an extended history of his long and varied career, although the chief incidents are clearly stated. The volume is handsomely illustrated.
- Howells, W. D. Modern Italian Poets; Ezzandi and Verri. 55.304
This volume is a rich and valuable contribution to the study of modern Italian literature, in its biographical sketches, its criticisms and generous quotations.
- Jackson, T. G. M. A. F. S. S. Dalmatia. The Quarnero and Istria. 3 vols. 105.234
This is an elaborate and valuable medieval and modern history of the portion of Europe about which the great powers are now in anxious discussion, and over which a cloud of painful uncertainty rests. The volumes are very interesting and fluently illustrated.
- Stockton, F. R. Hundredth Man. 65.551
A very characteristic and amusing fiction; a pursuit of that fabled "one man in a hundred." He is found quite near at home.
- Stone, J. S. Heart of Merrie England. 33.357
A pleasantly written sketch of a trip over quite familiar, but always interesting ground.
- Timbs, J. Curiousities of London. 75.201
A stout volume of nearly 900 pages; a full handbook of the great city, giving all its special sights and history of historical interest, with illustrations.
- Washburne, E. B. Recollections of a Minister to France, 1869-77. 75.203
Our late Minister in Paris kept a full diary of the stirring events in the last years of Napoleon III., during the Franco-German war, and the reign of disorder and anarchy in the city. This interesting record is finely published and illustrated in these volumes.
- Watson, J. Photographic Instructor. 107.232
An excellent text book in this very serviceable art.
- Welcome, H. S. Story of Maelakahla. 72.266
A remarkable story of one of the efforts in modern times to Christianize and civilize a tribe of savage Indians.
- Wilde, F. S. Lady. Ancient Legends. 53.319
These interesting volumes have gathered up, and presented in an attractive form, the quaint superstitions and curious folk lore of Ireland in the olden time.

—An ingenious gentleman who has no fondness for hard work is travelling through Fulton county selling "a valuable preparation" warranted to polish tinware. It is simply wood ash, which he begs at the farmhouses along his route. All he does is to sift it and put it in tin boxes.—Altoona Tribune.

—A gentleman got on a cable car yesterday that had made one of the periodical something-the-matter-with-the-grip stops. He remained on the platform and the conductor asked for his fare. "No, sir," said the would-be passenger; "I've been there before. I'll wait till you get started. No starton-pay!"—Philadelphia Press.

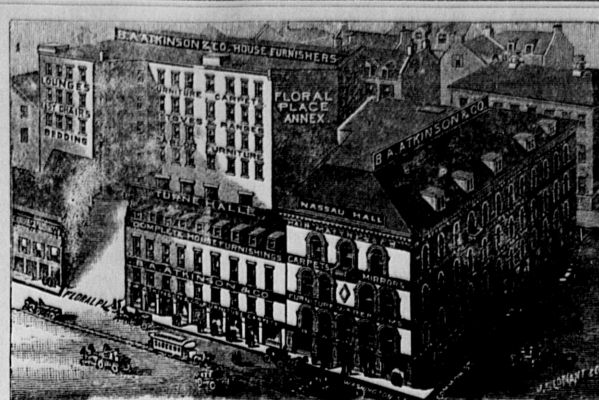

—Midnight Burglar (sternly)—"Give me your watch." Humorous Mr. Poggs—"Certainly, sir. Where you are; it's a Waterbury." Burglar (recoiling)—"Great Heavens, man! do you take me for an organ grinder?"

—Mistress (to servant)—"Did you tell those ladies at the door that I was not at home?" Servant—"Yis, mum." Mistress—What did they say? Servant—"How fortin'!"

—Biting Noise
In the ears, sometimes a roaring, buzzing sound, are caused by catarrh, that exceedingly disagreeable and very common disease. Loss of smell or hearing also result from catarrh. Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier, is a peculiarly successful remedy for this disease, which it cures by purifying the blood. If you suffer from catarrh, try Hood's Sarsaparilla, the peculiar medicine.

For three weeks I was suffering from a severe cold in my head, accompanied by a pain in the temples. I tried some of the many catarrh remedies without any relief. Ely's Cream Balm was recommended to me. After only six applications of the Balm every trace of my cold was removed. Henry C. Clark, 1st Division, New York Appraisers Office.

What a Pity that so many otherwise attractive, polite, and particular people, who are friends by the soul and disreputable, do of their breath; it is usually caused by the disordered digestion, and can be corrected by removing the cause, by using that pure medicine, Sulphur Bitters.—Health Magazine.
